4 Chiefs Give Pledge On Eve of Armistice; President to Attend Arlington Rites Today

Post Staff Writer

Commanders of the four leading World War veterans' organizations broke bread together yesterday and pledged themselves and their orders to actively strive for peace.

Meeting on the eve of Armistice Day, the leaders of the men who laid down their arms in victory 21 years ago, promised in the name of their fallen comrades to take the lead in efforts to keep America out of the war.

The meeting—at a luncheon of the Military Order of the World War—set the stage for today's observance. Highlight of the day will come at 11 a. m. when President Roosevelt places a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington.

Immediately afterward, the American Legion will hold memorial services in the amphitheater at Arlington. Acting Navy Secretary Edison will make the principal address. Other services will be held during the day at the District War Memorial in Potomac Park, at the Washington Cathedral and the Capitol.

Two-Ocean Navy Urged

Two of the veteran leaders at yesterday's meeting—Otis N. Brown, national commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Lieut. Comdr. Charles A. Mills, commander of the Military Order of the World War, urged that the United States build a "two-ocean" Navy, as the best means of assuring peace.

"It's going to cost a lot of money," Brown declared, "but we must educate the people as to its need. Adequate defense is an even greater issue than neutrality, for if we have what it takes to stand them off, it does not matter so much what steps are taken on neutrality. No one will dare attack us."

National Commander Raymond J. Kelly of the American Legion said that America's chief need was a revival of patriotism. He deplored the attitude of those who criticize veterans as "flag-wavers," and declared that forces were at work to disparage patriotism in the young.

Kelly Favors Isolation

"I say, thank God there are men with the courage to wave the flag when it has become such an unpopular thing," he added.

Urging that the United States keep out of Europe's troubles, Kelly took issue with those who object to celebrating Armistice Day because it is no longer "a symbol of the end of war."

"In justice to our fallen and disabled comrades," he declared, "We should celebrate the day because it ended forever American participation in the flaming aches of Europe."

Commander Mills urged the expansion of the Army to its full peace-time limit, besides doubling the Navy as the best means to keep America at peace. The nation should also look to internal dangers, he said, and added:

"We are at last apparently realizing what the real menace to this nation is. The country is following the leadership of the veterans to see that the Bridges, Browders and Kuhns are handled as they deserve."

"Guinea Pigs of Last War"

National Commander Lewis J. Murphy, of the Disabled American Veterans, said that the "guinea pigs of the last war," as he described the members of his order, "do not want to see our sons sacrificed unless it is absolutely necessary to preserve our ideals."

Those present at the luncheon included Maj. Gen. Peter C. Harris, wartime adjutant general of the Army; Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson, Brig.

Woman Named as Kuhn's Trial On Charges of Theft Begins

State Declares His Interest in Her Was 'Keenly Sentimental'

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 10.—An effort to show that a "keenly sentimental" interest in a woman was connected with Fritz Kuhn's alleged theft of money from his pro-Nazi German-American Bund was begun today in the trial of the stout, well-tailored bundfuehrer for grand larceny.

While Assistant District Attorney Herman McCarthy, in his opening address to the jury, thus projected his case, Kuhn's counsel, Peter L. F. Sabatino, set up this two-fold defense:

That the bundsman was the victim of "persecution"—of a prosecution brought by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey for "political motives."

That Kuhn was "the absolute boss of the funds collected" (by the Bund), and that it could be shown that "no crimes were committed."

An early prosecution witness, Gustave Elmer, the Bund's national organizer, supported this theory at least in part.

Dope Peddlers' Paradise

U. S. Narcotics Chief For Stern Penalties

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

In several countries, including the United States, where narcotic addiction has been reduced at least 50 per cent, much of the credit is given to stern laws and strong penalties, Harry J. Anslinger, commissioner of narcotics, said yesterday.

"The conclusion which has been constantly stressed by many international experts at meetings of the Opium Advisory Committee of the League of Nations is that one of the most important weapons in suppressing abuse is the imposition of adequate penalties," said the man who not only directs internal drug control but assists in regulation of the international traffic.

Anslinger, however, no more believes in going too harshly upon the narcotics violator than he does in coddling him. Let each defendant be judged upon his crime and his record. Extend probation to the addict, if he is not a peddler, on condition that he enter a hospital for treatment. If he has been found guilty of selling drugs, send him to prison, not only as punishment and exemplary discipline, but in protection of society.

Addicts Seek a Cure When Deprived of Source

That, in brief, is the position of the narcotics commissioner.

"We have in recent years noted a sharp decline in drug trafficking and addiction in practically all sections of the country," he continued. "These results could not have been obtained without heavy penalties. In one large State a campaign was waged against the traffic which grew up after a long series of lenient sentences. The situation in that State improved radically when a firm hand was used in penalties.

"In many cities the traffic has been reduced to a minimum. Addicts throughout the country are experiencing so much difficulty in obtaining drugs and the price is so prohibitive that they have been forced to resort to cures for their addiction.

"While we have noted what might be considered an improvement in that there has been a marked rise in the degree of adulteration of the drug on the Washington market, nevertheless a substantial traffic in this weakened drug continues."

Patrons of dope peddlers in the Capital might note, incidentally, that the stuff they are buying—and paying for—as "genuine heroin" is less than 10 per cent pure. Just as in prohibition days, when liquor "right off the boat" was made in someone's bathtub and "cut" many times before reaching the consumer, the "real stuff" being peddled to addicts here today is mixed pretty thin.

Adequate Punishment Is Commissioner's Answer

"In many large cities," said Anslinger, "where the illicit traffic is at a minimum, drug addicts are applying for admission to the United States Public Health Service Hospital at Lexington, Ky., for cures.

"This is an indication that the traffic largely has been suppressed. We have not seen any such signs in Washington.

"We have enjoyed excellent cooperation from the District attorney's office, which vigorously prosecutes our cases, and the Metropolitan police have done splendid work in apprehending traffickers."

Six narcotics violators were sentenced yesterday in District Court, four by Justice Gordon and two by Justice O'Donoghue. Two left Justice Gordon's court on probation. The third received one to two years on each of two counts and a $50 fine, the sentences to run concurrently. The fourth drew the same penalty, with the provision that his term should be served concurrently with a term meted out in a previous narcotics case against him.

The two prisoners brought before Justice O'Donoghue received identical sentences, four months to two years in prison and a $100 fine each.

Twenty-four hours earlier a defendant entered the court in Baltimore of Federal Judge William C. Coleman to be sentenced for violating the drug laws. The man had been convicted of selling 1¾ grains of heroin, $2 worth.

He was sentenced to four and one-half years in prison.

Baltimore, as has been noted here before, has only a fraction of the illicit dope traffic that the Nation's Capital boasts, though it is larger in size, has a comparably large colored population and is a seaport city.

The answer, say Anslinger and other law enforcement officials, is simple. It is—adequate punishment.

Chest Drive's First 3 Days Net $687,610

No Armistice Today In Campaign to Raise $2,000,000 for Aid, Volunters Pledge

Washington's volunteer Community Chest solicitors pledged yesterday that there would be no armistice today in their drive to reach the $2,000,000 goal, as the first three days' campaign brought in $687,610.73.

The volunteers promised to put into practice General Chairman Chauncey G. Parker's appeal to "keep plugging."

The intensive efforts of the workers have brought gifts from 42,163 Washingtonians, making 34.38 per cent of the $2,000,000 necessary to carry on the District program to meet human needs in 1940.

Monday Next Report Day

Parker warned, however, that results achieved in the first three days might represent a spurt of enthusiasm, emphasizing that "the middle days are the days in which campaigns are made, and Monday, November 13, the next noon report day, will tell a great deal."

Government Unit campaign forces were reported by J. Austin Latimer as having reached a total of 35,095 pledges for $270,635.40, or 35.38 per cent of the unit quota of $765,000. It was pointed out by Chest Director Herbert L. Willett, jr., that this report brought the unit's three-day record $60,000 ahead of last year on the same day, but only 9 per cent ahead in number of gifts, indicating the necessity for "better average gifts" from Government givers.

Group Unit, with Herbert Rich, chairman of Area III, reporting, yesterday reached a total of 3,369 pledges for the sum of $83,416.50, or 18.41 per cent of the unit quota of $453,000. According to Willett, although this three-day report indicates a better than average sized gift, there are but half as many pledges and 4 per cent less than the total amount of money which the Group Unit had achieved on the third day in last year's campaign.

Postoffice Ahead

Metropolitan Unit, as announced by Edward S. Pardoe, vice chairman of the unit, reported through noon of the third day this year 3,113 pledges for a total of $65,493.88. Compared with the record through noon of the third day last year, the Metropolitan Unit is 40 per cent behind in number of pledges, and 4 per cent behind in total amount raised. However, like the Group Unit, the Metropolitan solicitors are obtaining higher average gifts.

Advance Gifts Unit yesterday reported 291 pledges, totaling $262,154, or 50.31 per cent of the unit quota of $521,000. John C. Folger, Section II chairman, made the advance gifts report.

The Executive Division of the Washington Postoffice was way out in front of the Government unit "100 percenters" for the day, according to the report of Latimer, who said the division had already reached 196.15% of its quota. Other Gov.

Ship Clerk Strike Threatens Tie-up At San Francisco

San Francisco, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—The Ship Clerks Association today called a strike for 6 o'clock (Pacific standard time) tonight at the port of San Francisco, threatening a tie-up of all the city's waterfront commerce.

The ship clerks ordered out a picket line and Harry Bridges, district president of the C. I. O. International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, announced longshoremen would refuse to pass the line and would give full support to the strike.

The strike was called against the Dock Checkers Employers Association after the employers rejected the clerks' four major demands for their 1940 contract.

King of Egypt Escapes Assassin

Cairo, Nov. 10 (INS).—An attempt on the life of Egypt's King Farouk was made today, but the young monarch was not harmed, it was revealed tonight.

First public information of the attack came when an official communique was issued which stated:

"A ministry of finance orderly named Ahmed Fareg threw a bottle of benzine at King Farouk. The bottle fell harmlessly behind the king's carriage.

"Fareg, who stated he wished to draw the king's attention to a personal grievance, was arrested and a medical examination indicated he is probably insane."

Navy Admits Defects in New Vessels

Destroyers Found Unstable but Now Corrected, Edison Tells Vandenberg

The Navy officially admitted yesterday that some defects had been found in newly constructed warships, but emphasized that steps are being taken which are "fully adequate to correct" them.

In response to an inquiry from Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, Acting Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison said that certain of the new destroyers had been found to lack sufficient stability and a number of cruisers developed faults several years ago.

Defective sternposts in one class of cruisers were all replaced, making them "entirely successful" ships, Edison stated, while steps to correct the "unsatisfactory features" of the new destroyers are now under way.

"It can be stated without reservation," he added, "that these destroyers will be superior to the earlier types and that they will give years of valuable peacetime service and greater reliability and effectiveness in time of war."

Building Holiday Cited

Vandenberg had written to the Navy citing rumors of defects and asking for "an authentic and authoritative statement" of the matter. He said it had been reported that some new destroyers are so top-heavy the Navy "dares not use the fuel oil in their holds lest they turn turtle," that cruisers "shimmied" so violently they cracked their sternposts and have had to be rebuilt, and that these defects have not been corrected.

"It is true," Edison wrote in reply, "that in the tremendous building program in which the Navy has been engaged in the past 10 years—a program which followed, as you will recall, a naval building holiday after the last war and the 1921 naval treaty—certain difficulties have developed."

Back in 1930, he said, the cast steel sternposts of a class of heavy cruisers proved defective and a number of them cracked while in service. The trouble arose over attempts to "achieve the maximum in military features" within a limit of 10,000 tons imposed by treaty, it was stated.

No Serious Casualties

No serious casualties resulted from the posts cracking, Edison declared, and the defective castings all were replaced. That in the Houston, the last ship of the Chester-Louisville class of cruisers to be so altered, was replaced in 1934 as a precautionary measure, although the trouble had not occurred in that vessel.

"In recent classes of destroyers," the Navy chief continued, "it has been found that, due to increases in weights which have come about largely through an effort to improve the ruggedness and in particular

Mexico Bars Her Waters, Air To Belligerents

Mexico City, Nov. 10 (INS).—In a special decree today, President Lazaro Cardenas prohibited entrance of belligerent warships and submarines to Mexican ports, and barred belligerent planes from flying over Mexican territory.

Specifying the order pertained to "submarines, cruisers and airplanes," the decree declared:

"Submarines of belligerent powers shall not be admitted to Mexican ports or territorial waters. No military airplane of a belligerent country shall be allowed to fly over Mexican territory. Airplanes aboard belligerent ships shall not be separated from those ships while in Mexican waters."

Congress Group Escapes Fire

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 10 (INS).—Lives of three United States Senators and a Representative were endangered here today when gasoline-sprayed grass at Maxwell Field caught fire just as their plane was about to take off.

The members of Congress made a hasty exit from their ship, but the blaze was extinguished before any damage resulted. The party, on an inspection tour of Army flying fields, included Senators Minton (Democrat), of Indiana; Gurney (Republican), of South Dakota, and Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, and Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan.

Belgium Fears Sudden Air Raids; Americans Ready to Flee Holland

Envoy to The Hague Advises Exodus of U. S. Citizens Today; Coast Lights Out

By the Associated Press

Amsterdam, Nov. 10.—The United States consulate announced tonight that Americans would be advised tomorrow to leave the Netherlands.

The consulate said Americans would be told that now "is a good time to get wives and dispensable American members of their staffs out of the country."

The action would be taken, it added, upon the advice of United States Minister George A. Gordon at The Hague following inquiries by American businessmen. There are about 1,000 Americans in the Netherlands.

Border Would Be Closed

It is understood that if there should be any German action against the Netherlands, the Belgian border would be closed.

[The government tonight condemned an "alarmist campaign" abroad jeopardizing its relations with Germany, the United Press reported, but speeded up measures to defend the Dutch lowlands against any possible Nazi invasion.

[A force of 10,000 additional troops in full fighting kit continued to move up to the frontier over roads which can be flooded at the press of a button if an invasion should come.

[The government tonight ordered a virtual "blackout" for the defense of its west coast by announcing that all major coastal lighthouses are being extinguished north of Egmond, 20 miles northwest of Amsterdam on the North Sea.

[All lightships were ordered into port with the exception of one, the Noorhinder.

Seek Sea and Air Bases

[The affected coastal area includes the west Frisian Islands above the Zuider Zee. Foreign reports have said Germany seeks naval and air bases on the islands, within easy striking distance of the British Isles.

[All army, air force and police leaves throughout the country were canceled, effective at midnight and soldiers hurried back to their garrisons.

[The United Press quoted the London Daily Mirror as saying in a Brussels dispatch today that Germany has served the Netherlands with a "virtual ultimatum," expiring Monday, which demands naval and air bases. The dispatch said the German demands were revealed yesterday at a secret meeting of Belgian parliamentary leaders. The Daily Mirror said Germany had demanded a free port in Amsterdam and air bases in Friesland and Groningen, within striking distance of the British Isles.—Editor's note.]

Army Leaves Canceled

Measures included the flooding of sections of the nation's vital "water line," the summoning of ambulance units to duty at The Hague—presumably against possible air raids—and requisitioning of buses.

Many trains were held in readiness to remove civilians from flooded areas and possible border danger points.

The tense feeling in The Netherlands was increased by the fact that no official explanation yet had been made to lift the mystery of a

6-Year-Old War Plan of Nazis Revealed

German Economist Says Army Now Controls Vital Supplies

By Beach Conger.
Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Berlin, Nov. 10.—Germany, despite her protests that the present war was unexpectedly forced upon her by Great Britain, has been preparing for this conflict for six years, a German economic expert said today.

He declared that the Allies should find no cause for rejoicing because Germany's supply of raw materials has been cut off by the blockade. Since 1933, he explained, the nation has been required to set aside a certain percentage of imported raw materials as a war reserve, and the annual figures of Germany's imports do not actually represent her actual requirements or consumption.

To supplement these reserves the Nazi government is also trying to develop an economic league of adjacent neutral nations.

Army Controls Supply

Apparently this steady accumulation of important supplies is now under the control of the army. Last year, it was learend recently, one of the largest industrial firms in the country needed additional raw materials in order to keep its men working. It applied to the army for permission to use supplies which it had imported and which were stored on its grounds in its own warehouses, but this request was refused by government officials who had purchased the material as war reserves.

Germany long ago developed certain official practices so that outside nations would not learn that potential war materials were being hoarded in safe places, the same governmenta source revealed. As early as 1933, when the Nazi governmenta came to power, economic officials realized that the next war would shut off approximately 50 per cent of the Reich's foreign trade. Accordingly, steps were taken to counteract as effectively as possible the expected blockade.

On the domestic side, efforts were

Brussels Cabinet In Emergency Session, Blackout Practice Ordered

By William Parker,
International News Service Staff Writer

Brussels (Saturday), Nov. 11. Belgian government circles early today acknowledged that "the situation is serious" as the full cabinet ended an emergency meeting at which German troop concentrations near the frontiers of Belgium and the Netherlands were reportedly discussed.

The special session of the cabinet convened under King Leopold's chairmanship last night a half hour after the Brussels radio broadcast a warning to Belgium's populace to rehearse air raid precautions and advised the people they might have no more than ten minutes' notice in the event bombs begin dropping.

Switzerland, as well as Belgium and Holland, was taking swift military defensive measures, as many neutral circles expressed the fear that Adolf Hitler may select today, Armistice Day, for the laufiching of some surprise blow designed to redeem Germany's military honor from the humiliating defeat acknowledged on November 11, 1918.

British Fliers Interned

These developments culminated a tense day, in which German and British warplanes battled in the skies above neutral Belgian territory. One British fighting plane, its fuel tank emptied by bullet perforations, glided to a safe landing on the outskirts of Monscron, in southwestern Belgium near the French border. Its crew, unharmed, was interned by Belgian authorities.

With belligerent planes flying at increasingly frequent intervals and waging more and more duels over or near Belgian soil, the 39-year-old King Leopold, who only last Wednesday joined with Holland's Queen Wilhelmina in an offer to mediate for peace, suddenly summoned his ministers into extraordinary session.

The ministerial council deliberated for 3 hours and 20 minutes. Before the cabinet met, King Leopold spent two hours in urgent consultatoin with Premier Hubert Pierlot, Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak and Defense Minister Lieut. Gen. Henri Denis. The latter postponed a scheduled nation-wide radio address when he was summoned to the palace.

Though government quarters strove to keep the populace quiet, unofficial circles generally feared some massive German move might come within 24 hours—on the twenty-first anniversary of the World War armistice, which is observed in Nazi Germany as a day of national mourning.

Evacuation Order Denied

Foreign reports that Americans and Britons have been ordered to evacuate Belgium were, however, denied by American and British embassy sources.

Similar reports concerning Americans and Britons in Holland were denied at the respective embassies and consulates at The Hague.

The instructions regarding the manner in which civilians are to prepare for air raids were broadcast by a member of the Belgian passive defense organization for the first time since the European war broke out.

The speaker cautioned that ten minutes would be the "longest" warning that Belgium "could expect" in the event of air attack, thus intimating that sky bombings of Brussels and other cities, if they occur, might be executed with surprising suddenness.

He urged men, women and children to rehearse tonight the acts of getting out of bed, dressing and going to cellars to test themselves.

Roosevelt Seeks to Avert Ship Transfers; Seamen to Get Relief

By Felix Cotten.

President Roosevelt yesterday studied alternatives to transferring idle American ships to foreign registry and authorized relief for several thousand seamen thrown out of work by the neutrality act shipping ban.

During the day opposition to the transfer to Panama registry of eight United States Lines' ships which the President said were on their last legs gained further headway among members of Congress.

Representative Rayburn, Texas, House Democratic leader, who had lunch with the President on Thursday, declared flatly that he was opposed to the transfer.

Rayburn said he understood Speaker Bankhead, who lunched with the President yesterday, felt as he did. Rayburn was understood to share Secretary of State Hull's previously expressed belief that transfer of the vessels would "impair the integrity" of the neutrality act. The impression was given that House leaders feared recriminations at the next session of Congress if transfer is authorized.

Senator Pittman, Nevada Democrat, who, as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, piloted the neutrality act through the Senate, said "our Government should be supercautious over subjecting itself to any criticism, or even suspicion, of evasion of neutrality." Pittman advocated compensation for shipowners and seamen adversely affected by the ban against entry by American flag ships into combat zones.

A three-point relief program was being formulated to care for an estimated 8,000 to 10,000 seamen beached by the prohibition. It consisted of:

Price Control Admitted at Steel Inquiry

Rolling Mills Head Tells How Patent Licensing Fixes Cost

By John B. Oakes

The issue of "bigness" in the steel industry and control of prices through patent licensing were brought under scrutiny of the Temporary National Economic Committee yesterday in testimony of two of America's leading steel masters.

Ernest T. Weir, arch-foe of the New Deal and chairman of the National Steel Corporation, suggested that it was "easier for a company our size to operate and make a profit than a company with the size and ramifications of the (United States) Steel Corporation."

"That," observed A. H. Feller, committee counsel and special assistant to the Attorney General, "is one of the most important statements made before this committee."

Charles Hook Testifies

Weir, whose own corporation never went into the red even in the darkest years of the depression, added that when there is great demand for steel, as at present, U. S. Steel probably has some advantage in lower costs.

Following Weir to the stand was Charles R. Hook, head of the American Rolling Mill Co. and former president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Hook said his company held the patents on all continuous strip mills, whose development a few years ago revolutionized certain types of steel manufacture and also actually increased the number of employes in the industry.

Each of the 13 American companies that have been licensed to use the new process has agreed to permit American Rolling Mills to set a minimum price for the product, Hook said. He pointed out, however, that his firm had never exercised that privilege.

Price Control Admitted

"Assuming that the legality of this arrangement has been settled by legislation or in the Supreme Court, the determination of the minimum price would then be in your hands?" Feller asked.

"On certain products," Hook agreed.

Feller questioned "the desirability of having price clauses of this kind in effect." But Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, acting chairman and one of the non-New Deal members of the committee, suggested that Feller might be attempting "to justify this committee in modifying the protection granted by the United States Constitution."

"I'm just adding a faggot to the bundle of information we've had on this subject, in respect to the glass and auto industries, aswell as steel," Feller replied with a smile.

Weir, white-haired, rosy-faced president of the American Iron and Steel Institute, insisted that "extreme competition" exists in the steel industry.

Reveals $80,000,000 Loss

"It's hard for me to visualize now how there could be more price competition," he asserted. "It's so extreme that over a nine-year period, the industry's stockholders have taken an $80,000,000 loss."

Declaring that the industry is not "profit-minded," Weir suggested that "if it had been, it could have made a profit even at the low level of output."

Weir vigorously assailed the industry's depression-years practice of selling below cost of manufacture, but he added that "I am certainly not advocating a rigid price policy."

Management in the industry "is at fault," Weir asserted, "in letting prices get to a point where loss results. Competition is so keen in the industry that an ordinary salesman has been given authority to cut prices to get business. In other words, the very life of a corporation is in the hands of an ordinary salesman. That's what I object to."

Size Is Profit Factor

When Representative Williams (Democrat), of Missouri, suggested that Weir hadn't done any price-cutting himself, the witness replied:

"I wouldn't say that. It is against my policy, but I'm not always sure my organization always follows out my policy."

Selling below cost to maintain employment—a policy previous witnesses have described to the committee—is unsuccessful "in the long run," Weir averred.

After Weir said that size might explain the difference between the earning record of his company and U. S. Steel, he stated that "it's easier for a company like ours to make a profit when demand is off—but in good times, the steel corporation has the advantage."

Under committee questioning, Weir agreed that the difference might be partly explained from the fact that his corporation had relatively smaller capacity for products which suffered most severely in the depression and relatively larger capacity for those which held up.

Competition Maintained

"YYou went into newer lines that were more profitable," observed Securities and Exchange Commissioner Leon Henderson, "but you also had a very definite and aggressive selling policy."

"Always very competitive," Weir said.

A speech Weir delivered last month to the American Institute of Steel Construction was put in the record. In it Weir had vigorously urged businessmen not to sell below their own costs.

"The job of each individual company is to see that its prices cover its own costs, not empirically established average costs of its industry," Weir said. In the speech he declared that what he was urging "has been condemned as 'maintenance of a cost price structure' by the long-controlling short-sighted economists in the bureaus down in Washington and in other places."

He urged that "you charge a price under any given condition which covers all of your costs, including the cost of carrying unused capacity and returns reasonable profit."

Henderson said he was driven to the conclusion from Weir's speech that the larger unused steel companies "to stay out of the market when they were unable to cover costs, or be considered un-American."

Ickes Renews Demand for U.S. Rule of Oil

Declares States Have Failed to Prevent Production Waste

Secretary of Interior Ickes asserted yesterday that national interests and defense requirements necessitated Federal legislation to prevent waste in oil and gas production, especially since the States had failed to establish adequate safeguards.

He told the House Oil Committee that a bill he and President Roosevelt had recommended would extend the cooperation between State and Federal governments in production control regulation, but would not lead to a harmful usurpation of State authority by the Federal Government.

He added, however, that if there arose a dispute between a State agency and the Interior Department over what constituted waste, "the Federal authority would prevail."

The measure, which Mr. Roosevelt asked Congress in July to consider, would define waste in oil and gas production. An operator's failure to comply with those standards would make him subject to severe penalties.

Representative Wolverton (Republican), New Jersey, a committee member, remarked at one point that introduction of the legislation had led to renewed charges that Ickes was a "dictator."

States Criticized

"As in the past, the oil industry wants to run its own business in its own way, regardless of whether it affects the public interest," Ickes commented.

He added that if interests in conservation of oil and gas and elimination of attendant production waste made him a dictator "I'm perfectly willing to be called that."

The Secretary interspersed his testimony with critical remarks directed at California, Illinois and Texas.

In view of the failure of California voters on Tuesday to approve State oil control legislation which President Roosevelt had approved, Ickes said that little could be expected from that second largest oil producing state.

Illinois, without a State law now, may be clamoring for such legislation generally if new flush pools are discovered in other States, he predicted.

Ickes remarked that the action of Texas in shutting down its oil wells for two weeks last August after a major company started a short-lived price cut was bad procedure. Such action, he said, tended to confuse the issues and becloud the Interior Department's efforts to reduce actual waste.

Roosevelt Opens Roll Call Drive Tonight

Will Speak on Radio; Charlie McCarthy and Film Stars on Program

President Roosevelt will open the American Red Cross roll call campaign at 10:30 p. m. tonight, with a radia address over three national networks. He will be introduced by Norman Davis, chairman of the Red Cross.

"As our officially recognized national voluntary relief agency," Mr. Roosevelt said in a statement yesterday, "the Red Cross, through its democratic organization and popular membership, serves us all in bringing relief to those in need."

Paying tribute to the organization's continuing work, he declared, "the Red Cross has been answering urgent appeals for aid in Europe without neglecting or forgetting its obligations of service here at home."

"So far, the Red Cross is financing its relief operations from voluntary contributions and its own funds.

To give it additional strength for its expanding work, we must lend our generous support, both through contributions and membership."

Co-Star Is Charlies McCarthy

On the program this evening will appear stars of opera, screen and radio.

John Charles Thomas, tenor, and Connie Boswell, swing songster, will sing. Jean Hersholt, actor, will present an original reading. Edgar Bergen will appear with his accomplice, Charlie McCarthy, and so will Gracie Allen and George Burns and Amos and Andy. Three orchestras, led by Howard Barlow, Paul Whiteman and David Broekman, will play.

The program will be announced by Clifton Fadiman, of "Information Please;" Harry Von Zell and Don Willson. Bob Hope will be master of ceremonies for the portion of the program originating in Hollywood. Other parts will be broadcast from Washington, New York and Detroit.

Nine Indicted In U.S. Building Trust Drive

4 in Glaziers' Union, 5 Contractors Are Accused in Cleveland

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Nov. 10.—The Department of Justice drive against alleged restraints of trade in the building industry brought indictment today of four labor figures and five businessmen, accused of doubling glazing costs in greater Cleveland.

A Federal grand jury charged the nine, three of their companies and an association "engaged in an unlawful combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade" and thereby dominated the industry.

The laborites are connected with a local union of the A. F. L. painters, decorators, paperhangers and glaziers. They are Don A. Campbell, business agent, now serving a one-five year Ohio Penitentiary term for labor racket extortion of $1,200 from a Cleveland restaurant owner; his brothers, Charles, assistant agent, and Walter, a member, and James P. McDonnell, another assistant business agent.

Officials Indicted

Also indicted were Robert Firestone, H. E. Foote, J. B. Olmstead, John C. Springer and Thomas E. Morrison, officials of glazing companies.

United States District Attorney Emerich B. Freed and Edward P. Hodges, an assistant United States Attorney General, said in a statement:

"The restraints upon which the indictment was based grew out of the fact that certain of the defendants had achieved and maintained domination of the local glaziers' union for their own selfish purpose and personal aggrandizement with no benefit to the members of the union and against the desire and will of the members. This stranglehold must be broken if competitive conditions are to be restored . . ."

Conviction carries a maximum penalty of a year in jail and a $5,000 fine. Similar indictments were returned recently by Federal grand juries in Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Washington.

Housing Authorities Accused

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 10 (AP).—The United Construction Workers Organization, C. I. O., through a general organizer, called on the Government today to investigate immediately the Buffalo Housing Authority.

In a telegram to Attorney General Frank Murphy, General Organizer Julius Goodman, jr., Buffalo, charged the authority with "disregarding bids submitted by contractors not approved by A. F. of L. representatives."

First Lady Buys 100 Doz. Kerchiefs For Christmas

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt went on a "do-your-Christmas-shopping-early" tour today and bought, among other things, 100 dozen of men's linen handkerchiefs to be packed three in a box.

The First Lady also purchased seven dresses of "simple and stately" style—none with the new wasp-waist foundations. The gowns, it was said, emphasized the slenderizing line.

One dress, which the President's wife probably will wear at the reception to the diplomatic corps in Washington soon, was of white faille satin with gold stripes, in a sculptured style and a full skirt. It was especially designed for her by the style taff of a Fifth avenue store.

Other gifts included children's sweaters and sweater suits.

126 Lose Relief For Refusal to Turn In Cars

232 Give Up Licenses In Cleveland Drive on Autoists Getting Aid

Cleveland, Nov. 10.—One hundred twenty-six relief clients who refused to give up their jalopies were cut off from further aid here today.

They were part of the first contingent of 1,600 whom the Cleveland Relief Commission ordered to turn in automobile licenses—or else.

Licenses of 232 auto owners had been turned in today, Commissioner Frank G. Jones said. Investigators found 2,000 relief clients were driving cars. All are to be required to quit operating them except in cases of necessity, if they expect relief payments to continue.

Commissioner Jones reasoned that "relief clients can not afford to operate automobiles on the modest allowances we are permitted to pay unless there is cheating somewhere along the line."

Previously relief applicants had been required to dispose of any automobiles valued at more than $100. So those remaining all were jalopies.

U. S. Blamed for Thefts

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 10 (AP).—Federal Judge Phillip Forman, receiving guilty pleas from three men charged with forging signatures to stolen WPA checks, suggested today the Government "devise a new system for distributing the checks which would eliminate the temptation angle."

Noting that scarcely a week passed without arraignment of several persons indicted for stealing Government checks from mail boxes, Judge Forman said, "The persons who take them are not the criminal type, but rather the poor who succumb to temptation to take something they need badly."

Sentencing of the three men was deferred.

O'Conor Says U. S. Looks to Veterans

Perryville, Md., Nov. 10 (AP).—O'Conor tonight termed American Legionnaires the Nation's "line of first-hand opinion" on war.

Addressing an Armistice Day program of the Legion here, he declared:

"The service men of this country should be the ones to whom our Nation may now look for expert opinion on questions confronting our country today. We are all war-conscious on Armistice Day. We can't help it . . ."

Seas No Longer Guard Us, Says Summerall

Prepare to Defend or Abandon Monroe Doctrine, He Advises

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 10.—Gen. Charles P. Summerall, former chief of staff of the United States Army, declared tonight "we should abandon the Monroe Doctrine or prepare to defend it" with armed forces strong enough "to deter aggressors from threatening the Western Hemisphere.

"Let us no longerconcernourselves with the fetish that the oceans protect us," he said in an address prepared for delivery before the Union League Club.

"Unless we control them, they make us more vulnerable. Aggressor nations are driven to conquest by an overproduction of manpower for their resources. The Americas must inevitably become their prey.

We Might Lose

"We should abandon the Monroe Doctrine or prepare to defend it. Otherwise, we may at any time find ourselves in a loisng war."

Gen. Summerall, now president of The Citadel Military College, advocated a superior Army and Navy, military training for youth and peacetime establishment in executive departments of the Government of boards, agencies and commissions needed during a war.

He also demanded that aliens "fomenting revolution and trying to destroy our institutions and the native-born traitors who aid and abet them be treated as public enemies."

Assails Allies

From our Allies of 1917, he charged, "We have received little . . . but criticism, abuse, contempt and repudiation."

He contended that Premier Clemenceau and Marshal Foch, of France, were among those who belittled the achievements of the American soldiers, and added:

"There should be no more potent antidote for propaganda, hysteria and international emotionalism than a perusal of books by British and French military political leaders and the reports of the reports of the Secretary of the Treasury about the war debts.

"Let the American people resolve never again to engage in wars not made upon them. There can be no greater fallacy than to say we should save others from defeat."

Hospitals' Farm Work Nets $43,365 in Year

Richmond, Va., Nov. 10 (AP).—The State Hospital Board reported today that the six State institutions for mental patients produced farm products valued at $229,768.86 during the year ended June 30, 1939, and showed a net profit from operation of their farms of $43,365.14.

Prosecution Wins Trial by Jury In Fritz Case

Magistrate Ralph G. Shure, of Silver Spring Police Court yesterday granted the request of the prosecution to have Peter Fritz, Montgomery County innkeeper, tried before a jury in Circuit Court. Fritz faces 10 charges of selling alcoholic beverages without a license.

The prosecution's motion for a jury trial was a surprise move and was bitterly contested by defense attorneys, James Pugh and Joseph and Vivian Simpson. They contended that under the new Trial Magistrate Act, only the defendant has the right to ask for a jury trial.

Property Crimes Most Repetitious

More than 44 per cent of criminals investigated in the first nine months of this year had records of previous arrests, the Federal Bureau of Investigation reported yesterday.

Repetition of crimes against property was greater than that of crimes against individuals, the director stated.

"This is partially explainable," he pointed out, "on the basis that many murders and less serious attacks on the person are committed in the heat of passion. Offenses against property are carefully planned annd frequently are the work of the professional, predatory criminal."

U. S. Shaking Off Hangover From Depression, Says Jones

By Cecil B. Dickson.

American businessmenmen gradually are shaking off the depression "hangover" and the pepole as a whole are shifting into a state of mind that will "get us out of the woods."

That is how soft-voiced Federal Loan Administrator Jesse H. Jones, "the biggest banker in the world," sized up the Nation's outlook yesterday.

'It's not a business boom, but continued, steady and sound growth that we need," he told International News Service in an exclusive interview.

Sitting at the same desk he used for more than five years as Reconstruction Finance Corporation chairman, the robust, white-haired Texan made one of his rare forecasts:

I think that business is going to be substantially better. If the European war continues it will help temporarily and I don't think there'll be any considerable slump should the war suddenly end."

To justify his prediction, Jnoes summarized:

People have been spending rather freely for consumers' goods; for things to eat, things to wear, general upkeed and entertainment. There has ben, however, very little plant and equipment expansion or replacement for ten years. Naturally, industry can't forego improvement of this character indefinitely.

Illustrative of this are the railroads. They are buying now because they need the equipment and need to improve their roadbeds to handle increased traffic. Some plants are being modernized and brought up to date. But the vast amount of Government credit made available in the past seven years is still awaiting investment."

Jones expects Congress to expand capital of the Export-Import Bank to $200,000,000 to assist in building up the Nation's export and import business.

Already the $100,000,000 present capital of the bank is committed for American export loans. As repayments are received, they are advanced to other American exporters. Collections have been satisfactory, Jones said. Indicative of this is the heretofore undisclosed reduction by $1,500,000 in the recent, widely-discussed $25,000,000 Chinese loan—the largest made this agency.

Brazil, Jones disclosed, has paid $3,800,000 on the $19,200,000 credit obtained when Finance Minister Arahana was here.

Applications for loans recently have receded in volume. Virtually none has been received for building armaments and airplane plants in expectation of European war business. Jones attributed these developments partially to the fact that plenty of private money is available and banks and private investment sources again are accommodating borrowers. This he regarded as a healthy business sign.

For the first time, however, Jones revealed that more than half of all RFC loans have been made to small business concerns. A third of the loans have been for less than $5,000 and more than half for less than $10,000.

"Any deserving business enterprise in the United States can get credit on easy terms if there is reasonable chance for repayment," the administrator said.

Mrs. Newlands' Will Gives D.C. 3-Acre Park

Bulk of $918,000 Estate Goes to Friends, Relatives, Servants

The late Mrs. Edith McAllister Newlands gave Washington a three-acre park in her will, which was filed for probate in the District Court yesterday.

The bulk of the $918,000 estate was left to relatives, friends and servants. Mrs. Newlands died October 26 at her home, 2328 Massachusetts avenue northwest. She was 79 and had lived here 46 years.

Mrs. Newlands directed that the park be maintained as a memorial to her husband, Senator Francis G. Newlands (Democrat), of Nevada, who died in 1917. She named a committee to select 3 acres from wooded land known as "Little Forest," on Military road, between Twenty-seventh and Thirtieth streets northwest.

The land is to revert to her heirs if used for any purpose except a park. The committee named to choose the land included Harold E. Doyle and Edwin Donn, architect. The third member was to be one of Mrs. Newlands' stepdaughters, either Mrs. Edith Newlands Johnston, of 1609 Twenty-second street northwest, or Mrs. Janet Newlands Johnston, of San Francisco.

Mrs. Newlands' Massachusetts avenue home and her Little Forest property were assessed at $168,545. Her personal property, estimated at $750,000, included $691,893 in securities, $35,000 in household effects and $17,831 in cash.

The Union Trust Co. was designated to administer the will and to handle trust funds.

Relatives who shared in the estate included the Mesdames Johnston; a sister, Mrs. Eva McAllister Pritchett, Santa Barbara, Calif.; two nieces, Mrs. Marion Wise Glover, 4200 Massachusetts avenue northwest, and Mrs. Louise McAllister Ford, New York City, and a nephew, Francis Hall McAllister.

Supreme Court Will Consider Oil Trust Case

The Supreme Court took under consideration yesterday the question whether Federal District Judge Patrick T. Stone acted correctly in dismissing indictments against 11 defendants in the Madison, Wis., oil antitrust case after they had been convicted by a jury.

Judge Stone dismissed the indictments about six months after the jury rendered its verdict. He acted on motions for a favorable verdict made by the defendants before the case went to the jury.

Challenging Jude Stone's rights to take such action, Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General in charge of antitrust law enforcement, argued before the high tribunal that the procedure "puts a premium on inattention" by the judge and "makes the jury verdict purely advisory."

Weymouth Kirkland, Chicago attorney, replied for Judge Stone that postponing a decision on such a motion is a "very laudable practice on complicated questions."

The Government appealed from a decision by the Seventh Federal Circuit Court sustaining Judge Stone.

Woman and 2 Men Found Guilty in Wife-Swapping

Russellville, Ala., Nov. 10 (AP).—Two men and a woman were sentenced to prison terms for bigamy today for their parts in a wife-swapping agreement under which two farm couples exchanged mates, land, livestock and children. An appeal fas filed immediately and all three were released under bond.

Those sentenced were Will D. Johnson, 36, accused of "instigating" the exchange, thre to three and one-half years; Mrs. Della Brand, attractive 29-year-old brunette, two to two and one-half years, and Odell Brand, 32-year-old WPA worker, two to two and onehalf years.

Mrs. Annie Fay Johnson, 29, the fourth principal, entered a plea of guilty. Her sentence will be deferred until appeals have been heard.

Pine, Douglas Agree About 'No Man's Land'

Cases in Disputed Territory Turned Over to Virginia

District Attorney Pine and Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence Douglas of Arlington County Virginia, yesterday reached a gentleman's agreement on the 125-year-old dispute over the exact boundary between their jurisdictions. Henceforth cases in the moot territory will be prosecuted in Virginia.

The area in dispute is a strip near the south end of the Highway Bridge, occupied by Harry's Bluebird Inn, and by lots adjacent to the Washington Airport. The area has recently been a legal "no man's land." Pending in the courts is a suit by Harry J. Riganis to restrain Arlington County authorities from acting in the section.

District jurisdiction was invoked by Smauel Audia of 901 Thirteenth street northwest, who claimed he was assaulted and slashed in the nightclub on September 25. Audia accused a man he named as Jerry Swisher, who was held for the District gand jury.

Assistant District Attorney Wilson reviewed the case to determine whether the District courts could act.

The boundary has been fixed by law as the line of the low-water mark of the Potomac River in 1791. The trouble is that nobady knows where the low-water mark was.

It has been estimated that a survey to fix the line would cost $30,000 and legal determination would require an original proceeding in the United States Supreme Court.

Assured that Douglas would prosecute law violations in the area, Pine yesterday resolved to cut through the legal complications by dismissing the charges against Swisher and leaving the field to Virginia authorities.

"We have come to the conclusion that a criminal case is neither the practical nor conclusive medium for settling the 125-year-old boundry dispute," Pine said.

"The case against Swisher has been nolled. Factual difficulties growing out of the failure of the complaining witness to identify the prospective defendant with the crime is another factor fo. our decision.

"Virginia can not be made a party to the criminal proceedings and therefore the decision would not be binding upon that State. A verdict of 'not guilty' would be finally inconclusive of the boundary dispute, because the Government can not appeal from an acquittal.

"Assuming that there would be a verdict of 'guilty' and the appeal favorably decided for the Government, the decision would cover only a small piece of ground and would not decide the boundary."

Douglas said he was "entirely in accord" with Pine about future jurisdiction.

Glenmont P.-T.A. Honors A. L. Smith

Honoring the school's "most outstanding benefactor," the Glenmont (Md.) Parent-Teacher Association devoted its November meeting entirely to a program and reception in tribute to Arthur L. Smith, elderly resident of the community.

Smith was presented a silver cup by Elmer Dwyer, president of the association, and was given a cake bearing 13 candles representing the number of years he has assisted the school. The pupils sang his favorite song "God Bless America." Tribute also was paid by Mrs. Lulu Ricketts, school principal, and Miss Edna Hardy, long resident of Glenmont. Solos were sung by Miss Jeanne Tyser, former pupil.

Writer Addresses 150 Attending Meeting At American U.

Washington was described last night as "the only major capital of the only great government not filled throughout with censorship," by Erwin D. Canham, correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor.

Newspaper of the National Capital have a large part in maintaining the United States' form of Government, through "checking up constantly" or Federal activities, he added in an address to the Virginia Intercollegiate Press Association at American University.

Canham based his statement on day-by-day knowledge of events here and previous experience in European capitals. He came to Washington seven years ago after serving as foreign correspondent for his newspaper.

Earlier, more than 50 delegates to the thirteenth annual convention gathered in group meetings for discussion of problems in their own lines of collegiate journalism.

Frank T. Hoadley, teacher of journalism, American University, led the principal forum on general problems of college newspapers.

Emmett Deady, of the Standard Engraving Co., led discussion on yearbooks. Literary magazines was the subject of a round table headed by Dr. Merritt T. Bachelder, of American University.

Other discussion groups were planned for sports writers, business managers of college publications and editors and business managers of student handbooks.

High point of the conference will be announcement tonight of officers elected for the next year by the executive board and awards to college publications for excellence last year.

Miss Helen Miller, president of the Student Government Association, American University, presided.

7-Come-11 Luck Wins Safety Prize For Navy Fliers

It was 7 come 11 for a West Coast Navy air squadron this year and its luck held.

Patrol Squadron 7 of Wing 1, stationed at Can Diego, had operated most of the year without an accident, when word arrived that the squadrons were being renumbered. In the reshuffling the unit drew as its new designatioi—Squadron 11.

Yesterday the Navy Department announced the squadron had won the Herbert Schiff Memorial Trophy awarded annually to the naval aviation unit with the best record in safe flights. It flew more hours—1,203 in all—than any other squadron having a perfect record. There were 11—yes 11—squadrons which went through the year without an accident.

Lieut. Comdr. Silas B. Moore commanded the winning squadron until June 1, when he was relieved by Lieut. Comdr. Frank T. Ward, jr.

C.I.O. Charges Unfair Acts To Cafeteries

Union Files Complaint With Labor Board as It Prepares to Strike

In a surprise move, the C. I. O. Cafeteria Employes Union yesterday filed a complaint with the National Labor Relations Board charging the Welfare and Recreation Association with unfair labor practices, according to Jack Mink, union agent.

The association, operators of Government building cafeterias, will face a strike next Wednesday, Mink added, unless it settles a dispute over a new contract.

Mink said he submitted to the NLRB written statements from employes that cafeteria executives urged that they resign from the union.

Another charge, he added, was that known union leaders were transferred by association managers from large cafeterias to small ones, where their influence would not be as effective.

He said the association "attempted to break the union" by offering certain employes higher wages after refusing to grant union demands for similar increases.

Arthur J. Williams, chairman of the association's negotiating committee, said he had not been notified by the NLRB of the complaint and had not seen the charges. Judging from a summary read to him over the telephone, he said, they sounded "completely ridiculous."

Meantime, it was learned that conferences had been scheduled between both parties and John M. Carmody, Federal Security Administrator, for Monday. Carmody, whose organization issues the contracts under which the association operates the lunch rooms and cafeterias, obtained a 15-day postponement of a strike scheduled for November 1.

15 U. S. Light Bombers Are Ordered by Iraq

Santa Monica, Calif., Nov. 10 (AP). Douglas Aircraft Co. has received a $1,000,000 order from the Kingdom of Iraq, British protectorate on the Suez Canal, for 15 light attack bombers.

The planes are fast, single-engined bombers of the 8A series, similar to those Douglas recently sold to Peru and The Netherlands. They can be shipped in United States vessels.

A. F. L. Agrees To Kentucky Mine Elections

Cancels Closed Shop Pacts to Settle Feud With C. I. O. Union

By the United Press

The National Labor Relations Board announced last night that 10 western Kentucky coal operators and the A. F. L.'s Progressive Mine Workers of America had agreed to cancel two-year closed-shop contracts to end a long-standing labor dispute with the C. I. O.'s United Mine Workers of America.

The NLRB approved stipulations signed by the companies, the P. M. W. A. and the U. M. W. A. and ordered secret collective bargaining elections within 30 days so employes may choose between the A. F. L. and C. I. O. miners' unions.

The board said that the companies had expressly agreed to issuance of a U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals consent decree which would require them to:

Cease discouraging membership in the U. M. W. A. or encouraging membership in the P. M. W. A.

Disestablish the Independent Miners Union, an alleged company-dominated union with which the P. M. W. A. merged, according to the board.

Reinstate and offer back pay to all employes who were laid off because of the closed-shop provision requiring membership in the I. M. U. or the P. M. W. A.

The order represented the most extensive intervention thus far by the board in the violence-marked rivalry. This feud was largely responsible for the six-weeks soft coal mine shutdown this spring which continued until the U. M. W. A. obtained a union shop which barred the P. M. W. A. from most bituminous fields.

The closed-shop contracts canceled by the stipulations would have expired July 1, 1940.

The board had issued a complaint charging the companies with violations of the Wagner act and ordered a public hearing on October 30, but the stipulations were signed before that date and the parties waived hearings.

Companies affected are: Empire Mining Co., Hopkinsville; Norton Coal Corporation, Nortonville; Williams Coal Co., Crofton; Hart Coal Co., Mortons Gap; Newcoal Corporation, Madison; Flat Creek Coal Co., Providence; Ruckman Coal Co., Providence; Lick Creek Coal Co., Providence; Dawson Daylight Coal Co., and Dawson Collieries, Inc., both of Dawson Springs.

A new mine owned by the Hart company in adjacent Muhlenberg County was the scene of a fatal gun battle Wednesday, and authorities ascribed it to rivalry between the two unions. Robert Brown, construction superintendent was killed and Brent Hart, company president, was wounded. County law enforcement officers said 250 to 300 armed men were reported to have taken possession of the mine property and the gunfire followed.

Fund to Pay Capone's Fine Linked to Race Track Slaying

Fiancee Questioned In Death of Chicago Turf Millionaire

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 10.—The name of Al Capone was injected today into the investigation of the slaying of Edward J. O'Hare, affluent president of the Sportman's Park Race Track.

Capt. Daniel Gilbert, chief of the State's attorney's police, said there might have been some relation between the killing and reports that men engaged in enterprises once dominated by Capone had been solicited for contributions toward payment of the $20,000 balance of the former gang chief's $50,000 fine.

The $20,00 sum was paid to the clerk of the Federal court here last week. It assure Capone's release from prison on November 19, provided he received time off for good behavior.

Capone Owned Track

The captain told reporters it was possible that O'Hore refused to contribute to the fund.

Capone was the original owner of the Sportsman's Park track. At one time O'Hare managed the Hawthorne dog racing course, another Capone venture. O'Hare became interested later in the Sportsman's traack and dog ovals in Massachusetts and Florida.

Mmebers of the Capone syndicate were hunted for questioning concerning the shotgun assassination of O'Hare late Wednesday. Assistant State's Attorney Robert Wright began a search of Loop banks for safety deposit boxes O'Hare might have rented. At one bank it was ascertained that O'Hare had two checking accounts and a special account. They totaled $42,000.

Detecties also conferred with Miss Sue Granata, brunette fiancéee of O'Hare, but the interview shed no light on his death.

Commision Warns Turf

Meanwhile, the Chicago crime commission issued a statement describing the slaying as 'the first gong of warning" for the turf sport. It added

"Horse racing in Illinois is not so secure that it can afford racketeer actiities and gangster-style elimination of its officialdom. Illinois has too many race tracks now (there are seven) and this fact alone is bound to bring bitter rialry and inevitable outlaw activity.

"O'Hare's assassination may bring good results in the form of a house cleaning within ract track families. It should bring a closer scrutiny by the racing commission and probably a refusal of licenses during the forthcoming season. . . . The Governor should demand that the racing commisison show a little more interest in its supervisory duties."

Louisiana U. Prexy Pleads Guilty of Fraud

Sentenced to Thirty Month; 27 State Charges Remain

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, oNv. 10.—Dr. James Monroe Smith, once head of Louisiana State University, liquidated Federal charges with two guilty pleas today, received 30-month sentences and then spoke hopefully of a new life outside prison.

The 51-year-old former professor of philosophy pleaded guilty to mail fraud and income-tax evasion while he was guiding Louisiana State University through a $13,000,000 expansion program. Federal Judge Wayne Borah imposed a 30-month sentence in each case, but ordered the time to be served concurrently with a like sentence imposed after a mail-fraud conviction in September.

Thus the bald, mild-mannered educator and favorite of the late Huey Long may clear his debt to the Federal Government by serving no more than two and a half years in jail.

Still facing hi mare 27 State charges lodged at Baton Rouge, but officials have indicated 23 of these will be dropped if and when he pleads guilty in four key cases. His attorneys have said such pleas would be entered at the State capital next week.

A dozen other official accusations are on file against his name in the Orleans Parish Court and his counsel, Walter Hamlin, said no decision had been reached on procedure in these cases.

"I am looking forward to the time of my release so I can salvage something from the wreckage of my life," Dr. Smith said pleasantly today when he was interviewed while he sat sucking lemon drops in his cell.

He insisted he was "drawn into this mess unsuspectingly."

His jail cell interview was the first he has consented to since his resignation and flight made him a key figure in a rapidly developing investigation of political conduct, an inquiry which resuletd in the indictment of dozens of State political figures.

Most of the charges against Smith centered around his alleged use of university funds to finance heavy and disastrous speculation in the wheat market.

Pope Would Force Fidelity To Treaties

Suggests World Order To Preserve Liberties Of Nations, Individuals

Copyright by New York Times

Vatican City, Nov. 10.—The Pope suggested today formation of "a stable and fruitful international organization" after the war is over, in the course of an address to Abel Nicolas Leger, Haitian minister to the Holy See, who presented his credentials this morning. The pontiff did not go into details but it is significant as the first indication that he has something in mind when peace comes.

[Pius tonight was authoritatively disclosed to have appealed to Germany, France and Great Britain for their sympathetic consideration of the offer by King Leopold of Belgium and Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands to mediate for peace, the International News Service reported.

[His holiness instructed papal diplomatic representatives in Berlin, London and Paris to make representations in behalf of the Leopold-Wilhelmina mediation plan. It was understood the pontiff also requested cooperation of the Italian government.

Plea Presented to Hitler

[It was reliably stated that Mgr. Cesare Orsenigo, nuncio to Germany, conveyed the Pope's plea for sympathetic reception of the Leopold-Wilhelmina offer when he called on Chancellor Hitler in Berlin today for the officially announced reason of felicitating the Fuehrer on his escape from assassination in Tuesday's Munich time-bomb explosion.—Editor's note.]

The pontiff's speech contined another condemnation of "the cult of force employed against law" which is considered to be his third indirect attack against Germany in two weeks. His encyclical, and his sermon at St. Peter's on October 29, are also taken as attacks against Naziism.

This international organization, said his holiness, "is desired by men of goodwill. It will respect the rights of God, assure the mutual independence of large and small peoples, impose fidelity to treaties loyally agreed upon, and safeguard the health, the liberty, and the dignity of the human person, in the effort of each toward the prosperity of all."

The Pope is also understood to have made reference to the American neutrality legislation when he spoke of the war "whose economic consequences are felt beyond continents and seas. This is in no sense to be considered a reproach because the papal secretariat of state often has shown its sympathy with President Roosevelts neutrality policy in indirect ways—chiefly through the Osservatore Romano.

Anxious for Holland

There is grave anxiety at the holy see today regarding the threat to the neutrality of Holinad and Belgium, and it seems certain that the Pope's animosity toward German procedure would be greatly increased if the Reich violated either of those frontiers.

On the juridical side Prof. Giorgio Gonella gives what is considered the official Vatican viewpoint when he writes in the Osservatore Romano:

"The difficulties placed by one belligerent on the commerce of a neutral country do not justify remonstrances from another belligerent toward that neutral state. Holland is a neutral country and remains so insofar as she leaves nothing undone to defend her neutrality. Nobody can accuse the Dutch government of neglecting any of those means or procedures which a neutral government can employ in its defense against the demands of belligerents."

The Osservatore Romano today cautioned the German press not to seize upon the attempt on Chancellor Hitler's life to disseminate hatred among the people against another power, meaning England, by charging the latter with organizing the attempt. Caution, it adds, should especially be exercised after the comintern manifesto, whcih the newspaper terms "a cynical world appeal" showing the hatred of Communism for Germany and the democracies alike.

A copy of Pius' encyclical is being made available to every Italian by lay and religious organizations and parish priests. Despite the fact that the encyclical attacks the fascist conception of a state, the distribution, as far as can be ascertained, is not hindered by Italian authorities.

strange shooting incident last night on The Netherlands side of the German frontier near Venloo.

Immediately after the shooting Netherlands army leaves were canceled and guards were put around public buildings.

There were varying reports that two persons were killed and that only one was wounded. All accounts agreed several persons were spirited into Germany.

Accounts distributed by French news agencies in Paris accused German planes of violating Belgian neutrality by flying from Aachen, Germany, to the French-Belgian frontier, thus crossing Belgian territory.

Army Lays 'Safe' Mines on Coasts

Fortress Monroe, Va., Nov 10 (AP).—The Army is laying "nest eggs" up and down the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

They are submarine mines, put away for the possible rainy day of attempted invasion by a foreign fleet. Each contains 200 pounds of TNT and can be fired electrically from an observation point miles away.

The mines are harmless, since they do not explode on impact as do mines used by the Navy.

Each mine is wired directly to a shore control point through an electrical cable.

Italy Fears Nazis May Strike Soon

Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Nov. 10—It was said here today that the unsuccessful attempt against Chancellor Adolf Hitler's life will be used as an excuse to put Germany's great war machine in action soon. Italians, like the rest of the world, are contemplating the German concentrations on the Belgian and Dutch frontiers with great misgivings.

According to the Giarnale D'Italia's Berlin correspondent, the Nazi regime has been greatly strengthened by what has happened.

Democrats to Meet

on whether they could complete this process within ten minutes. The locations of bombproof shelters were also announced in the broadcast which was described as the first of a series on air-raid precautions.

The uneasiness and uncertainty prevailing in official Belgian circles were indicated by the fact that a special radio broadcast which was to have been given to the nation by Defense Minister Lieut. Gen. Henri Denis was postponed until Saturday night. The reason stated was the "press of his duties."

Changed Suddenly

Further public anxiety was engendered by the fact that announcement of the postponement was not made over the radio until a half hour after the defense minister was to have spoken. At 7:45 p. m. (2:45 p. m., E. S. T.) the radio announced that a communique would be broadcast at 8:30 (3:30 p. m., E. S. T.). But no communique was forthcoming at that hour. Instead, the air-raid instructions were broadcast.

Public worry was somewhat alleviated when it was learned that two representatives of the Belgian foreign ministry were en route to Berlin, where they are expected to arrive Saturday night to take up "economic negotiations" with Germany.

The Government stated no political problems were on the agenda, but well-informed Brussels circles conceded the possibility that the German government may broach political matters.

Significance was attached to a call made on Belgian Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak by British Ambassador Sir Robert Henry Clive, but the nature of the conversation was kept secret.

The government denied a rumor that Belgian antiaircraft artillery Friday morning shot down a German warplane over Limburg, near the Belgian-Holland frontier. But it was confirmed that a British military plane was forced to land Friday morning in the vicinity of Courtrai. The plane was confiscated and the crew interned, but the government declined to disclose the type of craft and the number of men involved.

Several foreign planes flew over northwestern Belgium during Thursday night and Friday morning.

Regarding the rumors about evacuation of foreign residents, British official circles said notices to all British residents, including newspaper correspondents, to prepare for immediate evacuation had been printed, but denied that these notices have as yet been distributed. One embassy source said:

"I believe any embassy would act similarly, considering the situation."

At the American Embassy it was stated no orders had gone out for evacuation of Americans, except a notice distributed October 20, pointing to the shortage of ships as a reason for all Americans to leave Europe, save those on urgent business.

The Belgian government fought to dispel wild rumors and keep the populace as calm as possible. To this end it suppressed the fascist newspaper Pays Reel, published by Rexist Leader Leon Degrelle, because the paper had been printing vigorous editorial attacks on Britain.

The pro-French newspaper La Bataille Wallone and the Flemish Communist paper Le Drapeau Rouge were denied distribution facilities and additional restrictions, delaying the sending of news abroad, were imposed.

Germany's chief anti-Semitic paper, Julius Streicher's Nuremberg Sturmer, was forbidden entry into Belgium.

British Drop Men by Chute, Nazis Report

Near German Base; Heavy Guns Roar at Emden and Ditzum

By the United Press

Berlin, Nov. 10.—German anti-aircraft batteries at the North Sea naval base of Emden and nearby Ditzum opened fire this afternoon and again late tonight, and there were unconfirmed reports that British planes had been sighted.

There was heavy antiaircraft fire between 3 and 4 p. m. and a customs guard at Ditzum told the United Press by telephone that the firing broke out again at 10:15 p. m. southwest of Emden, presumably close to the Netherlands border.

Air raid alarms remained silent, however.

One unconfirmed rumor heard in Emden said that men had dropped by parachute on German territory from British planes, but this could not be substantiated.

Emden, one of Germany's most important naval bases, is only a few miles from the Netherlands.

The commander of the Emden garrison, reached by telephone, was asked about the gunfire and replied: "I can say nothing about it."

Gestapo Bombing Reported

London (Saturday), Nov. 11 (INS).—At the same time the bomb intended to kill Adolf Hitler exploded in Munich's Buergerbrau, a similar bomb burst in the Gestapo (secret police) hetadquarters in Berlin, it was reported today by the London Daily Express from Budapest.

Carpenters worked all night to repair the damage so that the second bombing would not become public knowledge, the newspaper said.

"Trace Crime to Foreigners" . . . .

Berlin, Nov. 10 (U.P.).—Fragments of the time bomb used in the attempted assassination of Adolf Hitler at Munich Wednesday night have been recovered from the ruins of the Buergerbrau and "actually trace the crime to a foreign country," it was announced tonight.

The official D. N. B. News Agency said Gestapo agents, under Heinrich Himmler, had been rewarded after a sifting of the debris.

"It can be said that an examination of the origin of certain parts of the time bomb actually makes the crime traceable to a foreign country," the agency said.

"It may be said that as far as the metal (of the bamb) are concerned composition of certain parts of the it will actually be possible to prove foreign origin," the announcement continued.

Newspapers reported that the Munich bombing, with its toll of seven dead and 63 wounded, had caused angry demonstrations throughout Germany, "including the Ruhr."

A show window containing a large picture of Hitler was shattered mysteriously last night. Whether the window was broken by a missile aimed at the picture or by accident was not known.

The newspaper of Jropaganda Minister Goebbels, Der Angriff, today published what it called "proof" that the Munich bombing was planned abroad.

The newspaper said that the new "secret weapon" which Britain has been threatening to use against Germany might have been given a try-out at Munich.

The other "evidence" put forward by Goebbels' newspaper included:

A London newspaper at mihnight Wednesday reported in detail the Munich explosion at a time when other foreign newspapers having their own correspondents in Germany still were without news."

(The first accounts in London newspapers were by the British United Press, received by the United Press Berlin bureau directly from Munich.)

Pictures published in the United States showed a revolver attack against Hitler and Hitler lying on his deathbed.

A French radio station declared: "It is said the Munich bomb exploded 20 minutes too late—that is wrong—it exploded seven years too late because Hitler should have disappeared in 1933."

A British news agency has said, "The first bomb against the German distcatorshipEclare d: 'th 0'o many dictatorship has exploded Munich—many other will follow."

Himmler's Gestapo continued to take large numbers of suspects into custody for questioning and claimed to have obtained a number of "most important clues."

Starnes Reports Atlantic and Gulf Need Fortifying

By the Associated Press

Representative Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, who has just completed a 26,000-mile tour of Army establishments, reported today "an acute need" for coast and anti-aircraft defenses "all along the Atlantic and Gulf seaboards."

As a member of the House Military Appropriations subcommittee, Starnes has visited more than 100 Army posts in the United States, Hawaii and Puerto Rico in the last 15 months.

Reporting his findings in a letter to Chairman Taylor (Democrat), of Colorado, of the full Appropriations Committee, Starnes said:

"The fortifications and installations along the Pacific Coast and in Hawaii make those two areas impregnable. Much work remains to be done along the East and Gulf coasts where there are few modern forts and installations."

Asserting that shortages in ordnance and quartermaster corps construction were the chief deficiencies, Starnes said the ordnance situation was the "most critical relative to our national defense."

Duchess Predicts German Revolution

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Duchess Eleanora of Bavaria (right), sister-in-law of Queen Mother Elizabeth of Belgium, arrived in Hoboken, N. J., aboard the S.S. Veendam yesterday with Baroness R. Sentiment Enters Fritz Kuhn Trial

lace, Elmer said Kuhn could do anything he wanted to with Bund funds, "regardless of the by-laws or anything else."

"If money is collected for a defense fund from various parts of the country, Kuhn had a perfect right to pocket it for his own purposes?" asked the court.

"He could use it as he saw fit. Yes," said Elmer.

McCarthy brought the name of Mrs. Florence Camp into the case with ostensible reluctance.

Saying that Kuhn in conversation with other Bund members had referred to Mrs. Camp as a Bund sympathizer or "just a casual friend," the prosecutor added:

"We will show, in his own handwriting, that she was more than a casual friend. His interest was keenly sentimental. We do not want to go into his private life, but we must, in order to show the hoaxes that he perpetrated on the people of the Bund in order to embezzle these funds."

McCarthy previously categorized the thefts charged to Kuhn as "the legal defense fund embezzlement, the Camp embezzlement and the Murray embezzlement."

One of these, he said, involved the withdrawal by Kuhn of $500 for ostensible payment to James D. C. Murray, an attorney, for legal services to several bundsmen—a sum which the prosecutor said was not delivered to Murray.

The "Camp embezzlement," he went on, involved $565 which, he asserted, was used by Kuhn to transport Mrs. Camp's furniture from Los Angeles to New York and then to Cleveland.

"The legal defense fund," McCarthy said, was raised by Kuhn in the name of the Bund for the aid of six members then in trouble with the law.

For this fund, the prosecutor added, Kuhn kept a special book which would show more than $4,000, while a deposit in the Manufacturers Trust Co. of that account showed less than $1,000.

Navy Admits New Ships Defective

through the additions of some top-side military units, the stability proved to be less than is considered necessary for satisfactory service operation, particularly when expendable supplies, fuel, stores and ammunitions have been depleted.

"The overweight has also resulted in a lower freeboard (height of the weather deck above the waterline) when fully loaded."

Shakeup Is Cited

Declaring the difficulties are "less serious than have been described" in the reports cited by Vandenberg, Edison said that there have been "one or two other difficulties" besides those mentioned "which also have been susceptible to corrections." He added that he had effected certain changes in the departmental organization which he hoped would "minimize future recurrences."

"You must recognize, however," the Acting Navy Secretary said in conclusion, "that in the necessity for advancing the building program it is not always practicable to hold the designs until every possibility of difficulty has been eliminated. Unless we are prepared to accept ships in which the factors of safety are made so high that the essential military features and performance have suffered."

It is understood that the destroyers to which Edison referred were 1,500-ton ships of the Anderson type, three of which have been launched. They followed the Craven class, which British experts have praised as superior in many respects to comparable vessels in the British and Japanese navies.

The Craven destroyers carry four 5-inch guns, five anti-aircraft guns, and 16 torpedo tubes, have a cruising range of 8,000 miles and a speed of 40 knots. Planned as an improvement over this group, the Anderson class is said to be even more heavily armed and better protected. This was indicated by Edison's reference to their greater "ruggedness" and the addition of "some top-side military units."

Desire to crowd too much armor on the fast, light craft has resulted in some vessels in foreign navies being dangerously top-heavy. The Japanese torpedo boat Tomozuru capsized in 1934 for this reason, with a loss of 100 lives.

As a result of a series of events, including delays in construction, now said to be overcome, and climaxed by the destroyer defects, Edison recently ordered a shake-up in the department, with shipbuilding functions consolidated under direction of Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson.

Armistice Day Rites to Be at Wilson's Tomb

Bishop Freeman Will Talk, Widow to Attend; Other Services Slated

The spiritual observance of Armistice Day will be marked with impressive rites today and tomorrow in the Nation's Capital churches. Peace-keynoted sermons will be heard, prayers offered and the war dead remembered.

At Washington Cathedral the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, will speak at the annual commemorative services at Woodrow Wilson's Tomb at 3:15 p. m. today.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson and other members of the family, members of the Cabinet from 1913 to 1920, World War veterans and others will gather for the service, arranged under the auspices of the Woodrow Wilson Armistice Day Committee of the District. Mrs. Kate Trenholm Abrams is chairman.

Prayers will be offered by Dr. James H. Taylor, pastor of Central Presbyterian Church, where the late President worshiped during his White House years. The Cathedral choir of men and boys will sing the hymns heard at President's funeral service.

Wreaths will be placed by the sponsoring committee, the Woodrow Wilson Foundation of New York, George Washington Post of the American Legion and other groups.

At 4 p. m. Bishop Freeman will address the fifth annual Armistice Day service sponsored jointly by the Disabled American Veterans, National Capital chapter and the Washington Cathedral staff. It will be held in the great choir. National Commander Lewis Murphy, of the D. A. V., has been invited to make the introductory remarks.

St. John's Episcopal, historic "Church of the Presidents," will hold special exercises today and tomorrow, with Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox arranging the services at 10:55 a. m. this morning. The address is to be delivered by Dr. Oliver J. Hart, rector, and former division chaplain of the First Division, A. E. F. A two-minute period of silence will be observed. Church of the Week

'Awakened Parents' Is Aim Of Northminster's Drive

Northminster Presbyterian Church's emphasis as a community center is demonstrated by girls of Scout Troop 109. Scrap books on cooking are being prepared under the supervision of troop leader, Mrs. C. W. Markward. The girls, who worked for their cooking badges during the last week, are Peggy Markward (left) and Betty Lou Wyss

By Robert Tate Allan

Northminster Presbyterian Church, enterprising Shepherd Park congregation, will climax its four weeks' "Loyalty Campaign" with services tomorrow, and a "victory" dinner bazaar next Thursday.

Twenty thousand dollars is the financial goal of the drive, according to the Rev. Walter E. Price, pastor, who described its objectives as being "to arouse members to a greater spirit of loyalty and more vital interest in the church's contribution to the community, and to awaken parents to the need of a moral and religious foundation for their children's welfare.

"The source of the wave of school vandalism can be traced to inadequate Christian teaching in the home," he said.

Mr. Price pointed out that the campaign is attempting to impress upon the community the real value of Northminster as a material asset, and as an institution fostering religious, social and moral leadership for the better things of life. It is a challenge for "all of us to show our appreciation of Northminster, promoted through contributions from the old church and from those having already subscribed, by a willingness to share in the cost," he added.

$13,000 Raised to Date

He beamed with pride as he revealed that $13,000 has been raised to date in the drive, and explained that the Woman's Auxiliary has contributed more than $6,000 toward that amount. "Moving spirit" behind the project, and back of many other movements in the congregation, the auxiliary is sponsoring the victory function, to begin at 6:30 p. m.

Mrs. J. F. Rose, whom the clergyman characterized as "one of the church's most capable executives," is president of the auxiliary which helps promote missionary and church aid work. She once appealed to the United States Senate for District funds for the now complete Shepherd School. The unit has pledged $1,050 toward the present church edifice at Kalmia road and Alaska avenue northwest.

Mr. Price, pastor since 1933, will preach tomorrow, "Loyalty for Victory Sunday," on "Undertake Great Things for the Lord and He Will Give Thee the Desires of Thine Heart."

Northminster's role as a real community center is reflected in such activities as the Boy and Girl Scouts, and the "Fathers and Mothers" club. Troop 24, the Boy Scouts, led by Scoutmaster John D. Chandler, returned in September after a 76-day, 16,000-mile motor trip through 48 States, Canada and Mexico. The girls meet Wednesday afternoons.

Another consistently growing unit is the Christian Endeavor Society, of which Dr. Darrell C. Crain, prominent District Christian Endeavor leader, is adult supervisor. Frederick Schutz serves as president.

Because the pastor is a strong supporter of wholesome recreation for youth, the parish hall has ample facilities to care for the congregation's social needs, with pingpong tables and other equipment in the basement. There is no harm in dancing in a church parish hall, he thinks, if the activity is well supervised. He himself enjoys dancing.

"It is silly for people to pick recreations that make them feel worse," he commented.

Among his hard-working organizations and their leaders are the Sunday School, Mrs. Channing Walker; junior department, Mrs. Richard Ernst; nursery, Mrs. Darrell Crain; beginners, Mrs. Harrison Somerville, and the men's and women's Bible classes, Dr. and Mrs. William Newsom.

Organ Donated

Although affiliated with another congregation, L. E. Breuninger, prominent local real estate man, has been a loyal friend to Northminster, and donated the present organ. Amplified, the chimes can be heard half a mile away. Alvin W. Hall, of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, is chairman of the church's building committee; Dr. M. C. Bennett is church treasurer, and Hilton Brown, financial secretary. Mrs. Howard S. Miller is organist.

Potomac Heights Church

Sons of God" will be the Rev. Albert E. Gingrich's sermon theme tomorrow morning at Potomac Heights Community Church.

'Catholic Life' Conference Is Wednesday

Parley at St. Paul's; Rev. Albert DuBois Will Lead Meeting

A conference on "The Catholic Life," scheduled for Wednesday at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, near Washington Circle, will be among the religious highspots of next week. The Rev. Albert DuBois, rector of St. Agnes' Episcopal Church, will lead the meeting, in which several out-of town clergymen will participate.

The Right Rev. Spence Burton, S. S. J. E., Suffragan Bishop of Haiti, expects to attend the conference, to begin with instruction at 5 p. m. A dinner will follow another period of instruction at 7 p. m. and an evensong service and benediction will close the session.

Christian Science Topic 'Mortals and Immortals'

"Mortals and Immortals" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow, at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday school is at 11 a. m. All are cordially invited to attend the services including the Wednesday evening meetings at 8 o'clock. The Golden Text is from 11 Corinthians, 516. "Henceforth know we no man after the flesh."

Little Stories about GREAT HYMNS
"SWEET HOUR OF PRAYER"
Rev. Wm. W. Walford
"Sweet hour of pray'r! sweet hour of pray'r!
That calls me from a world of care,
And bids me at my Father's throne,
Make all my wants and wishes known!
In seasons of distress and grief,
My soul has often found relief,
And oft escaped the tempter's snare,
By thy return, sweet hour of prayer."
This hymn, considered the most popular prayer hymn of the 19th century, was written by the Rev. Wm. W. Wilford, a blind minister, in England in 1842. Although handicapped by lack of sight, he possessed a keen mind and in his preaching quoted the Bible accurately, including the references, thus gaining the reputation of knowing the Scriptures by heart.

Golden Jubilee Begins Today At Catholic U.

Clergy and Delegates From 3 Continents Arriving for Rites

Leaders in the Catholic hierachy and delegates from the great universities of three continents will gather today in Washington for a three-day celebration closing Catholic University's golden jubilee year.

Climax of the observance will come at noon Monday with a radio greeting from Pope Pius XII, broadcast in English direct from the Vatican to the university campus.

The jubilee year was opened October 12, 1938, when the late Pope Pius XI, in a special letter to the university, called on Catholic educators to stress the study of civics, sociology and economics in the light of Christian principles.

Roosevelt to Send Letter

A solemn convocation in the university gymnasium will be the setting for the Pontiff's message Sunday. President Roosevelt will send a letter commemorating the university's half-century of service. European colleges, universities and learned societies will register at 10 a. m. today in the Mullen Memorial Library. Their credentials will be presented at ceremonies in the library at 4 p. m.

The Right Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector of the university, will welcome the group. The response is to be made by Prof. George D. Birkhoff, of Harvard, speaking for the oldest institution represented at the ceremonies.

Guild to Present Play

Delegates will be entertained at a dinner in the Wardman Park Hotel at 7 p. m. The Blackfriar's Guild, student dramatic club, will present a play, "Brother Orchid," after showing of a film illustrating the university's history.

The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, will celebrate a solemn pontifical mass at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow in the gymnasium. Seated on thrones near the altar will be Cardinals Dougherty, of Philadelphia, and Villeneuve, of Quebec. Nearly 100 bishops will be in attendance.

Fifty-seven military, patriotic and religious organizations will participate in the Massing of the Colors at 3 p. m. tomorrow in the university stadium. Mgr. Fulton J. Sheen is to preach the sermon.

Dinner Tomorrow

The semicentennial dinner will take place tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Willard Hotel, with delegates, members of the hierarchy, trustees and faculty as guests of the university. Speakers will be the Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, Archbishop of Cincinnati; Dr. George F. Zook, president of the American Council on Education, and Thomas F. Woodlock, editor of the Wall Street Journal. Jessica Dragonette, radio soprana, will sing.

An academic procession, starting at 10 a. m., will open the convocation Monday. The invocation will be given by Cardinal Dougherty, while the Most Rev. Amleto Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, will pronounce the benediction. Thirteen honorary degrees will be conferred.

Cardinal Dougherty will sing the "Te Deum" at 7:30 p. m. Monday in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

A fireworks display in the stadium at 9:30 p. m. will conclude the semicentennial observance.

6-Year-Old Plan Of Nazis Revealed

made to develop substitutes for war materials which might be made synthetically in Germany. From the point of view of foreign trade large supplies of war materials were set aside and economic missions concentrated on developing commercial relations with European countries, such as the Scandinavian, Baltic and Balkan nations, at the expense of overseas trade.

This admission that Germany has been preparing for war ever since the advent of the Nazi regime is particularly interesting in the light of continuous German attempts to blame Great Britain for having caused the war. Prime Minister Chamberlain's appeasement policy at Munich, then hailed as a great contribution to peace, is now interpreted here as a move to delay a war which Great Britain wanted, but for which it was not then prepared. The German people have been assured that Germany has adequate resources for a lengthy war, despite the blockade, but they have not been told that these supplies have been stored because Germany has been preparing for this war since 1933.

Plan Far Reaching

The process of building up reserves, however, did not affect only the importers of large supplies of raw material. Last year wholesale meat houses were told they would not be able to use cold storage space, which they had rented and paid for. The space was requisitioned by the Government for building up its wartime food supplies. Apparently, the war preparations curtailed activity in many lines of business.

The peacetime preparations for war seem to be having some reaction now. Several years ago a large portion of a sum destined for railroad improvement was reportedly diverted to the construction of the new network of speedways, considered of great military importance. Recently, according to neutral observers, an additional strain has been placed on the railroads which have been moving mechanized units of the army, after these had been repaired, from Poland to the West Front. Apparently gasoline is being conserved to such an extent that it was considered more practical to move this equipment by train rather than under its own power. But while the strategic speedways are almost unused, the railroads floated a new 500,000,000-mark loan last week.

Falls Church Program

The Rev. Alton B. Alfather, pastor of the Falls Church (Va.) Presbyterian Church, tomorrow at 11 a. m. will take as his text "What Christ Does to Us." The Pioneer and Fireside, and Round able groups of the Christian Endeavor Society will meet at 5:15, 6 and 7, respectively, tomorrow night in the fireside room.

Finn-Soviet Discussions Stall Again

Basis of Agreement Has Not Been Found, Communique Says

By A. Marcus Tollett.
Copyright by New York Times.

Helsinki, Nov. 10.—It was reported today that the Finnish and Soviet delegates had failed to establish a common basis for further discussions, despite insistent rumors that an agreement had already been reached on the principal points in dispute.

An official communique said "negotiations have not yet succeeded in establishing a basis for enabling the delegations to reach an agreement."

According to a statement by the Finnish Finance Minister V. A. Tanner there has been no discussion on particular points yet, as most of the principal questions are still open.

Thus for the third time in a month Dr. Juho M. Paasikivi, head of the delegation to Moscow, is obliged to inform the Finnish cabinet of the deadlock and to demand further instructions, as the latest reply to the modified Soviet proposals, seems not to have met Stalin's approval. The Finnish delegation remains in Moscow in the meantime.

It is believed here that the Russians insist on the securing of a naval base at the entrance to the Gulf of Finland, probably at Hangoe or a neighboring site. The Finnish cabinet is understood to have refused to consider the Soviet's demand, in its latest instructions.

New Demand on Estonians

Tallinn, Nov. 10.—The strong impetus to assert its nationality in consequence of the Soviet-Estonian pact, took concrete shape today with a demand for the establishment of a separate government department to safeguard their interests. It is believed the proposal is supported by official Soviet quarters endeavoring to strengthen Russian influence.

St. Sophia's to Hold Armistice Service

St. Sophia's Greek Orthodox Church will mark Armistice Day with appropriate rites tomorrow at 11 a. m., under the auspices of the American Veterans of Hellenic Descent. High mass is set for 11 a. m., and a memorial service at 12 noon, led by the Rev. A. Lalousis, assisted by the St. Sophia's choir.

Brig. Gen. W. E. Shedd, jr., assistant chief of staff, representing the War Department; Heywood N. Saunders, senior vice commander; the D. C. Department of the American Legion, and George G. McLeish, department commander, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will take part.

Bookies Hit Again; Pony Wires Cut

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP).—The bookies suffered another kick in the professional pants today.

United States District Attorney William J. Campbell announced that the Illinois Bell Telephone Co. had agreed to disconnect private telephones in every horse-playing parlor in Chicago. He estimated about 700 would be affected.

He made the statement 24 hours after the telephone company had cut off leased wires linking Illinois betting rooms to the Chicago bureau of M. L. Annenberg's Nation-wide turf information service.

Bayonets Hurl Nazis Out of French Line

Two Attacks Reach Main Fortifications; 'Big Push' Seen Today

By Michael Wilson
By International News Service

Paris, Nov. 10.—Two German attacks on the northeastern portion of the front were hurled back with heavy casualties today by French infantry wielding bayonets and hand grenades and aided by artillery.

That these attacks may be a prelude to the long-anticipated Nazi "big push" was indicated in French military circles tonight, where it was pointed out that the Germans always prefer significant dates for their demonstrations of strength and tomorrow is November 11, anniversary of the World War armistice.

Nevertheless, it was stated, French and British strategists have made preparations for any assault the Nazis may launch.

In today's attacks the Germans are believed to have penetrated the French advanced positions and to have reached the primary lines just ahead of the main fortifications of the Maginot Line.

French artillery and machine guns halted the advancing Germans, and then the Poilus were sent in with bayonets and grenades to drive the Nazis back.

The infantry hammered the Nazis back beyond the French advance posts, which were reoccupied, and heavy guns of the Maginot Line pounded the Germans as they retired.

The war ministry communique, No. 136, tonight stated:

"Two local enemy attacks, after making slight progress, fell back under our infantry and artillery fire.

"There was aviation activity on both sides.

"During the second fortnight of October, the French navy held up 30,000 tons of goods destined for Germany.

"During the first nine weeks of the war French controls seized over 200,000 tons of contraband."

Princess' Made Munich Possible,' Letter in Suit Says

London, Nov. 10 (AP).—A letter which counsel said was from Capt. Fritz Weidmann, Adolf Hitler's former adjutant and now consul general in San Francisco, was read today in the breach of contract suit of Princess Stefanie Hohenlohe-Waldenburg against Lord Rothermere, British publisher.

It credited the princess with laying "the groundwork which made the Munich agreement possible."

Asked "is that true?" the princess replied: "Yes."

The letter, described as being from Capt. Weidman to Lord Rothermere, also said Hitler, although it would be unpleasant, would allow her to use his correspondence with Rothermere in her suit.

Roosevelt Plans Relief for Idle Seamen and Ship Operators

extent of which has not yet been determined.

Expansion by the Maritime Commission of its training program for seamen.

Passage by Congress at the next session of an act providing for a special unemployment insurance system for seamen.

Mr. Roosevelt said at his press conference yesterday that he was trying to work out a solution of the problem of idle ships other than by transfer to foreign registry.

He explained that no decision had been reached, but intimated that he wanted the American companies to retain title to the ships.

He emphasized that he was working on the human as well as the property angle of the problem.

He said there was no doubt about the legality of transferring the ships or selling them outright.

Later, he discussed the question of relief with three leaders of maritime labor—Joseph E. Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, a C. I. O. organization; Joseph P. Ryan, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, an A. F. of L. union, and Matthew Dushane, chairman of the Seafarers International Union, also A. F. of L.

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, and Robert W. Bruere, chairman of the Maritime Labor Board, sat in the conference.

Curran Expects Transfer

Afterward, Curran and Ryan both expressed the belief that the application of the United States Lines for transfer of its ships to Panama registry would be granted. Ryan was "convinced" that this would be done.

Some significance was seen in the fact that Curran, who had violently opposed transfer of the ships to Panama registry, appeared to have withdrawn his objection to such a step.

Asked if he thought transfer would circumvent the neutrality act, he said he had a hunch this would be the result, although he did not believe there was such intention. He did not think transfer was the proper way to build up an American merchant marine.

Maritime Commission officials still were of the opinion that the application to transfer to Panama registry would be granted. Whatever action is taken, however, will depend o nthe President. The commission was said to be waiting for the green light from the White House.

No conjecture was advanced as to what alternative the President could adopt. The United States Lines, it was said, can form a Panama subsidiary, sell the ships to this subsidiary, and let it operate them under the Panama flag, or it can sell the ships outright. In either case, the Maritime Commission must give its approval.

British Might Buy Them

One official commented that the company could tie up the ships and go into bankruptcy.

There has been some speculation that the ships ultimately may be sold to the British government. Against this possibility was the President's desire that the American company retain title to them.

Mr. Roosevelt pointed out that the human problem would have to be dealt with in any case. If the ships should be transferred, they still would not be operated by American crews.

Tanker Transfer Legal

Asked about the transfer of 15 Standard Oil Co. tankers to Panama registry, the President remarked that it was entirely legal, and was water ove rthe dam anyway.

Between 25 and 35 ships, he said, will lbe withdrawn from the European trade as a result of the shipping ban. Some of them, he explained, may be used to transport war materials to be added to the Government's stock pile of such materials. The State Department, the President said, is working out with Great Britain an arrangement whereby cotton swapped for rubber will be carried to England in British ships, while the rubber will be brought to this country in American ships.

Ryan said he told the President it had been found necessary to extend the longshoremen's strike on the Atlantic Coast. His organization, he said, will not accept the Maritime Labor Board as conciliators. As a result, an arrangement is being made whereby Labor Department conciliators will take charge of the dispute.

Curran explained that about 1,000 seamen would be taken care of for three months under the proposed expansion of the Maritime Commission's training program. The plan, he said, is to care for about 5,000 on WPA projects, including about 3,000 in the New York area.

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, advocated reimbursement by the Federal Government for losses sustained by American ship owners who have had to withdraw their vessels from European trade because of restrictions in the new neutrality law.

He also proposed that American seamen losing their jobs as a result of the tie-up of ships, be compensated.

At a press conference, he suggested the compensation for the ship lines might be figured on the "basis of their earnings for the past 10 years." This suggestion, he said, was based on the theory that some of the lines would have shown no earnings, or very little, during that time.

Rather Too Intensive

Secretary Hull's suggestion that a prolonged war in Europe would leave this hemisphere in the position of trustee of Western civilization is in keeping with his thoughtful nature. But as it was advanced at the Conference on Inter-American Relations in the Field of Education, many of the delegates must have reflected on some of the difficulties involved.

Civilization is a product of slow growth among peoples with common interests and facilities for a free exchange of ideals. Its transmission from one country to another requires years, if not centuries, of constant intercourse. Civilization, in other words, cannot be exported like frozen mutton. If Europe is on the way toward continental suicide, the American nations will be able to save only so much of its culture as they have already made their own. Actually, then, the problem becomes one of preserving and extending the civilization already established on this side of the Atlantic.

The weakness of the present move to strengthen cultural ties between the Americas lies in its intensive character. A few far-sighted individuals have been preaching Pan-Americanism for many years. But not until the present European war broke out were the common interests of these Western Hemisphere powers generally recognized. Now we are suddenly trying to develop economic, political and intellectual understandings that can be achieved only through decades of intimate association.

As a people we are better informed as to the customs, the history and the culture of Europe than of South America. Likewise, the people of most Latin-American countries are closer in understanding and sympathy to Europe than they are to us. In both cases overseas interests and attachments follow the channels worn by generations of emigration and commerce. Any realistic effort to strengthen our ties with the nations south of the Rio Grande must start from this basis of fact.

A distinctive Pan-American culture cannot suddenly be developed under the stress of war. American solidarity will have to be built from the ground up. A unified American culture will eventually be developed to the extent that the common interests of these countries pull them together. Such a culture will preserve much of what both Anglo-Saxon and Latin Europe have contributed to civilization. But beyond a certain point the development cannot be artificially stimulated.

Still No Boundary

District Attorney Pine and Commonwealth's Attorney Douglas, of Arlington County, have reached a common-sense agreement on the policing of the "no man's land" across the Potomac from Washington. It should be clearly recognized, however, that their understanding serves only temporary convenience and in no sense disposes of the boundary dispute.

For two reasons Mr. Pine decided not to make a test case of the charge of assault with a dangerous weapon against Jerry. Swisher. The complaining witness has disappeared. And even if it could be proved that the spot where the crime was committed is in the District of Columbia, the exact location of the boundary would still remain uncertain. Mr. Pine is undoubtedly wise in concluding that a criminal case is neither a practical nor a conclusive medium for settling a 125-year-old boundary controversy.

The willingness of the Arlington prosecutor to assume temporary jurisdiction over the disputed territory means that police protection will be given property heretofore denied it. But the arrangement is not likely to stand for any length of time without challenge. Any suspect arrested in this area by Virginia police can question their authority. In effect, therefore, Mr. Pine has simply referred the fundamental question to his superior, the Attorney General.

The controversy ought to be settled and a criminal case is not the proper means of settlement. That throws upon the Attorney General a very definite obligation to end this anomalous situation with an original suit in the Supreme Court.

There is some question as to whether that step should be taken while negotiations for settlement of property claims and for purchase of land in this area by the Government are going forward. On the other hand, the prospect of continued law enforcement difficulties in Washington's "no man's land" is a strong argument against further delay.

The Day We Celebrate

Up to this year Armistice Day had a positive meaning of its own. The essential purpose of the observance was not, as on Memorial Day, to commemorate those who laid down their lives in the Nation's battles. Nor was November 11 regarded, like July 4, as an occasion for celebrating the freedom, strength and glory of these United States. The day which closed the last world war was made a holiday primarily to emphasize the universal desire that no such catastrophe would occur again.

For that reason today's commemoration has a hollow ring. And the good fortune of the United States in being at peace does not compensate the sense of strain and foreboding with which the country necessarily regards a very uncertain future. A limited peace as precarious and costly as that which now prevails, for this and other neutral powers, can justify only a very limited rejoicing.

It therefore seems important that Armistice Day of 1939 should be rededicated by every American to something more vital and enduring than a lull of hostilities between wars. It should involve thoughts more far-reaching than gratitude for the present immunity of the United States from the dangers which threaten Holland or Finland. Indeed such rededication is imperative if today's manifestations are not to be a mockery of what was hoped when the guns ceased firing just 21 years ago.

The more ominous the news from Europe, and there is little that is cheerful about it at the moment, the more imperative for Americans to be considering the role of this country in the eventual settlement. For that is a problem as unsolved as the way in which the tides of battle will flow in forthcoming months.

It is recognized that should Germany win the present war the policies of the United States are likely to be very different from those which will govern if the decision goes the other way. And it is also recognized, rather vaguely, that a victory for either side, or even a protracted, vitiating stalemate, will profoundly affect the future of every American home. It is recognized, in other words, that the eventual peace is our concern even though we may argue that the war is not. But beyond that obvious conclusion public thinking has made little or no progress.

There is a feeling that both sides in the combat should state their war aims more precisely. That feeling should be supplemented, perhaps even replaced, by realization that the United States also has a great responsibility in this matter. What, other than the desire to keep clear of spreading hostilities, are the aims of the United States so far as the aftermath of this war is concerned?

Whether or not America should or could have done more to avert the present disaster is a legitimate subject for debate. But of more practical moment is the question of what America can or should do in behalf of the peace which, presumably, will eventually be restored in Europe. And on this issue consideration and discussion are very much in order.

With reasonable good luck and skillful leadership the United States may well fulfill the desire of its citizens and preserve neutrality during the conduct of military operations. It will, however, be far more difficult to maintain neutrality toward the eventual peace. Then, it seems probable, the effort will be to make future large-scale war impossible. If so, what will be the American attitude toward the machinery necessary to validate that widespread desire?

This Armistice Day is an appropriate time to begin examination of these problems. They will not be averted by pretending that no such problems are there. Their effect on the Nation's future will not be lessened by asserting that they are of no concern to us. In our hearts, we all know that the character of the eventual peace is a tremendous issue for America. And we know, further, that whether we give our best thought, or merely play the ostrich, the influence of America will be a most potent factor in deciding the lines that peace will follow.

On November 11, 1918, the people of this country hoped much for the next generation. But they did little to make those hopes come true. On November 11, 1939, there is far less easy optimism about the future. For that very reason there may be more concerted effort to build a world community in which stable peace, rather than temporary armistice, will be a cause of celebration.

Let Congress Worry

Secretary Morgenthau is quite right in saying that the question of raising the debt ceiling is something for Congress to worry about. If that body votes to spend money and fails to provide either taxes to cover outlays or authorization to borrow the required sums, the Secretary of the Treasury cannot be blamed if Government bills go unpaid.

The thing that Congress should be worrying about, however, is not the necessity of raising the present statutory limit upon Federal indebtedness, but the rate of spending that makes that advance inevitable. To refuse to face the consequences of extravagance is an ostrich-like performance which reflects no credit upon our legislators.

If Secretary Morgenthau did not regard himself as "just a paymaster" he might perform a very useful service by throwing his influence against unbridled spending. Since there have been a good many occasions when Mr. Morgenthau has had a less modest conception of the nature of his office, it seems a pity that he should assume the role of a passive executive at the present juncture.

Crop Insurance Deficit

When the crop-insurance program was under discussion fear was expressed that it would become merely another means of putting Federal subsidies into the pockets of farmers. The recent report of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, on its 1939 operations in behalf of wheat growers, suggests that those fears were by no means imaginary.

One out of every four farmers whose wheat crops were insured has received an indemnity for losses. Claims paid, and in the process of being paid, require an outlay by the corporation of 9,461,730 bushels of wheat. Premiums paid into the insurance system by farmers amount to 6,769,120 bushels. Payments by the corporation will thus probably amount to 40 per cent more than its receipts. That is certainly not an auspicious beginning.

It is true, of course, that a single year of experience is not an adequate test of crop insurance. The Department of Agriculture points out that the 1939 wheat yield in the 31 States where the system was in effect was 10 per cent below the average yield for 1926-35, which was used as an insurance base period. In normal years the FCIC expects an approximate balance between indemnities and premiums. And when crops are better than average it hopes to collect more wheat than it has to pay out.

Some adjustments are being made to strengthen the crop insurance plan as a result of this year's experience. The base period on which average yield is calculated is being lengthened from 10 to 13 years, and paid-up applications for insurance must hereafter be made before the crop to which they apply is planted. Leroy K. Smith, manager of the corporation, frankly says that the existing insurance rates and the methods of applying them are experimental.

Apparently the FCIC still aims at keeping its operations on a sound business basis. The record of its transactions this year indicate, however, that this will not be an easy task. Rigorous correction of past miscalculations will be essential to keep crop insurance from degenerating into simply another deceptive plan for financing farmers through the Federal Treasury.

The Gas Inquiry

From at least one viewpoint the order of the Public Utilities Commission for an inquiry into the possible exclusive use of natural gas in Washington is good news. It shows that the PUC is alert to the public interest and is not content merely to keep utility rates at a reasonable figure by the conventional means.

More extensive use of natural gas here has been considered at various times in recent years. Until last year a formidable obstacle stood in the way of such an undertaking. No adequate regulation of the concerns which might furnish such gas could be assured. Since Congress passed the natural gas act of 1938, however, the Federal Power Commission has authority to control the transportation of this fuel in interstate commerce.

The only question now to be decided is whether the best interests of the community would be served by exclusive use of the natural product. That is not a simple issue. Expert investigators will be asked whether a relatively permanent supply of natural gas can be assured, what would be the cost of this fuel to consumers, whether maintenance of present gas-manufacturing plants would be essential, and whether consumers would be forced to buy new equipment.

On the basis of the experts' findings the commission will doubtless make a decision. That is a fair and reasonable means of protecting the public interest. If it can be clearly shown that Washington would be better served by natural gas, both consumers and the distributing company will probably welcome the change.

All of us are working for the Government now. The trick is to get paid for it.

Woman's Work

From the New Orleans Times-Picayune

Something of a sensation is on the loose in Lincoln Parish because a woman actually has submitted herself for jury service. Good men and true there assert that this going-on in their midst is unprecedented. Yet they have been forewarned that the hand that rocks the cradle shall rule the world; as boys they knew where the police power is lodged; and research would have revealed to them that outsiders already were swimming with a tide that was bound, sooner or later, to engulf the Island of Lincoln. In Terrebonne Parish, for instance, only a few days ago, a beauty operator announced for sheriff; and over at Austin, an application to be a Texas Ranger is on file from a lady logger of Oregon.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

To Remain Neutral

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On November 1, the State Department issued a release announcing to the press the names of 26 American vessels that had been searched or detained since war began by the three belligerent powers.

Thirteen vessels have been stopped by British, nine by French, and four by German authorities. Upon occasion an American vessel halted by the British has had its entire cargo seized, and has been prevented from sailing again, sometimes for three weeks. Once or twice our ships have been halted by a British cruiser within the American neutrality zone.

The City of Flint has held the headlines for a week. Protests have been made.

The President has three times announced the proximity of submarines. (We are left to infer that they are German.)

But the British and the French offenses have occasioned no official protest; they have been ignored in the Presidential press conferences, one may search in vain for notice of them in the news.

The sentiment for England and France is so strong that it will require a conscious effort to remain neutral. That effort will be difficult if official emphasis is studiously reserved for the little encounters with Germany and Russia. It will be impossible if only the little encounters with Germany and Russia are recognized as news.

Dies Committee

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read a number of letters and articles in our local papers, by some writers, that seem to resent the work of the Dies Committee.

If we believe in the principles of freedom, justice and democracy, on which our Government was founded, we should be indignant about any attack on our American system of government by the subversive movements that are operating here in the United States.

Is The Press Fair?

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: In view of the fact that the United States has naval bases and fortifications in Cuba and other countries south of us, why is the American press so outraged because Russia is doing the same thing for her own security? Is the press being fair?

For Old-Age Pensions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The welfare of each community is very dependent upon the size of its pay roll. "Thirty dollars every Thursday" or "$50 a month for all over 50," might well be considered in lieu of a pay roll. For example, a small town of 1,000 inhabitants is found to have 10 people eligible for the old-age pension. Their $30 per week approximates a $300 a week pay roll. This will work out, in fact, to be a rotary fund—the butcher, baker, grocer, milliner, dressmaker, the landlord will have a corresponding increase in their business. All will share in the old-age pensions.

Money is a medium of exchange. The old people will not eat it or otherwise destroy it. It will go back into circulation almost immediately for the necessities of life. Why make a bug-a-boo of this happy solution?

The negligible increase in taxation is much more justifiable than many other special assessments for less worthwhile objects, for the prosperity, happiness, morale and self-respect of the whole community will be boosted by this little gesture of brotherly love.

"Mass Of Propaganda"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We are now submerged in a mass of propaganda no different from that which was employed prior to our entrance into the World War. This propaganda would have us believe that world civilization is to be destroyed if we fail to participate one way or the other in the war. This is stupid propaganda, because world civilization will be destroyed much more quickly if we join the conflict.

I make this statement deliberately, for civilization cannot be saved by having "civilized" powers engage in mutual destruction.

It should be evident to all that the present world strife has been brought about for no other purpose except to deplete and weaken the ranks of the higher civilized nations. There is certainly no rhyme or reason why the United States should declare war on any country in order to restore to the international financiers the power of world domination.

Armistice Day And Moral Rearmament

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I venture to send you excerpts from a letter on moral rearmament for Armistice Day sent to the London Times last year by several very prominent Englishmen.

CLARA N. BACK.
Washington, Nov. 9.

(Enclosure.)

Sir: Times of crisis make man turn to God, only to forget Him again when the immediate danger is past. This Armistice Day should teach us, as individuals and as a nation, what 20 years ago we failed to learn. Only so can we escape the final lesson of irretrievable catastrophe.

The great issue that divides the world underlies the more obvious conflicts of party, class, nation, or ideology. In the words of a leading article in the Times of April 14, "Good and evil spirits are working through mankind in every country, and to this spiritual conflict all political and social disputes are subsidiary." When the evil spirits conquer; then the collapse of private and public morals sets in; the spirit of discipline and sacrifice dies; culture grows sterile; science is misused: patriotism is forgotten. The battle for peace must be fought in the hear of the individual, and thus throughout the community, if it is to be won in the world.

Victory in this battle is the one thing needful for the world in which we live. It implies first of all a change of heart. Experience has proved that such a change can take place, and that it comes to those who turn from judging others and their systems to a sense of their own faults and a determination to live under the guidance of God.

The strength of a nation is shown in the courage to admit her own faults. The glory of a nation is to have a creative message for the world. For this we need not only inspired statesmanship but daily inspiration in every business, every workshop, every home. We must teach ourselves to apply practically to conduct the Christian standards of honesty, purity and love, and to make fulfillment of the will of God the touchstone of public and private life. In this task all are privileged to give the service of their lives.

Reenlistment Bonus

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I think a little should be said about the decision recently handed down by the United States Court of Claims, by which 120,000 enlisted men of the armed services won a reenlistment bonus, which has been denied them for the past two years.

I am one of the men that is entitled to this bonus and I feel that the other 119,999 men feel the same as I. There should never have been reason for suit in the first place, but since it became necessary for the lowest paid employe of the Federal Government to go into court in order to collect a just claim, then the least that can be done in order to half-way justify the wrong already done would be to pay this debt without further delay.

I left college in 1931 and came into the Army, after first considering every angle of Army life. I was promised a minimum of $21 per month, with board and lodging, and if I decided to stay after three years I was to be given $75. Having lived in a small Southern town all my life, and looking around me and seeing a lot of my friends employed in textile mills at $10 or 12 per week I began doing a little mental arithmetic and decided I might do worse.

I even took the $75 bonus and distributed it, mentally, over a period of three years and found I had approximately two more dollars per month. I was discharged in 1933 and got an allowance for the time I had served when I reenlisted, but soon came the economy act and my little salary of $21 was cut to $17.85 and my reenlistment allowance was taken away.

But not for long were we to suffer such a fate because there was a new deal around the corner, and suddenly there was money everywhere. I got my $3.15 per month back and everything was rosy. The haircuts that cost me 25 cents I now had to pay 50 cents for, but who cared?—everyone was making money, and there was talk of raising the salary of Government workers.

Everyone was happy but the poor underpaid soldier or sailor, for he, alas, found that although his reenlistment allowance was restored, legally, and there was money enough to throw around anywhere, still they just didn't quite have enough to pay him off, so he must be satisfied to do his month's work, collect his $21 and be happy.

Well, that may be all right, but if they really want to get money back into circulation, I have never heard of a 21-dollar soldier hoarding very much, so I think it would be a good idea to go ahead and appropriate the $14,000,000 and pay off the little debt while the soldier is still able to enjoy it. After all there may come a time when a few contented soldiers here and there may be just what the doctor ordered.

Outraged

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one who has driven automobiles for nearly 40 years in many lands, I have had ample occasion to study the workings of the official mind in matters pertaining to regulation.

I recall, in August, 1912, writing a letter to the London Times denouncing the total absence of any form of regulation or instruction for English drivers at that time. Now I find it necessary to take an exactly opposite viewpoint.

If I had not experienced it myself I would regard the red tape, the needless annoyance, the picayune supervision and the unnecessary complexity of the current tests for District automobiles as inconceivable. I have just been through it, and I know whereof I speak.

A Far Piece

Half a wild gooseberry pie was reason enough for the steep, tortuous climb to the old pasture that lay high on the brow of the mountain, its green rim tilted against the shining bar of sky. Laurel had tangled the slight trail they followed, but what is flushed cheeks and heightened breath when one is 8?

The pasture was removed from the world, a place of slow enchantment that was lush with grasses; it showed streaks of russet here and there where the plumes of the sorrel waved; parts of it were buried under skifts of daisies that made snowy the far corners. No sound reached here except the murmer of the insects wavering about the notched combs of the orange butterfly weed, and this was so familiar that it counted as part of the great stillness.

The delicate odor of ferns came to them, and the warm scent of clover. Poised against the wan strip of sky, so high and so hushed was the meadow that it might have been a fragment of the magic rug that had torn off and drifted away.

They sat under an apple tree on a net of spangled shade with the lunch between them, the curled foils of the grass cool on their legs. She was an outlander, "strange" to the mountains, and with something of a child's fancy she sensed the fairybook quality of the place.

She spoke of it to the boy, lanking far off at the rail fence girdling the high, free boundary, a jagged outline across the smooth throat of the sky.

"We're up in the sky," she had said, and then paused; not a leaf stirred in the ravines below, where colors lay as sharply defined as if brushed on canvas, the green of trees deepening beside the dense shadows purpling the slopes.

"I wish we could float off. We could see all over the world."

The boy leaned forward, a berry flush tinting his browned face. "Could we'uns see the valley kentry?" he hazarded; "could we'uns see the tracks whar-at the trains run?" Eager creulity was in his asking and his eyes were shiney as new chestnuts, their brightness tempered by a warmth oddly placed in one so young.

She had a disdainful gesture for his ignorance. "Trains aren't so much," she belitled. "I'm tired of riding on them." An unknown cruelty lent force to her assertion, and sensing it a gravity came upon the boy.

"I'll go on trains too," he said: he looked steadfastly at her, his eyes unabashed.

"You won't," she contradicted with a child's rudeness. "you'll never go aff the mountains. I've been most every place!" A sparkkling triumph enclosed her words which were meant to damp his insistence. But they failed.

He put his hands on his crossed knees, the pie forgotten. "I'll go furoff too." There was earnestness in his manner, but no rancor. She felt her prestige as an outlander vanishing before his unassailable demeanor. Rising to her knees, she made a flail of her insistence to batter him down.

She cried, "You won't—you never will. I'm going on a ship some day. I'll cross the ocean!"

"I'll take a ship too," he answered her stanchly, "I'll go a fur piece." It sounded like a solemn promise; she could feel the unshakable quality of him. But she wasn't to be outdone.

"You won't," she cried again, "you won't go anywheres."

Of course she was wrong. He did go; it was she who stayed. A few years later she found his name in a paper, one of many names in a casuality list. Killed in action at Belleau Wood.

The mountains are unchanged, the same remoteness enwraps them today massive and impregnable against the inroads of progress. Newspapers and radios are still hard to find in the coves and gulches, so it may be the hill, folk will not observe Armistice Day. They may fail to remember to keep the silence, but this will not mean they are lacking in reverence; no one can accuse the mountaineer of this.

But it would mean that days fall into such identical pattern that time is easily lost "track" of and dates are crossed up. Maybe a week will go by before anyone thinks of looking at the almanac.

If you should happen in when this occurs—walking up the ponderous stone steps that are cupped from the tread of seven generations, and entering the door that swings from pegged hinges, you would see a picture of the boy.

They may have decorated it for the day with a strip of color. It hangs on the hand-drawn logs over the fireboard, beneath the Dechard and Bean rifle-guns that knew the steady arms and true eyes of his forbears. He looks out from a homemade frame and you catch a trace of self-consciousness in his bearing because of the strangeness of his soldier clothes, his blunt shoes and wrapped leggins.

But there is no missing the strength of the hands that curl at his sides, or the warmth of the eyes that steadfastly give back your gaze. They are brown eyes with the sheen of newly opened chestnuts, and as you look into them the thoughts you will have depend, of course, on you.

Perhaps pity will come into your thoughts, and you will think "one of ours" with Willa Cather; or, if disillusionment is yours, you may recall Hemingway's phrase that was like an epitaph for a generation. If you have something of the fatalist, the word "destiny" may enter your mind. But as you stand there your attention is drown by old Aunt Reathy; her keen eye has not missed your interest, and she hobbles out of her corner to stand beside you.

"That thar's Tim's boy," she will tell you, steadying herself on her hickory stick, an ancient resignation quavering in the voice at your side. With a trembling, gnarled finger she points, "he fit in the war an' he haint come back to the mountings. I caint tell yit why he had to go such a fur piece."

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

California 'Sanity'

IF THE AUDACITY of the promoters of ham-and-eggs has stunned Americans in other sections of the country, the trustful tolerance of the rank and file should knock them for a loop. The followers of Huey Long at least got concrete roads to ride upon and school books for their kids, and the Kingfish, by his control of prosecutors, courts and juries, kept his own record and those of his lieutenants technically pure.

Ham-and-eggs, however, came down to the wire on election day with a tremendous following but without a single material contribution to the faithful, and the past performances of some of the geniuses, such as the Allen brothers, were deemed to be irrelevant and immaterial. In Chicago, William Hale Thompson once defeated an opponent in a contest for the office of mayor by frequent repetition of a charge that this distinguished citizen had egg on his necktie, and, in New York, Mr. Hearst aroused great fury against John Purroy Mitchel with an unsupported allegation that a Vanderbilt had called him Jack.

Allen Convicted On Two Charges

IN LOS ANGELES, however, Brother Willis Allen, who trained for demagoguery as the leader at the University of Southern California, was well known to have been convicted in the Federal Court, fined $100 and sentenced to a two-year term of probation on his refusal to say yes or no to a charge of misusing the mails in the promotion of a hair restorer.

The public knew, also, that Brother Lawrence Allen had been found guilty of using "force and violence" on the person of a woman in a dispute which occurred early in the ham-and-eggs movement and had been ordered to pay $25 toward the assuagement of the lady's hurt. The record stated that he struck her in the face with his right hand, almost knocking her down and knocking her glasses over her nose, but the chivalry of ham-and-eggs was such that even the act of striking a lady without giving her a chance to remove her glasses was given negligible weight.

The regrettable misadventure of W. S. Allen, the father of the brothers, with a mythical footpad which led the old gentleman to San Quentin Prison a few years ago, was mentioned more in sorrow than in criticism, although, on the record, the aged sire of Willis and Lawrence would appear to have earned reproof. Allen, senior, was attorney for an estate, and early in 1933, having been ordered by the court to turn over certain funds, nevertheless cashed a cashier's check for $5,000 and with the money on his person had the ill fortune to be held up!

Other Colleagues Also Sentenced

IT WAS a terrible coincidence that the stickup caught him at that unlucky hour—a coincidence which the court was constrained to doubt—and Mr. Allen was convicted, notwithstanding the professional and filial zeal of son Lawrence as counsel in the trail.

The adherents of ham-and-eggs, however, held not the sins of the father against the son, nor even the indiscretions of the sons themselves.

Nor was Charles J. Husband, another important leader of ham-and-eggs, embarrassed by the fact that rather than disprove an indictment charging grave misconduct in a tax case he elected instead to attack the indictment itself on the ground that an unauthorized person had been present in the grand jury room when it was voted. Upheld in this contention, Mr. Husband became one of the most powerful and influential orators in the long campaign against malefactors of great wealth. His case was not similar to that of Willis Allen, to be sure, for Willis was convicted and sentenced, but the candidate who was rejected in Chicago on a charge—perhaps equally faulty—of egg on the necktie may well wish that the electors there had been as broad of mind as the members of ham-and-eggs.

$2,000,000 Loss For Porter Interest

NATHAN T. PORTER, a former banker—indeed, an avowed apostle to the banking system of the money bund—and another economic adviser of ham-and-eggs, enjoyed a good public, too, in spite of the fact—perhaps because of the very fact—that a "thrift" corporation of which he was an officer collapsed in 1932 with a loss of $2,000,000 to a vast roster of small investors. Far from discrediting his economic genius, this failure, on the contrary, merely proved that the system, not Mr. Porter, was at fault and that he was one of its victims.

Four years ago Upton Sinclair had in his tentative cabinet a man who qualified himself as an expert economist and condemned the system with proud recitals of his record of failures in the construction business, banking and the production of moving pictures. He and Mr. Sinclair held that this all went to show that a good man couldn't succeed and that consistent failure was evidence of ability and honesty.

Sanity is a nice institution, to be sure, but so is tolerance. And though it be said that southern California is crazy, it must be allowed in compensation that the members of ham-and-eggs are slow to find fault and quick to sympathize.

Today And Tomorrow

Possible Military Consequences Of Neutrality Law

MY FRIEND, Maj. Eliot, takes me to task for some recent remarks of mine about the practical effect of the neutrality law on the strategy of the European war. The questions at issue are too important to let a misunderstanding develop; and so, while I am entirely prepared to admit that my own conclusions may have been wrong, I feel I must restate, more clearly if possible, the arguments to which he objects.

I pointed out that the neutrality law is a commitment by the whole people that they mean to remain noncombatant in the war, and that the Allied governments must understand clearly that the United States will send them no men, no ships, no credit. They must count on no more supplies than they can carry away in their own ships and pay for out of their own savings. I pointed out also that the embargo on American ships and on credit would inevitably raise many practical problems about what to do with the embargoed ships and about how to cushion the effects of the new financial provisions; and also that there were practical problems to be solved in order to avoid conflicts between the Allied purchases of munitions and the American arms program.

LIPPMANN

Other Problems Bound To Arise

THE CONTROVERSY over the transfer of American ships to Panama registry broke out after my article was written and in type. But it was evident that practical problems of this sort were bound to arise; and it is certain that there will be many others. It is also evident, I think, that the problems of ships, finance and armament production will be insoluble without arrangements with the Allied governments and, in all likelihood, with other neutrals. For example: To take ships out of the European trade and put them on other routes will require some sort of understanding with the nations which are already doing the trade our embargoed ships would like to do. To put our exports with the great belligerents on a strictly cash basis will raise many intricate financial problems between this country and the whole sterling area.

These are the realities of the problem, and in holding to a strict and faithful administration of the letter and spirit of the neutrality law, we shall be successful only if we take full account of the realities. This much Maj. Eliot would perhaps not dispute. In any event he does not discuss it. What he objects to is the conclusion about the strategy of the war which I drew from this description of what the neutrality law means.

Our Commitments Clearly Defined

MY CONSCLUSION was that in its dealings with the Allies, our Government must never let them forget that the law limits the assistance they can obtain in this country to the munitions they can buy for cash and can carry away. I argued that insofar as they need American help, they must adopt a strategy which is suited to the very limited help which they can get. Therefore, they must not use up their men in offensives like those of 1914-1917. For they will not this time get the help of an American expeditionary force. Therefore, they must conserve their resources. For this time they will not get private credit as they did before 1917, nor Government loans as they did after 1917.

The letter and the spirit of the neutrality law place sharp limitations upon the help the Allies can obtain here. These limitations, I argued, are such that they require the renunciation of an offensive strategy of great frontal attacks and call for reliance upon a defensive strategy of blockade, counterattack, and diplomatic pressure.

Maj. Eliot's objection is that we cannot afford to tell the Allies how to conduct the war because if the defensive strategy fails, "We are inevitably committed to throw in our full weight to retrieve the disaster which we have brought upon them." I cannot agree. We have defined our whole commitments in the law which Congress adopted, and our obligation now is to make clear beyond all misunderstanding what that law says and what it implies. I think it is of great importance that the Allies should understand now what the neutrality law means, and that they should not adopt a different strategy under the illusion that the fundamental decisions of the law are in any important respect alterable.

Allies' Strategy Of Waiting Will Save Lives

Warning Necessary For Their Interest

WHAT MAJ. ELIOT calls a dangerous suggestion on my part, I call a clear and prudent warning to the Allies not to misunderstand the meaning of the American law. I regard this warning as necessary in their interest and in our own; and realizing the temptations which sympathy and enthusiasm will create, it seems to me desirable that the Administration should become fully conscious of how strictly the law limits the total assistance which the Allies can obtain in this country.

This was the argument and the purpose of the article. Now that I have reread it, I wish I had made the argument so plain that Maj. Eliot could not have misunderstood it. Particularly, I wish I had not seemed to suggest to him that I was talking as an armchair strategist. For what I tried to do was to interpret the neutrality law by pointing out its practical military consequences.

I happen to believe that the defensive strategy is a sound one, and I base that view not on military consideration primarily, but on an estimate of the political situation. It goes without saying that I may be wrong. But the problem of grand strategy in war is not, as Maj. Eliot seems to think, one that can benefit only to "professional military opinion." It is a political problem in which the military factors are, of course, of great importance. But they are not of exclusive or decisive importance.

Humane Impulse Prompted Warning

PERHAPS I WAS ill-advised to write with so much conviction on a question that no one can speak about with certainty. I can plead in extenuation only that I am moved by the memory of the mistakes of the professional soldiers in the World War, and of the insoluble political problems which their errors caused; and also I am moved by the horror of the prospect of sacrificing several millions of British, French and German young men in an offensive war of frontal attacks on land, and by the feeling that after such a destructive war, a good peace and a sound reconstruction will be immeasurably more difficult.

Perhaps it is a mistake for a noncombatant to advocate any kind of strategy, defensive or otherwise, in a war in which his nation is not going to become engaged. But it cannot be wrong, I believe, to make clear, dotting the i's and crossing the t's, that what the Allies can obtain here under the neutrality law is no more than that very limited assistance which fits a defensive strategy.

Hitler More Secure Now

By Mark Sullivan

Killing Not Allied Aim

THE TWO SENSATIONAL events that occurred in Europe this week were at first widely interpreted as omens looking toward peace. But they were not. The best information and the best judgment in America is that one of this week's events makes for greater prolongation of the war, and that present conditions as a whole point in that same somber direction—indefinite duration of the war, so far as can now be foreseen.

It was natural that the attempted assassination of Herr Hitler should have been interpreted hastily as an omen of cessation of war. It was assumed that if there was within Germany enough hostility to Hitler to express itself in attempted assassination of him, there may be enough to set him aside by legal and orderly means, or by some sort of coup d'etat. And it is well known that if Hitler were out of power, Britain and France would like to make peace with the German people.

Their position is that they cannot negotiate with Hitler because Hitler does not keep his promises. They would welcome the chance to treat with a German government with which they could make a dependable, permanent peace.

Hitler More Secure In Power Now

BUT THE LIKELIHOOD of a German government headed by some one other than Hitler is now more distant. As the victim of attempted assassination, his followers will now support him even more fanatically. Instead of serving Britain, the attempt on Hitler's life postpones the only condition in which Britain and France could make the peace which both would like to make. It was silly of the Nazis to say the attempt on Hitlers' life had come from Britain. Even if any attempt on Hitler's life were successful, it would serve neither the Allies nor the hope of peace. Hitler as a legend might be even more potent than Hitler alive. Of course, Hitler driven into exile, as the Kaiser was in 1918, would be a different thing. That would point toward peace.

Within Germany, no one knows what dark intrigues may be under way. We do not know if the attempt on Hitler's life was the act of a single fanatic, or reflected some group large enough to be important. In either event, Hitler saved is now more secure in power. To that extent, peace is more distant. For the Allies have so clearly pictured "Hitlerism" as the thing they fight against that they can only make peace after Hitler has either abdicated or been removed from power by civil uprising or been defeated in war.

The other event interpreted as a portent of peace was the plea and offer of mediation by Belgium and Holland. As a gesture toward ending the war, that meant just about nothing at all. Belgium and Holland did what they did merely because they are desperate. Their civil populations, especially Belgium's, suffer rather more from the war than do the civil populations of the combatant nations.

Soviet Aid Makes Calculation Impractical

BELGIUM IS a manufacturing nation, heavily dependent on seaborne traffic for its raw materials. And the sea as a highway is almost closed. Ships bound for Belgium are especially liable to interference on the ground of contraband, because goods that reach Belgium may go on across her boundary to Germany. Belgium-bound ships are seized by the British because they contain what Britain defines as contraband; other ships are detained to search them for contraband; submarines and mines menace all ships. The narrow strip of water that is Belgium's sea-lane to the world is almost impassable. Her internal distress, and also Holland's, is almost unbearable. It was this condition, practically alone, that inspired the desperate plea that the war be stopped. The reasons that motivate these two small neutrals do not greatly weigh with the mighty nations that are at each other's throats.

Whatever is to be the outcome of this war, whatever forces may bring it to termination, are more obscure in this tenth week than on the day of beginning.

Among other reasons is the surprise, the mystery, that was introduced when Russia came to Germany's aid. That upset all the early calculations and continues to make future calculation practically impossible.

If you must find one island of hope, one fair prospect in a somber world, recognize it in the signs of political sanity and economic recovery now emerging in the United States. To keep this country secure from infection by the way or by the ideologies that in large part gave rise to the war—that is at once America's hope and every citizen's duty.

Zeebrugge Digs In

Flanders Town Prepares For Worst

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Zeebrugge, Belgium.

WITHIN ARTILLERY RANGE of a potentially hostile Holland frontier, vulnerable as a Barcelona to bombing or shelling from the sea, Zeebrugge—Germany's U-boat base in the last war—is digging in today against all eventualities.

Nothing disturbs the digging of air-raid trenches on the North Sea coast. Nothing delays mine-laying details off Zeebrugge harbor and the celebrated breakwater. The anti-aircraft batteries about the harbor and the massive guns of Guillaume II batteries to the north near Knocke are manned 24 hours a day. Zeebrugge, of course, is within a minute's hedge-hopping range of both airdromes—now militarized—east of Ostend and northeast of Knocke.

Zeebrugge's Harwich Channel service has been halted for weeks, the famous "Mole" inoperative. Essentially a resort city, apart from some industrial shipping and the Belgian naval base, Zeebrugge's hotels have been closing after the holidays. Now they are almost shut down. M. le Patron is to be seen sitting dolefully just inside his doorways watching vainly for visitors who do not arrive. The scattered residential section is deserted. All the young men are in service, most of them on the Holland frontier. Cafes are shut and only the small, new restaurant at the station and a few pensions around the corner are still functioning, their clientele made up of occasional passing soldiers and the workmen on the air raid trenches.

ZEEBRUGGE, like the rest of Flanders, caught a hopeful breath at the beginning of the Russo-German conversations dealing with the Balkans. Splendid radio reception on the North Sea brought news bulletins of the progress of these Molotoff-Ribbentrop talks tumbling through the speakers of these Zeebrugge receiving sets in English, French, German, Flemish and Dutch. The hope was short-lived. Living in the midst of war threats sharpens the political wits of a people. A mere examination of the map shows the difficulties in a German operation—or even a German-Russian offensive, through the Balkans against the western powers.

Zeebrugge, like the rest of Flanders, fell back upon realism and the conclusion that sooner or later, and probably sooner, the German army will strike through Holland and Flanders at the broadened French fronts. Because Zeebrugge is the northernmost coastal Belgian roadhead and railhead of any consequence, because of her narrow but splendidly deep harbor behind the breakwater—and because that harbor was seized upon by Germany as the ideal U-boat base in the last war, her rugged Flemish citizens expect the worst.

It is a nuisance to have a sunken ship across the mouth of Zeebrugge harbor. The Allies sank one there before to bottle up German submarines. Much better to stop the Germans before such feats are necessary. Thus, the anti-aircraft concentrations, the coast defense guns, the humming coastal airdromes, the mine fields and mined dykes and roadways to the north.

IMAGINE Long Island's Montauk Point in February, Galveston beach in deep winter—or almost any low-lying seacoast holiday resort—and you have a fairly accurate picture of Zeebrugge today. Add the blue air-raid lights, the air-raid defenses, an occasional speeding military motorcycle courier, smoking destroyers patrolling the North Sea out beyond the breakwater, a low-flying war plane just offshore in the sunset and the atmosphere is complete.

Eastward and southward of Zeebrugge lie some of the richest farmlands in all Flanders. The Bruges-Zeebrugge rail line skims swiftly across one vast green tablecloth of richness. The harvests are coming in rapidly, now, and the peasants work overtime in the fields. Every hour lost may bring hunger in the coming weeks if it is necessary to abandon this land to waters from the canals, to evacuate the flooded countryside leaving it to an invader.

A swift two-ply attack through Knocke and inshore at Zeebrugge would deliver a tremendously important railroad into enemy hands. It almost happened that way before. The Knocke - Zeebrugge-Bruges line is a steel spear pointed at the heart of Belgium, bent sharply at this, the key position. The rapid electric line southward from Le Zoute, through Knocke, Zeebrugge, Blankenberghe, through Ostend to la Panne, is still operating, although mines are being laid under all bridges and connections with the steam lines inland.

ALL THE COAST south of Zeebrugge is in the hands of the military. The good golf at Le Coq and Westende exists no longer. There are no gardeners to be spared from army service. Scotch gardeners attend the British war memorials on the coast, as they do at Ypres and Nieuport. Rollers from the tennis courts which used to be thronged in summer by carefree Britishers on holidays from the "City," are being used to tamp wet sand under the top layers of brick and steel atop air-raid refuges.

Zeebrugge, like all Belgian frontier and seacoast cities, is suspicious. Secret police demand the passports of all strangers within a few hours after their stop at the isolated station. Visaes are closely examined, questions asked.

Thus, Zeebrugge, preparing realistically for the worst, re-enactment of the countless invasions of Flanders and Belgium. "One if by land, two if by sea—" Zeebrugge has to prepare for invasion from the air as well. It is not a happy place.

Pedestrian, Who Chose Cell to $2, Freed by Court

Florian Lewis Frillman, 42, of 1108 Forty-fourth place southeast, was freed on a suspended sentence in Traffic Court yesterday after spending the night in a police station cell rather than post $2 collateral on a pedestrian control regulation.

A Navy Yard metal worker, Frillman was taken into custody at Eighth and M streets southeast, by Policeman J. E. O'Neal and was charged with failing to observe a traffic device.

The defendant told Judge John P. McMahon that he resented the manner in which he was arrested and that he was taken to the Fifth Precinct station in a patrol wagon. He testified that O'Neal stopped him after he crossed the street and asked for his driver's permit.

Back Home Stuff

Dear Hi—The recent Army maneuvers in the Adirondacks bring to mind the old Connecticut war maneuvers of 1912, when the Second Connecticut Regiment was on the Red side, attacking the Blue Army defending New York. The khaki-clad lads from home spent several weeks squirming on their stomachs through the streets of the communities of the Litchfield Hills, including Newtown, where the principal battle was "fought." I was a "war correspondent" for the Journal-Courier. I marched with the old Sarsfields. I think you rode a horse from an Orange street stagecoach. Jim Hagerty was captain and George Manning a lieutenant of the Sarsfields. It was a great Irish outfit that could lick the Grays with one hand tied behind its back.

The home troops captured the only airplane that took part in those maneuvers. The plane ran out of gas and the pilot had to land right in our midst. After the maneuvers, on the way home, I met Col. Nod Osborn, publisher of the Journal-Courier. I showed him my shoes, which were worn so completely through that they looked like a pair of Joe Connolly's spats. The following week Col. Osborn sent me a pair of shoes, No. 12, from the New Haven Shoe Co., and made of vici kid, which made me the first "war profiteer," and, as far as I know, I still hold the record as the only reporter that ever got anything out of a home-town newspaper publisher.

Sweden Denies Buying Goods In U.S. for Nazis

Purchase Gain For Own Use; Explains Ban On Re-exports

By the Associated Press

Sweden's increased purchases in the United States are going for her own use and are not being reexported to Germany, well-informed Swedish sources said yesterday.

They pointed out that Sweden's purchases here have not been augmented merely since the European war broke out, but in the first nine months of this year were $16,500,000 higher than in the same 1938 period. Commerce Department figures showed that in September Sweden bought $8,695,000 in American goods, compared with $3,628,000 in September, 1938.

Statistics at the Swedish Legation disclosed that Sweden's exports fell from 216,000,000 crowns in August to 179,000,000 crowns in September. This is a drop of 29 per cent and is a decline of 15 per cent from September, 1938.

Swedish sources said that the country has import controls over virtually all products, and re-export is not permitted without a government license.

They accounted for the augmented imports from the United States by the dislocation of other normal sources of supplies and by foresighted stepping up of purchases in advance of the war.

U. S. to Keep Old Treaty Give Calico to Indians

The Federal Government, in fulfillment of a 145-year-old obligation, next week will begin distribution of more than 20,000 yards of calico to Iroquois Indians in New York State.

A treaty signed November 11, 1794, promised the six nations an annual grant of $4,500 worth of "clothing, domestic animals, implements of husbandry and other utensils suited to their circumstances" in return for their "peace and friendship."

In recent years the Government has allocated $2,700 for the purchase of calico for the New York Iroquois, while making a cash payment of $1,800 to members of the Oneida tribe, who moved to Wisconsin.

Miss Evelyn Pierce, employed in the Washington office of the Indian Bureau, is among the 3,332 New York Iroquois entitled to the traditional bolt of calico.

Farm Income Expected to Be Ten Billions

Officials Estimate It Will Hit Highest Figure Since 1937

By the Associated Press

Federal farm officials predicted yesterday that farm income would reach $10,000,000,000 next year, the highest since 1937, if industrial activity increases as is expected.

Included in the estimate are receipts from sale of agricultural products, the value of products consumed on the farm, and Government benefit payments which this year may total $750,000,000. This year's gross farm income is expected to be about $9,500,000,000. The peak since the depression was $10,424,000,000 in 1937.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics has forecast a "moderate" upturn in economic conditions in 1940 as a result of demands arising from the European war, "less cautious" buying policies on the part of businessmen generally, and prospects for a "considerable" increase in the output of automobiles and other durable consumers goods.

This general upturn, the bureau said, should result in enlarged consumer demand for farm products and consequently a larger agricultural income. The improved demand probably will be greatest, it said, for those products that enter rather directly into consumption, such as meat animals, dairy products, poultry and fruits and vegetables. Some commodities, particularly pork, lard and dairy products, may benefit from increased foreign demand.

"Most farm families," the bureau said, "will be able to buy somewhat better living in 1940 than they bought in 1939 if national income from agriculture increases as anticipated."

While pointing out that farm production costs may rise and the cost of things farmers buy may increase, the bureau said the anticipated increase in farm income would more than offset these advances to give rural families an increased purchasing power.

Armistice Day Twenty-one Years After

By Scott Hart.
Post Staff Writer

THE names of 54 Georgetown University students who died in the World War were read aloud in the sun-splashed quadrangle yesterday between the strokes of St. Mary's Bell.

Most of the students came to the annual ceremonies and stood with bared heads as the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, regent of the Foreign Service School, said the world's greatest crime since the Armistice is the sweep of hate.

He sat, in ecclesiastical robes, on the porch overlooking the quadrangle; and as name after name of Georgetown boy was read from the honor list, his head inclined on his chest and his eyes assumed a long remembering.

"While those names were being read, there came to my memory the actual physical appearances of many of those boys," he said, when the small bell from its wooden base had rung off the last name.

Just what would they inquire now? he asked. "I think they would say that during the twenty-two years the outstanding crime of the world has been the cult and rise of hatreds."

He told of his recent visit to Europe. Sand bags and "hideous-appearing gas masks were in evidence." Wars would be not only against armies, but civilian populations as well, he observed. "Is it now possible that human sanity can do the same thing over again?" he asked.

"This is a time for cool heads and steady hands at the ship of state . . . As love begets love so hatred begets hatred," he was saying.

He concluded with a long glance at the thickly crowded Georgetown boys, standing on ground where other Georgetown boys had rallied twenty-two years ago for war.

A bugler blew taps from the base of the porch; beyond the quadrangle another bugler followed on the after-notes and the strong wind carried the sounds away.

A cadet squad fired three rifle volleys, loud sounds after the soft notes of the bell that was rung by Frank Lauro to the names read by Dexter Hanley, and the softer prayer for the dead boys.

Predatory Men Are Unworthy of Respect, as Illicit Intimacy Is Coward's Device, Says New Yorker

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Passing through Washington the first of this week, I bought a copy of The Post and read your column containing letters on the question of pre-marital relations. I cannot understand how any normal, respectable, unmarried woman can retain respect for a man who asks her to take the risks involved in such a relationship. Though knowledge of contraceptives is pretty general, their effectiveness is not certain and the unmarried woman who trusts them runs great risk of pregnancy.

But aside from that, a woman who permits such intimacy must suffer a great lowering of self respect, and the man, notwithstanding his protestations of continued devotion, always is disappointed when the girl or woman yields. Also, the woman who permits pre-marital intimacy surrenders the chief hold she has on a man's loyalty.

All men have strong emotional reactions, easily aroused, and the one thing that stays most of them from promiscuity is their belief in the purity and loyalty of sweetheart or wife, plus their own sporting instinct to play the game fifty-fifty. If, therefore, the girl has weakened, his belief in her suffers a blow and he no longer has that brake of trusting loyalty to keep him from yielding to the constant temptations he faces.

The "Young Man Reader" who speaks about the delay in marriage caused by modern economic conditions is talking through his hat. Pre-martial continence is not harmful, as any conscientious doctor will tell him, and emotional control is splendid training in will power. The additional freedom in expression of affection following engagement, in the way of innocent "necking" and kissing, should satisfy any real man. This writer was not married until he was 31, had known his future wife for four years and was engaged to her for more than a year, but never suggested any irregular intimacy.

My advice to any sensible young couple in love, provided they are in good health and the man has a steady job (even though the wage is small), is—"get married." Notwithstanding all the nonsense about inability to maintain a home on a small salary, countless thousands of brave young men and women are doing it and building characters as well as homes. Don't try to "keep up with the Joneses." A man and woman who are in love and indulge in the intimacies of marriage without the legal right to do so are cowards—nothing else!

As I look at the multitudes of bright faced, intelligent, good looking young women in our streets and homes, I dislike to think of them as being so weak or foolish as to permit any man, for any reason, to deprive them of their chief charm.

NEW YORKER.

Will Always Regret Untimely Capitulation

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read with interest the letter of October 31, from the high school girl who asks what attitude to take toward her predatory boy friend; also, the letters from other readers who either justify or condemn his demands. It occurs to me that I might be doing some one a favor, if I were to relate my own experience.

When I fell deeply in love, so deeply that I knew that there was only one man in the world so far as I was concerned, all of the usual scruples were discarded. We could not get married (we said) because of financial difficulties and parental objections due to our extreme youth. Being young and dumb, we did not realize the chances we were taking and so there were the usual subsequent developments which forced us to get married immediately.

I have been married for several years and during that time my husband has never reproached me in any manner, holding himself equally to blame. But the point is this: my husband and I were certainly no better off financially when we finally got married, than we were when we had said that we couldn't afford to marry. Further, although he has never referred to our pre-martial intimacy, I have often felt unhappy about it.

I am convinced that we failed to approach our marriage in a wise and normal manner, and I think the fault was primarily my husband's, since he was the aggressor. So, as long as I live, I will have that nagging resentment toward my husband in mind, for creating the situation. Of course, I was just as much to blame, probably. But I feel that such a thing should never have been asked of me, and that my husband took advantage of my devotion.

So, if this young lady wishes to have a clear conscience for the rest of her life, I advise her to steer clear of any entanglements. This is her only guarantee that in the future neither she nor her prospective husband will have any reason for reproaching themselves. Very truly yours,

EXPERIENCED.

Christian Training Vs. Christian Character

DEAR MARY HAWOFTH: "Another Man Reader," your correspondent of November 7, seems to confuse Christian training with Christian character. The two are quite different. The true Christian is one who has found God . . . and who is striving to make his life conform to the teachings of Jesus. Temptations frequently assail the Christian and he frequently falls . . . but if he turns to God for forgiveness, he will surely receive it . . . for in God the Christian has a "strong habitation whereunto (he) may continually resort" for strength to resist temptations of all kinds; for comfort in sorrow or stress; for joy and for peace.

"Another Man Reader" is doing what we all incline to do, namely: "measuring ourselves by ourselves and comparing ourselves among ourselves"—a practice which St. Paul tells us is not wise. Let Christ be the standard always. Also, while love and encouragement should be given to those who may have gone astray, it is a duty of the Christian character to maintain high moral standards for himself and others, always . . . Sincerely yours.

Room Decoration Depends on Focal Point of Interest

IT'S HARD for a lady to decide whether to inch up on her friends or to knock them cold—in the decoration of her home, that is. Or at least it would be hard if the decision came at her all in a heap. Actually it's a pretty instinctive matter of her personal type, a question of self-expression almost subconscious. If she's a flashing beauty with a flair for dramatic costumes and extreme styles, then, of course, brilliance is her decorative dish. If, on the other hand, she's a gentle mouse with quiet tastes and illusive charm, she'll instinctively turn toward the subtle decorative fashions.

In that more spectacular room, there'll usually be one rare and unusual piece of furniture as a focal point of interest, overshadowing the other furniture. A breakfront cabinet, for instance, on its shelves old Coalport or Lowestoft . . . or an imposing secretary with crotch grained front panels. Or a grand piano . . . or an electric organ . . . or a fine painting. And the colors would be unexpected, provocative. There will probably be mirrors and smart big lamps.

While the subtler room will be merged together so that no one thing stands out of a pleasantly coordinated whole. So, in this room, the desk would more likely be a kneehole type of eighteenth century. Her colors would be subdued, dusty, interesting, with no strong contrasts but a definite theme.

Potomac Shad and Popovers, Says Rep. Sol Bloom

Mr. Bloom

Potomac shad is also the greatest contribution to the table in the estimation of Representative Bloom.

Sunday lunch is a meal Mr. Bloom enjoys immensely, and he thinks that broiled Potomac shad with butter sauce, piping hot popovers, new boiled potatoes, sliced tomatoes and a mixed fruit in combination with sponge cake and pistachio nuts, and coffee is just what a statesman would order.

Representative Bloom says that back in his New York days, the St. Regis would pay $1 for each bone found in boneless shad served. Now, in Washington, he says he doesn't have to be concerned about bones in the shad, as the poultry market where the Blooms buy their shad can be relied upon to prepare it boneless. Broiled shad, Mr. Bloom thinks, is better than baked shad. Approximately a 3-pound shad is bought, put in a hot oven under the broiler for about 19 minutes and served with butter in sauce made with lemon juice and chopped parsley. Mr. Bloom's motto about food is "the better it is, the less you should eat."

The delicate small bread so crisp and crusty with a hollow center that Representative Bloom likes with his shad, is easily made, but must be handled and baked quickly. The following is a recipe for making the popovers.

Popovers

Sift 1 cup bread flour and add ¼ teaspoon salt. Beat in a separate bowl until frothy 2 eggs and add ⅞ cup milk and 1 tablespoon melted butter. Stir the liquid slowly into the sifted ingredients. Beat the ingredients until they are well blended, but no longer, then pour the butter in popover pans which have been oiled and heated in an oven of 40 degrees. Fill pans only 2-3 full. Bake the popovers in an oven of 450 degrees for 20 minutes, then reduce the heat and dry them in a moderate oven 250 degrees, for 15 minutes. Remove them at once from the pans and serve at once.

Psychic Treatment Sometimes Helps Asthma Patient but Cannot Be Depended Upon

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Asthma is caused by spasm of the bronchial muscles, and those are controlled by nerves of the vegetative nervous system. In the old days one treatment was to tie a pig to the bottom of the asthmatic's bed. The grunting of the pig, imitating his own grunts, was supposed to shame the asthmatic out of his condition.

I remember a young man who was brought to the city for consultation of a severe case of asthma. As he was sitting in the train in the station waiting for a wheel chair, he saw from the window a casket being wheeled along the station platform. He thought it was for him and it frightened him so the asthma left for several years. It does not do, however, to take such isolated cases as models for the treatment of asthma. Asthma is real and cannot usually be cured by recourse to psychic treatment.

Do you recognize the virtues of hydrotherapy, and can it be given at home?

Hydrotherapy, or treatment by water, is one of the finest methods of treatment in the modern physician's armamentarium. Certainly I recognize it. The modern North American home is splendidly adapted to different forms of hydrotherapy. In Boston, in Colonial days, it was a prison offense to take a bath without a doctor's prescription. But all that is changed. Some methods of treatment by water that can be used in the modern home are:

a. The cold pack. A sheet wrung out of cold water is spread out on the bed over two blankets. The patient lies down on it, and the sheet is snugly wrapped around the body from neck to feet, then the blankets wrapped over it. Good for a cold, a fever, arthritis, sleeplessness, kidney disease, as a heart tonic, scarlet fever, skin diseases, itching.

b. The compress. Throat compress—A strip of linen, three inches wide, is wrung out of cold water and laid over the throat, being brought up to the ears and held in place by a flannel bandage that goes over the head (not around the throat to the back of the neck). Good for laryngitis, tonsilitis and any form of sore throat. Chest compress—same principle. Joint compress—same principle. Splendid for any sore joint, gout or rheumatism.

c. The douche. If you have a shower bath, rapidly alternate hot and cold water. This gives a massage to the circulation. It is called the Scotch douche. Failing this, get in a bathing suit in the back yard and have the hose turned on you. Indication—heart disease, high blood pressure, neurasthenia, fatigue.

d. The affusion. Sitting in the bath tub, have a pitcher of ice water poured over the body from a height.

e. Stupes. Hot clothes to the abdomen. Grease the abdomen first with vaseline to prevent burning, then apply flannel cloths wrung out of the hottest water that can be endured. Good for flatulence, any abdominal pain, gallstone colic, pelvic inflammation in women.

Return of the Hero

"Hello, Grace. Say, it's good to see you again! . . . Well Grace, you just look like you always did. That's funny! And you've been right here at Grubb's all that time!

"Me? . . . Oh I've been knocking around everywhere. Just landed in New York last week . . . Oh, on a Dutch freighter . . . Well, you see I had a pretty hard time getting out of Poland . . . Yes, the Soviet had a price on my head.

"What? . . . Oh no, I was in Rumania when the war started . . . Yes, you know Carol's an old sidekick of mine. I used to play poker with him and Mme. Lupescu when he was in exile. Well, anyway, as soon as war broke out I went up to Warsaw to see what was going on—the fact is I was doing a little private investigating for the State Department—and the darned Reds picked me up.

"What? . . . Oh yes, I got out all right. I always get out . . . Oh, a guard helped me. A fellow I'd met with the Red Army in China.

"China? . . . Oh yes, I've been in China two or three times since I saw you. It's certainly been a long time, hasn't it? . . . And to think you've been here at Grubb's all that time! . . . Well anyway, as I was saying, I was in China this last time for over a year, helping Chiang Kai-shek with his propaganda . . . Yes, you see I knew him years ago when he was only a war lord.

"Rumania? . . . Oh no, I was in India before that . . . Yes, I wanted to see Gandhi. I've helped him a lot with his propagaanda. Then I was in the Forbidden City of Tibet for awhile . . . Yes, I'll say it was darned hard to get into! I was one of the first white men allowed to enter. I had to get out of Asia, though, on account of the Moslems. They had a price on my head. Anyway, I wanted to get back into Europe as I saw things were beginning to pop.

"Munich? . . . Oh, yes, I was there when the Big Four met. After that I went to Rome . . . Thought I'd better. The Nazis don't like me . . . No, they have a price on my head. I put one thing over on them, though. I helped an Austrian countess and two beautiful Jewish girls escape from Vienna . . . Yes! . . . Oh, I got them across the borderline into Switzerland and then fixed it up with the French foreign office to get them to Paris. I hear from the countess every now and then.

"Rome?" . . . No, I didn't stay there long. Well, you see the Italian government has a price on my head . . . Oh, I just exposed some of the monkey shines of Mussolini. Well, after that, I decided I'd better go down into Africa to shoot some lions . . . What? . . . Yes, I had a sweet time there, but not as sweet as when I came back to Monte Carlo. Cleaned up around $25,000 there in one night . . . Yes. But I dropped it all in Paris the next week.

"I guess that was the biggest haul I ever made at one time, though I did win $11,000 once from Nick, the Greek, in San Francisco . . . Yes I guess I'm pretty lucky. I've made a lot of money in my time—and lost it. I guess I was worth around $500,000 when the crash of '29 cleaned me out.

"I'm on the way up again now, though . . . Yes, that's why I'm here. It's a Government deal. This is all confidential, but I ought to make a couple of millions out of it if it goes through. I can tell you one thing, though—when I get this money, I'm going to settle down and take care of it.

"Well, Grace, you certainly are looking fine. And to think you've been here at Grubb's all these years! You know it's mighty fine to see you again. You just don't appreciate old friends till you get away from 'em.

"Well, I'm going to be around for a few days anyway, Grace, and I'll see you again. I'll drop by tomorrow. And, by the way, Grace—well you know I got in a crap game last night and got cleaned out of $167—all my spare change. I wonder, Grace, if you could loan me 50 cents—until tomorrow?"

Your Figure Madame!

—By Ida Jean Kain

Exercise Does Magic Things to Average Girl's Bulges, Hollows

IF YOURS is the average figure, you need to take a tuck in the waistline, slim the hips and perk up your posture . . . What you need is special exercise!

In these remodeling jobs, exercise is a magic worker. It rounds out hollows and it tones down bulges. With diets adjusted to the individual, the fat girl, the thin girl and the normal weight can all take the same daily dozen and be delighted with the results.

The exercises given today are suited to the needs of the average figure—regardless of weight—and you will like the changes they make in your proportions. The first exercise strengthens the pectoral muscles which support the bust and also fills in the "salt cellars" at the base of the throat.

Proper Position

POSITION: Stand in erect posture with the arms extended in front of the body, shoulder width apart, arms straight, palms turned down and hands gripping small objects of equal weight—such as lightweight dumbells.

MOVEMENT: Gripping and reaching forward with the arms, lower the right arm about one and one-half feet, and as it is raised again to shoulder height, lower the left arm. Repeat 12 times, very slowly, gripping and reaching throughout. The grip-reach is what benefits your figure.

The exercise given next firms the bust and slims the waist.

POSITION: Stand with the feet wide apart, body held perfectly still, and tighten all the groin muscles. Hold the arms straight out at the sides.

MOVEMENT: Without lowering the arms or moving the hips, move the entire torso to the right, hold, return to position, and move to the left. Keep the trunk upright—do not bend sideward.

In the third exercise, you bend and stretch to slim the waist.

POSITION: Stand erect, arms stretched high overhead (but with no hunching of the shoulders).

A Woman's New York

New York, Nov. 10.

A COUPLE of months ago I wrote that Hall and I were joyously hoping to catch the Steamer Gordon C. Greene for a 20-day trip down the Mississippi to New Orleans and return. Then things piled up on us, and we could not make it. Though a warm-hearted Nawl yuns lady, Mrs. Joseph W. Scott, did write us at once, described the city of her heart, and urged us to look her up when there.

Alice Hughes

But now, thanks to the kindly and generous Lovinia Knight, of Akron, Ohio, we find that we did take the junket after all, at least vicariously. Noting my enthusiasm for it, she booked passage, and very charmingly wrote me about the trip. Gosh, how we envy her! She counted 87 passengers aboard the skiff, from no less than 13 States. Miss Knight was amazed at the deserted banks for many miles. She says that for hours after passing Cairo, Ill., and turning down Ole Miss', they didn't see a house or a boat, only big birds scared from the trees by the passing monster. It seemed another world. There was no radio aboard. No newspaper, no telephone. Was there a war?

Of course, there was a lot of pleasant conversation, what with 87 people on a small sternwheeler. A few standard pastimes, like shuffleboard, bingo, and games in the evening for those who stayed up. But most early to the hay, and early up. Miss Knight says the Greene family is wonderful. Capt. Tom Greene, owner of this packet and others. He plans the menus, even, as well as running the ship, while 'Mc' Greene, retired now as a pilot, is hostess for the whole shebang, making a fourth at bridge and gives everything the homey touch. The river was very low, and they were afraid they'd get stuck on a bar. The days in New Orleans were happy. But it was the peace and freedom from fret that fascinated and delighted them. Gosh, doesn't it sound like something? Miss Knight tells me the ship takes off again at the end of January for the New Orleans Mardi Gras. And this time Hall and I shall be aboard, if we're spared.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN — Baba Hutton, the Princess this and the Countess that, has been blinding many citizens with airing with a precious stone as big as a plum. It was reported an engagement gift from handsome Bob Sweeney, now rated as probably No. 3. But Baba told Dixie Tighe that she bought it herself from an Egyptian pasha for a song.

What did you think of Ruby Keeler's confining her divorce complaint against Al Jolson to 20 words! A good example to the ladies who tend to spill their legal squawks and moans over 20 pages of foolscap! I think tapping Ruby must have been trained on a tabloid newspaper writing picture-captions!

"It's Not What It Used to Be"—
Advertising Is Definitely Better

Advertising, the science of creating and widening consumer demand, is "not what it used to be." It, too, has progressed with the times. Advertising appeal has been refined, its accuracy increased, its pulling power enhanced by time and experience.

"A Guide for Retail Advertising and Selling," now in its second edition, and published by the National Association of Better Business Bureaus, is truly the textbook of its field, a definite milestone in advertising progress.

As, for years, Better Business Bureaus have served and protected the consumer, business itself now has, through this book, the yardstick of what the intelligent consumer rightfully expects.

Priced at $1.00 per copy, it proves the ability of business through Better Business Bureaus, to accept and discharge its responsibilities to the public. Advertising is "not what it used to be;" it's better because—

Count Cyril Tolstoi And Wife in Capital

Kin of Novelist Take Apartment For a Month; Daughter Is With Them, As Is Bilingual Pekinese, 16

SOONER OR LATER everybody in the world seems to come to Washington, and among the interesting visitors here this month are Count and Countess Cyril Tolstoi, who have taken an apartment at the Shoreham for a month.

The Tolstoi family is a large one, and all are related to the famous Russian writer. Count Cyril, however, remembers having seen his noted cousin but once in his life, when he was only 6 years old and the family was all gathered in St. Petersburg. He cannot recall ever having met the writer's daughter, Countess Alexandra Tolstoi, who formerly made her home in Washington.

After fleeing Russia with the rest of the nobility when the revolution came, Count Tolstoi settled in Paris. There he met the Countess, the former Gwendolyn Currie, of Detroit. Since their marriage they have divided their time between that city, New York and Paris, but this year, like so many other people, have canceled their stay in the French capital.

With them here is Countess Tolstoi's daughter by a previous marriage, Miss Gwendolyn Seyburn, who made her debut two years ago in Detroit.

The Tolstois were also accompanied by the Countess' two dogs, Porgy, a rare black Pekinese, and Peter, who is 16 years old. Peter came over from Paris with his mistress, and at first would only answer to commands given in French, but by now he has mastered the English language.

The Count and Countess have only been in Washington once before.

Cocktail Time Gay Yesterday

A series of cocktail parties for out-of-town visitors, brides-to-be, a debutante and a post-deb made yesterday afternoon a hectic one for members of Capital society.

A small, but very festive, 5-to-7 function was that given by Mrs. Kenna Elkins at her residence on New Hampshire avenue for debutante Marilynn Himes, pretty daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Himes, of Prospect Hall, Frederick, Md. Miss Himes gathered in about 15 of her friends, including several sister debs, for a cocktail and cup of tea, and Mrs. Elkins, whom she is visiting for the season, was on hand to greet the guests.

Miss Jane Eustice, who "came out" a season or so ago, gave a party for members of the younger set at her mother's apartment at 1835 Phelps place. The hostess wore a black velvet tea gown and the apartment was decorated with chrysanthemums and other autumn flowers.

Miss Marie Whitehurst, whose marriage to Hamilton O'Dunne will take place next Thursday afternoon at a quiet ceremony at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Whitehurst, was guest of honor at a pleasant party given by Mr. and Mrs. Royce Powell at their home in Georgetown. Friends of the young couple gathered in the upstairs library, with its paneled walls decorated with old hunting prints. A bright fire blazed away on the hearth, and Mrs. Powell poured tea from a place on the sofa while her husband served as bartender.

Judge Eugene O'Dunne, of Baltimore, who will be best man at his son's wedding, drove over for the party, and Mrs. Whitehurst and her other daughter, Miss Harriet Whitehurst, who will be maid of honor, were also present. The pretty bride-to-be was gowned in a soft blue woolen frock, fashioned with pleats from neck to hem, and a flower toque. Mrs. Powell wore a street length beige silk frock.

Baron Koranyi Here on Business

Among the guests was Baron Istvan Koranyi, who is well known in Washington. His wife is a niece of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Luke McNamee, frequent visitors here, and his sister, formerly Baroness Edith Koranyi, married Edwin Wilson, now our Minister to Paraguay, several years ago in Paris. Baron and Baroness Koranyi have recently returned from a residence of over a year in Buenos Aires and are now making their home in New York.

Texans and former residents of that State, as well as many Washingtonians, gathered at the Cosmos Club yesterday for the interesting party given by Mr. and Mrs. George Wythe in honor of Maj. J. R. Parten, chairman of the board of regents of the University of Texas. Maj. Parten has been here for the State Department's conference with leading educators.

The hostess wore a black velvet gown with lace ruching at the throat. Also in black was Mrs. Morris Sheppard, wife of the Senator, who wore a matching toque with her frock.

Others there were Mrs. Henry F. Grady, in a wine-colored ensemble with a toque of the same shade; Aubrey Williams, Mr. and Mrs. McFall Kerbey, Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Warren, Dave Williams, Miss Ruby Black, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Bechham and dozens more.

Mrs. McC. Knox To Return Here

Mrs. McCook Knox, who has been in New York City for several months, is expected to return to her apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street, within several weeks. Mrs. Knox is at the Savoy Plaza with her mother, Mrs. Anformer Kathleen Knox before her son G. McCook.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Smith, who make their home on East Seventy-third street in New York are planning to visit Mrs. Knox for the Thanksgiving holiday here. Mrs. Smith was the marriage several seasons ago.

Mrs. James Pilling Goes to New York

Mrs. James Pilling, of Georgetown, has taken an apartment in New York for the winter.

Last week Mrs. Pilling entertained at a dinner party in honor of Thomas D. Luckenbill, whose marriage to Miss Junia Culbertson will take place here on November 18.

Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Dunham, she was the former Ruth Pilling, are en route from their home on Long Island to Sarasota for the winter.

To Return Here

Dr. and Mrs. Hedley H. Moore and Mr. Bernard N. Hyman, of Markham, Va., who spent several months in Washington last winter, are expected to arrive here next week to take up their residence at the Wardman Park Hotel for the season.

Sra. de Munilla To Entertain

Senora de Munilla, wife of the Military Attache of the Cuban embassy, will entertain at a large buffet luncheon today in her apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street.

The guests will include Mrs. James H. Hughes, wife of Senator Hughes; Mrs. Sol Bloom, wife of Representative Bloom; Mrs. Abner Drury, Mrs. Barnet Nover, Mrs. Robert Watson, Mrs. Willard Kochendefer, Mrs. William B. Shearer, Mrs. Leo Norris, Mrs. Edgar Morris, Mrs. Thomas Cajigas, Ms. Frederick J. Benton, Mrs. Vernon B. Lowrey, Mrs. Consuelo A. Seoane, Mrs. N. H. Darton, Mrs. William O'Donnell, Mrs. T. A. Carpenter and Mrs. Charlotte Ruth.

Also Mrs. Paul P. King, Mrs. William Chapman, Mrs. Charles H. McEnerney, Mrs. Newton Brewer, Mrs. Webster Dawley, Miss Anna Archibald, Mrs. A. B. Archibald, Mrs. T. A. Schneider, Mrs. Marion Bailey, Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. M. W. Porter, Mrs. Onan Hydrick, Mrs. Osmun Latrobe, Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. Francis S. Whitman, Miss Vera Bloom, Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, Mme. Malda D'Aulby, Miss Jean Elias, Miss Betty Hynes and Miss Marie McNair.

Princess to Open Apartment Here Next Saturday

Because of the war abroad, Princess Margaret Boncompagni will return to the Capital earlier than usual this season. She will arrive next Saturday and will reopen her apartment at the Mayflower.

The princess usually spends the summer and part of every winter in her apartment in Paris, returning for her annual visit to the Capital in the spring.

Archaeological Society to Meet

The Archaeological Society of Washington has issued invitations to a meeting Wednesday evening, November 22, at the Sulgrave Club, with Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis as hosts.

Thomas Tileston Waterman, formerly associated with the restoration of Williamsburg, will give an illustrated address on "Early Williamsburg Buildings and the Sources of Their Design in England."

James A. Farley Leaves for Home

Postmaster General James A. Farley left Washington yesterday following the Cabinet meeting, for his home in New York, where he will spend the week-end.

Mr. Farley will return to town on Wednesday to be present at the dedication of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial and will return immediately to New York to speak over a national hook-up radio program on Thursday evening.

Knights of St. John Auxiliaries Will Install Tomorrow

A banquet will be given tomorrow night at Hotel Twenty-four Hundred preceding the joint installation ceremonies for all new officers of the ten auxiliaries affiliated in District No. 1, Knights of St. John Ladies' Auxiliary.

Supreme Trustee Mrs. Omi X. Bingman, District president; Mrs. Wilfred P. Ross, and Deputy Mrs. Emma Panzer will be the installing officers.

The Rev. Dr. John K. Cartwright will speak. The Rev. Louis F Miltenberger, chaplain, will give the invocation.

A musical program will be given by Mrs. Leona Neilson and Mrs. Blanche Faulkner, accompanied by Miss Teresa Keller.

In charge of arrangements are Mrs. Emma Panzer, chairman; Mrs. Cornelia Jones, Mrs. Gertrude Casseen and Mrs. Eleanore Kelley. Mrs. Blanche Myers will be toastmistress.

Hostesses are Mrs. G. Steuart Bingham, Mrs. Mary Burke, Miss Rose Moore, Mrs. Anna Ryan and Mrs. Eugenia Hugin.

Omundsons Fete Ice Follies Cast

Dr. and Mrs. Walter B. Omundson were hosts at an informal buffet at their home, 2000 Connecticut avenue, last evening, entertaining members of the Ice Follies cast, most of whom are Minnesotans, and officers of the Minnesota State Society, of which Dr. Omundson is a governor.

Clifford S. Stephens, society president, has completed arrangements for the Michigan-Minnesota football party at the Lafayette Hotel this afternoon at which members of the Ice Follies cast will be honor guests.

Return to Mayflower

Mr. and Mrs. James Farmer have closed their farm, Lakeland, in Lakeville, Conn., and returned to the Mayflower for the season. Mrs. Farmer's mother, Mrs. Douglas P. Birnie, returned to the hotel earlier in the month from Connecticut.

Aileen Harris Honors Cuban

Miss Aileen Havliin Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Harris, entertained at luncheon yesterday at her home, 3107 Woodland drive, in honor of Mrs. Charles H. Ruth, jr., the former Senorita Craziella de la Campa, whose marriage took place October 14, at Havana.

Other guests were Senorita Eleanor Campbell, whose engagement to Enrique Gacitua, recently was announced; Senorita Maria Theresa Essalante, Senorita Rosie Castro, Mrs. William W. Everett, jr., Mrs. C. H. Ruth, sr., Miss Mary Katheryne Spinks, Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Miss Margaret Clark, Miss Ruth Quinn, Miss Dorothy Nicholson, Miss Betty Crane, Miss Jeane Howard, Mrs. Walter Edwards, Mrs. Benjamin McElhinney, Mrs. Frank C. Cook, jr., Mrs. Frank Clinton, Mrs. Ulle C. Linton and Mrs. Edward M. Pickford.

From out of town came Mrs. G. Maxwell Anmor, jr., and Mrs. Oliver Fowler, of Baltimore; Mrs. James S. Clifford, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Nixon L. Ballard, of Quantico, and Mrs. Larry Barroll, of Stockholm, Sweden, who, with her husbands, is visiting here.

Capital Notables To Pour Tomorrow At Authors' Tea

Members of Capital society will pour at the tea to be given tomorrow afternoon by the Authors of Books for Children Club in the apartment of Mrs. John Gilman Bullard at the Kennedy-Warren. The Minister of Guatemala, Adrian Recinos, will head the receiving line.

The pourers include Mrs. Robert C. Horner, Mrs. Charles Calhoun, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, Mrs. Earle Clarke Calhoun, Mrs. Stanwood Cobb, Mrs. Charles E. Cooke, Mrs. Pennell C. Kirkbride, Mrs. J. E. Saugstad, Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith, and Mrs. Marie D. Werner.

The guests have been invited to bring a children's book as a contribution to a model library for underprivileged children at Opportunity House.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins are spending the week-end in Pittsburgh. They will return on Monday.

Mrs. Charles McNary, wife of Senator McNary, will arrive here on Wednesday for the season. They will occupy an apartment at the Mayflower.

Capt. and Mrs. Otto C. Dowling are visiting Col. and Mrs. W. F. Nicholson at the Shoreham for several days and are en route to the West Coast for the winter.

Loudons Give Dinner for Van Zeeland

Mrs. Werlich Entertains for Mrs. Lionel Atwill

Paul van Zeeland, former premier of Belgium, was guest of honor at a small, inormal dinner given last evening by the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon at the legation in Fifteenth street.

Mr. van Zeeland, who recently returned from a stay in New York, is the guest of the Belgian Ambassador, Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, at the embassy in Massachusetts avenue. He is representing his country on the International Committee for Refugees.

Another dinner last evening was given by Mrs. McCeney Werlich in honor of Mrs. Lionel Atwill, daughter of Mrs. Edward Stotesbury, of Philadelphia, Washington and Palm Beach. Mrs. Atwill, who plans to return to Hollywood soon, motored over from her home in Green Spring Valley.

The Canadian Minister, Loring Christie, was ranking guest in the company of 14, which also included the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Basil Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, and Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, jr.,

Mrs. Atwill will entertain at dinner tomorrow evening for some of her Washington friends at her Green Spring Valley home.

Grace Church Holds Cotillion

The annual ball for the benefit of the guild of Grace Episcopal Church was held last evening at the Sulgrave Club and attended by members of official and residential society.

The Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde received the guests. He was assisted by Miss Mary Leroy Stanton, of Bennettsville, S. C., who is a student at Martha Washington Seminary. Miss Stanton was gowned in ivory satin and carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

At midnight a floor show was presented by the Marian Chace dancers. It was followed by a cotillion figure led by Charles Mason Remey and Miss Stanton. The guests were given varicolored balloons as favors, which they held aloft during the figure. The cotillion was concluded with a grand march into the dining room, where refreshments were served.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Wade Hampton Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings Price, Baron and Baroness Maximillian von Pagenhardt, Samuel Duval, Thomas Rogers Drake, Miss Cornelia Bowie, Dr. A. Contee Thompson, Maj. and Mrs. Richard LaGarde, Charles Hatton, Miss Virginia Wright and several members of the Japanese embassy staff.

Also present were Mr. and Mrs. Francis Cecil Thames, of Indianhead, Md.; John W. Cleaton, Mrs. William Wheatley, Miss Gene Rabb, Dr. Colin MacRae, Maj. and Mrs. Davis B. Mrs. Parker To Vacation at Edge Plantation

Mrs. Chauncey Parker, jr., and Mrs. Walter Edge will leave by motor Monday for Thomasville, Ga., to vacation at the Edge plantation. Mrs. Edge will spend the week-end in Washington.

Shortly after the shooting season opens November 25, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchinloss will leave to visit Mr. and Mrs. Edge until December 2, when she will go on to Florida to visit Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis at their plantation near Tallahassee.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

Middleburg Hunt's Fall Meeting Today Will Witness Six Races

THE GLENWOOD COURSE, with fresh brush jumps and flags flying, is ready for the running of the six races of Middleburg Hunt's annual fall meeting, which starts at 1:30 o'clock today.

Mrs. Amory Perkins is one of the many entertaining at luncheon before the races. A number of her Washington friends, including Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, are motoring down. Mrs. Perkins' house guest is Mrs. Donald Ryerson, of Lake Forrest, who is here for part of the fox-hunting season. The largest luncheon will be given by Miss Charlotte H. Noland and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Sands at The Covert, Miss Noland's home. Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Iselin and their daughter, Miss Nancy Iselin, are entertaining a number of out-of-town persons for luncheon at Wolver Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. George Garrett have as their houseguests for teh week-end Mr. and Mrs. John Hanes and Simpson Dean. Mr. Dean is M. F. H. of Vicmead Hunt, near Wilmington, Delaware. William Hulbert's houseguests include his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Victor du Pont, of Wilmington. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Young are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Jim Ryan, who have a number of horses running in today's race. Mr. and Mrs. Newell Ward are entertaining at a house-party as is Miss Mary O. Lyon. Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Parker are entertaining at dinner this evening at The Shelter, the house they leased from Mrs. Perkins for the season.

NUMEROUS AFTERNOON parties are planned following the races. Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Read will give a large cocktail party, as will Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sabin. Tonight Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Davis are entertaining at dinner in honor of their house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Gould and Barney Baldwin.

Practically everybody will attend the dance to be given in Buchanan Hall, Upperville, by Mrs. John Hay Whitney for the benefit of the Red Cross of Fauquier and Loudoun counties. Carolyn Duffield Will Be Married To Oliver Pendar

Of wide interest to society in Washington, as well as New York, is the announcement by Mrs. Pitts Duffield, of New York and Paris, of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Carolyn Pitts Duffield, to Oliver Pendar, son of Mrs. Oliver S. Pendar, of New York, and the late Mr. Pendar.

The prospective bridegroom recently came to Washington to work in the office of the general counsel of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, and the couple have taken an apartment in Georgetown, where they will make their home.

Miss Duffield is the daughter of the late Pitts Duffield and a granddaughter of the late Justice McKenna of the United States Supreme Court and the late Gen. Henry M. Duffield, of Detroit.

Mr. Pendar, the brother of Miss Jean Pendar, attended St. Paul's School at Concord, N. H., and was graduated from Harvard in 1927, and later from Harvard Law School. He is a member of the Hasty Pudding and the A. D. Clubs of Harvard and the Harvard Club of New York.

Miss Duffield recently came to Washington to viist Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Woods, of Georgetown.

Antwerp Club Leader Now a Refugee Here

All but Two Members of American Women's Organization Have Fled to U. S.; Two Others Also in Capital

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

A new club leader has come to Washington—Mrs. Melvin Doolittle, president of the American Womens Club of Antwerp, Belgium, who, with all but two of the 35 other members of the club, now is a war refugee in this country.

Mrs. Doolittle, whose husband is an executive of the Ford Motor Co. in Antwerp, had made arrangements long before the threat of war became imminent to bring her daughter here to school. She hurried her preparations only a week in order to sail aboard the liner President Roosevelt, which proved to be the first of the refugee ships bringin gAmericans home. Mrs. Doolittle, who is a uaker, enrolled her daughter in the Oakwood Friends School at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and came to Washington as a volunteer of the American Friends Service Committee. She is serving as assistant to Mrs. Alfred Lowry at International Student House, 1708 New Hampshire avenue.

Two Other Members Of Her Club Here

Two other members of her club also are here, Mrs. Sidney Alberti, with Dr. Alberti and their daughter Yvonne, and Mrs. Milton Brown, who brought her three children to America to place them in school. The other members, all American citizens or wives of American citizens, now are located in different parts of the United States. Most of them have come to be with relatives or to place their children in school while their husbands remain in Antwerp, looking after business interests and awaiting development of the war.

Mrs. Doolittle has been here only a week, but lost no time in visiting headquarters of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. Her enthusiasm for club work springs from the gratifying achievements of the American women's organization in Antwerp.

For some time it was the only organized group of American women in Belgium, although there now is another, which was formed two years ago at Brussels. The program of the Antwerp club chiefly has been one of charitable and philanthropic work among Americans there. It has cooperated closely with the Belgium Y. W. C. A., which was founded just after the World War by Countess Helene Goblet d'Aviella, who has many friends in Washington, and visited here last year.

Stranded Americans Given Assistance

Many Americans stranded in Antwerp have ben given assistance. An American child, deserted by his mother and whose father had not funds to send for him, was cared for over a period of five years until his father could have him sent to the United States. A widow and two children were cared for for four years. The club also responded to a request for aid from a librray at Vervie and provided an English teacher for a mining district near Charleroi.

In the midst of the problem of foreign-born wives of American citizens seeking Amgrican citizenship, the clubwomen have interes ed themselves in efforts to facilita e naturalization of these women.

Mrs. Doolittle is devoting herself to her new interest at International Student House. Among residents there are Chinese, Japanese, French, German, Danish, Spanish, Russian, Cuban and Mexican students.

Patriots Must Save U. S., Says

Patriotic societies should follow up their resolutions with action, Mrs. Grace L. H. Brosseau, past president general of the Daugters of the American Revolution, declared yesterday in an address before the committee on national defense, of the District D. A. R. at the Mayflower Hotel.

Sharing the program with Commander Leland P. Lovette, of the press relations department of the United States Navy, she called on the women to make themselves heard in their campaign against forces seeking to destroy the American Government and institutions.

Mrs. Brosseau cited periods in history from the time of King Solomon when selfish leaders had brought chaos upon nations in their efforts to break down ordered government, private property and the rights of inheritance, patriotism, marriage, family and of religious worship.

"Our institutions of Government and the Constitution are being systematically attacked and as sure as we draw the breath of life, both will be liquidted if we don't fight for their preservation," she declared.

The destruction of private property is being accomplished through taxation and encroaching Governmetn ownership and competition, she said, adding that abolition of inheritance had almost been accomplished and that abolition of patriotism was being attempted through holding up to ridicule those who sought to preserve the traditions of their country. She said subtle influences also were at work in an effort to undermine those other fundamentals of American life, the family and religion

Mrs. Brosseau decried the "shameful way" some American columnists had "jumped on Lindbergh for daring to defend his country" and asserted that "Oorothy Thompson overstepped her mark in criticizing him."

Mrs. Frank H. Towner, committee chairman, presided at the meeting which was attended by 300 members and guests.

A. A. U. W. to Hear Mlle. Naoumoff

The International Relations Committee of the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women will have Mlle. Wena Naoumoff, sister of the Minister from Bulgaria, as guest speaker at a luncheon today at 1:15 p. m. at the clubhouse. Mme. Dimitre Naoumoff, wife of the minister, also will be a guest.

Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard, will lead the discussion after Mlle. Naoumoq's talk. Mrs. John Donaldson, chairman of the International Relations Committee, will preside.

Women Outline Plans for Defense Session

Army, Navy, Air Officers to Appear On Program

Plans for the fifteenth annual National Defense Conference to be sponsored by 36 women's national patriotic organizations, January 31, February 1 and 2, were outlined yesterday at a meeting of the advisory committee, at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, of Cincinnati, president of the National Society of New England Women, the organization designated this year to direct the conference, presided. The program will follow the lines on which it has been planned in other seasons, with discussions of various phases of national defense by officers of the Army, Navy and Air Service and officials of the Government. This year, because of the European war, the sessions are expected to assume added significance.

In conference with Mrs. Hobart yesterday were presidents of other societies who are serving as vice chairmen of the conference: Mrs. William Corwith, of New York, new national president of the American Legion Auxiliary; Mrs. Lou Ella Allen, of Ennis, Tex., president of the women's auxiliary to the Spanish American War Veterans Association; Mrs. Robert Eugene Ridenhour, of Concord, N. C., president of the American War Mothers; and Mrs. G. Walter Williams, of New Bedford, Mass., president of the American Gold Star Mothers. A fifth vice chairman, Mrs. Rhoda Moss, of Seattle, Wash., president of the Women's Relief Corps, was unable to be present.

Other members of the advisory committee who attended yesterday's session were: Mrs. David Good, of Oseola Mills, Pa., president of the Dames of the Loyal Legion, who wil lserve as secretary of the conference. Carroll McGuire, of the District, president of the American Women's Legion of the World War, who will serve as treasurer; Miss Alice D. Butterfield, president of the New York Colony of New England Women; Mrs. Grace L. H. Brosseau, of Greenwich, Conn., past president general of the D. A. R., who represented the Rhode Island Patriots, on the committee; Miss Charlotte C. Aycrigg, of Ridgewood, N. J., past president of the National Society Daughters of the Revolution; and Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, who also represented the Dames of the Loyal Legion.

All of these women will participate in the Armistice Day observance this morning and Mrs. Corwith will be one of speakers. Following the services in Arlington, she wil be among the guests of honor at the annual luncheon given by the Alexandria Post of the American Legion for Auxiliary and Legion officials at Gadsby's Tavern. Among others who will be honored there, will be Mrs. Ellen Louise Warren, new national chapeau of the Eight and Forty; Mrs. Helen McCabe, national chairman of public relations for the Eight and Forty and Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, past national chapeau of the organization. Mrs. Corwith and Mrs. Warren were honor guests last night at the Armistice ball of the Forty and Eight at the Raleigh Hotel.

Nazi Scouting Planes Driven From Britain

R. A. F. Downs Flying Boat; Big Air Blow Expected Today

By Russell F. Anderson
International News Service Staff Writer

London, Nov. 10.—German warplanes today invaded several points along the coasts of the British Isles, but were beaten back by Royal Air Force squadrons. One squadron forced a huge Dornier flying boat down into the North Sea.

It was the most widespread series of attempts to reconnoiter British coastal areas yet made by Germany's air force since the war began, and it suggested to London military observers that Fuehrer Hitler may be planning some gigantic blow at Great Britain from the air tomorrow, Armistice Day.

In anticipation of this possibility, all Britain's defenses were held in readiness tonight.

Simultaneously, official London quarters sharply discounted a report, published in the United States, that a Royal Aair Force fleet today attacked Germany's North Sea base at Emden and landed parachutist troops near that seaport.

British antiaircraft batteries roared at the invaders all the way from the Shetland Islands down to the Kentish coast.

The crew of the Dornier military seaplane, forced down by air force speedsters, were rescued by a small boat and taken prisoners. The flying boat went to the bottom.

In all of the day's fights, the R. A. F. planes suffered no casualties, it was announced in an air ministry communique.

An earlier communique stated that a second German plane was engaged by R. A. F. fighters, but escaped in a bank of clouds.

In the morning a German plane, believed to have been a Heinkel bomber, was driven from the Shetland Islands by heavy antiaircraft fire.

Auxiliary Ship Lost

A communique issued by the admiralty disclosed the disappearance at sea of the 655-ton British naval auxiliary ship Northern Rover, carrying a personnel of 27, including 4 officers and 23 men.

The admiralty stated the vessel was "considerably overdue and must be presumed to be lost." Relatives of the men who vanished with the ship were notified.

Reports from the continent telling of hasty military preparations in the Netherlands, Belgium and Switzerland fed a growing belief in London that Hitler may come forth with a sudden stroke, possibly through Holland, to bring his forces within easier striking distance of England or to outflank the French and British lines in France.

A high-ranking member of the British foreign office staff said:

"Such a step would so shock the world that Hitler would suffer defeat, however successful the military operation might be."

A leaf out of the Community Chest's year-round book of human service was presented by Charles M. Fyfe, executive of the four-branched Washington Boys Club.

Boy Makes Good

It was the "continued" story, with a "success ending," of an average boy whose progress Fyfe said he had followed from the time he noticed a lonely youngster haunting the Boys Club library, through the process of growing up and finally making good in an outstanding way.

Helped in the process of growing up, of becoming self-reliant, of developing a talent for oratory, the boy became valedictorian of his high school class, won scholarships first to an American university and then at the Sorbonne in Paris, and is now a member of the faculty at his college.

"There are hundreds of boys like him at the Washington Boys Club. You might call them handicapped or underprivileged, but to us they are regular average boys who have the 'makings' of success, provided the door of opportunity is kept open for them," Fyfe said.

Army Awards Contracts For Aircraft Engines

The Army yesterday placed orders for new aircraft engines to cost more than $2,000,000.

From the Allison Engineering Co. of Indianapolis, was ordered an unrevealed number of 1150 horsepower engines for installation in new Bell single engine pursuit planes. The amount of the contract was $1,851,631. $294,200 contract for engines for training planes was let to the Continental Motors of Detroit.

G. W. Students Laugh at Taps, Satirizing War

Broken Note by Coy Bugler Draws Gales At Peace Club Rally

Then penguin, as symbolizing aggression against America, and a broken bugle note at the sad conclusion of taps, sent George Washington University students into gales of laughter yesterday.

They were burlesquing a real war rally.

It might have been more satirically serious had the bugler, Alan Danzig, borrowed from Powell Junior High School, not muffed the last note of taps and the first of assembly call.

But satire ruled when speakers for the Keep America Out of War Club deplored a penguin tendency to bite at the coattail of Admiral Byrd—an act of aggression "against our sovereignty"—and the penguin failure to buy snow shoes from American manufacturers, "an unneighborly act," according to the speakers, Nick Broughton, C. M. Cory and Charles Corker, students.

A loud noise, it was, that drew 50 students into the quadrangle where placards flew with the legends, "Women and Children First;" "Fight, Fight, Fight—for George Washington U;" and "Support the Future Grave Fund."

A medal was pinned on a student: "A future medal of the future war which this future soldier can wear before he finds a future grave," it was shouted.

More babies were needed, a speaker shouted. A coed accepted a medal as a future mother of a future son for a future war.

Into the melee a boy with freshman's eyes shoved.

"What's it all about?" he inquired.

Someone held under his nose a big tin can, with a slot for contributions: "Put in a coin for the future graves fund," he was told.

Drewry Claims Democratic Trend

Representative Drewry (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the Democratic National Congressional Committee, said last night that last Tuesday's "give every evidence that the Democratic Party will hold its present advantage and will probably make gains in 1940."

He noted that the Democratic ticket in the Kentucky governorship contest received "a majority even larger than the record lead" by which A. B. Chandler was elected two years ago.

Gen. Albert Cox, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Veterans' Administrator, and Rear Adm. W. R. Furlong.

Today is a holiday for Government workers and bank employes, but not for employes in most District stores. City libraries will remain closed, but the Congressional Library will be open from 2 p. m. to 10 p. m.

Many veterans' groups and patriotic organizations are planning ceremanies in Arlington Cemetery. Representative McCormack, of Massachusetts, other New England State officials, and members of the Yankee Division Club of Washington will dedicate a monument to the wartime Yankee Division commander, Maj. Gen. Clarence Ransom Edwards, at 10 a. m. following a tribute to the Unknown Soldier at 9 a. m.

War Mothers Plan Rites

On the east steps of the Capitol, the American War Mothers will conduct their annual Armistice Day rites at 11 a. m., under leadership of their new president, Mrs. R. E. Ridenhour, of Concord, N. C. Mrs. Florence A. Latham, national corresponding secretary, will lead a salute to the flag, and Dr. Oscar Blackwelder, of the Church of the Reformation, will be the speaker.

Services honoring Washington's war dead, arranged by the District department of the Twenty-ninth Division Association, will begin at the District War Memorial in East Potomac Park at 9:30 a. m., with Forty and Eight Society rites. Other local veterans' units will conduct ceremonies there at 1 p. m.

In the Washington Cathedral, two afternoon services will be held in honor of the World War President, Woodrow Wilson, and of the women who served in the World War. Ceremonies will be held at his grave at 3 p. m. by the George Washington Post No. 1, of the American Legion, which lists him as a charter member. Bishop James E. Freeman will speak at the Wilson memorial rites, and at the services for World War women at 4 p. m.

Two Pharmacists Fined $100 for Drug Violations

Fines of $100 were levied in Police Court yesterday against each of two pharmacists charged with violating the uniform narcotic drug act.

Charles Blechman, 37, of 3620 Sixteenth street northwest, and Joseph Bernstein, 38, of 3040 Rodman street northwest, pleaded guilty before Judge Edward M. Curran.

Detective Sergt. Robert Bryant testified they had filled prescriptions containing narcotics without having the prescribing physicians' signatures.

The men explained that the prescriptions were taken by telephone from doctors in emergency cases and that the doctors had promised to forward prescriptions, but had failed to so.

The fines were recommended to Judge Curran by the District attorney's office.

Wiliam Fisher Funeral Today

The funeral for William H. Fisher, 68, retired Navy Yard machinist, who died Thursday at Emergency Hospital, will be held at 2 p. m. today in Westernport, Md.

Mr. Fisher retired from the Washington Navy Yard six years ago.

Surviving are his wife, Daisy; a son, J. Alston Fisher; four brothers, Harry, Frank, Fred and Charles, and two sisters, the Misses Beulah and Mae Fisher.

France Must Have the Rhine As War Prize, General Says

Paris, Nov. 10.—Souvenirs of Armistice Day, 21 years ago and moralizing on what was done and what should have been done then, fill many columns of the French press today. Their main conclusion is that it was a mistake to sign the armistice with the German army still on French soil, and to allow that army to return home with its arms and baggage to be welcomed with flowers as if victorious.

Gen. Mordacq, World War Premier Clemenceau's principal assistant, tells in Petit Parisien, how he, Gen. John J. Pershing and Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, argued for a continuation of the war until it would be possible to impose a total surrender.

Follows Foch's Advice

At the same time they were preparing the Lorraine attack which would have coincided with a march on Munich of the Italian and eastern armies. Clemenceau hisitated for many days between their advice and that of Gen. Foch before he finally announced to Gen. Mordacq that he felt himself obliged to take Foch's opinion because the responsibility was his.

Without criticizing his former commander in chief, Gen. Mordacq concludes that the premature signing of the armistice was the Allies' first mistake. The second was the disregarding of Gen. Petain's advice that the German army should be completely disarmed.

As the third error, he puts the rejection of Gen. Foch's constant demand that France should take definite possession of the left bank of the Rhine.

Two Views Expressed

This argument is beginning to appear again in the speeches and the writings of those who shared Foch's view 21 years ago, and his phrase is being requoted. "Whoever is master of the Rhine is master of everything. Whoever is not on the Rhine has lost everything."

Against that conception of how peace should have been made to end the last war, and now it must be made in this war, may be opposed the conception expressed by Paul Reynaud's speech to the American Club yesterday, when he seemed definitely to set aside any such territorial claim, and to argue that peace could not be made except in justice and in recognition of every nation's right to live.

Funeral Today For Mrs. Ley, D. C. Resident 50 Years

Funeral services will be held at 10:30 a. m. today for Mrs. Louisa L. Ley, 90, a resident of Washington for more than 50 years. She died Wednesday.

The services will be held at the home of her granddaughter, Miss Roberta Neely, 1700 Kilbourne place northwest. The Rev. William S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. Ley was the widow of John Henry Ley, one-time Washington florist. She was a native of Croyden, England, and came to this country 54 years ago.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. George Myers, of New York; five sons, J. Harry, Camp Springs, Md.; Charles W., Montreal, Canada; Alfred E. and Arthur V., La Plata, Md., and Conrad C., New York; three granddaughters, Roberta and Virginia Neely, Washington, and Mrs. George McKenna, Philadelphia, and two grandsons, Robert Neely, Philadelphia, and Charles Neely, Washington.

Apple Fete Crowd Sees Coronation

Fanfare, Pageantry Following Ceremony By Irish Diplomat; Parade Set Today

By John Chabot Smith.
A Staff Correspondent.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 10.—King Bruce V and Queen Jean II began their reign over the Apple Harvest Festival here today and received the joyful homage of thousands of their subjects when the Minister from Ireland, Robert Brennan, placed crowns upon their heads at the Martinsburg High School athletic field.

The coronation ceremony highlighted the second day of the fifth annual celebration, which will reach its climax with the parade tomorrow.

The Martinsburg High School Band resplendent in new orange and black uniforms, the blue-caped glee club, and 50 dancing maidens in brown, green, red and yellow dances provided a pageant "for the entertainment of their highnesses." Blue skies and a warm afternoon sun smiled on the throngs in the bleachers and on chairs across the field.

A Colorful Scene

A trumpet fanfare announced the arrival of the portly king and his young queen, who proceeded with stately stride across the field on a white carpet. Their crimson mantles streamed behind them, and the light breeze ruffled the lace on the queen's silk gown. Maids in waiting followed with their crowns and scepters.

At the platform the party was greeted by John L. Lightner, president of the festival, and C. H. Dailey, mayor of Martinsburg. Representative Jennings Randolph of this (Second) District of West Virginia read from a scroll the proclamation by which Dr. A. Bruce Eagle and Miss Jean Hicks became king and queen of apples, praying them to be wise in their decrees, and enjoining obedience upon their subjects.

The Irish Minister, expressing the hope that their "reign will be just and their justice tempered with mercy," placed the crowns upon their heads as the couple kneeled on purple cushions. The Apple Harvest Festival, he told the crowd, is "an example of that spirit of cooperation and friendliness that is one of the finest characteristics of American life. God knows this poor world needs more of it," he added.

Counties Represented

The four princes and four princesses, one each from Berkeley, Morgan, Jefferson and Hampshire counties were then presented to the king and queen by J. B. McLaughlin, West Virginia commissioner of agriculture, and took their places on the platform around the throne. The apple in all the forms it pleases man, as food, drink, and sauce, was glorified in a unique dance after the coronation. Girls from the high school danced figures they had worked out themselves, with the aid of one of their teachers, Mrs. Ira E. Eyler. Nitza Julias led the dance as the Apple, and seven groups in turn danced as Apple Pie, Apple Cider, Apple Brandy, Apple Butter, Apple Vinegar, Apple Juice and Apple Sauce, before all united in the finale.

Visitors crowded all day into the apple show at the Market House, where the United States Department of Agriculture offers an educational exhibit on how to keep mice out of the orchard. A concert by the Martinsburg High School Band was featured at the show tonight, and the Apple Harvest Festival King and Queen reception, main social event of the festival, concluded the day.

Parade Slated Today

The annual parade, to begin at 1:30 p. m. today, will include 20 apple-decked floats entered by the four counties, Berkeley Post, No. 14, American Legion, the high school, the West Virginia Horticultural Society, the Kiwanis, Lions and Rotary clubs, and Shepherd College, as well as commercial floats, and more than 1,000 uniformed marchers.

Armistice Day memorial services will be held by Berkeley Post at 11 a. m., and an antiaircraft demonstration will be carried out by the 260th Coast Artillery and the Twenty-ninth Division Aviation, Maryland National Guard, at 9:10 p. m. at the high school athletic field. Band concerts will be given at 8 p. m. by the Massanutten Military Academy Band in Market House and by the high school band in the school auditorium. A drum and bugle corps drill contest will be held at 3:30 p. m. in Public Square, and the American Legion ball will close the festival at 9 p. m.

Armistice Day To Be Marked In Alexandria

Legion and Veterans Of Foreign Wars to Set Pace for Today

One of the most extensive Armisice Day programs in recent years will be held in Alexandria with Alexandria Post 24 of the American Legion and Russell Mitchell Post No. 609, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars setting the pace today.

The legion observance will begin at 9 a. m. when a delegation will go to Arlington Cemetery for exercises at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Raymond J. Kelly, of Detroit, national commander of the American Legion, will address a luncheon meeting at Gadsby's Tavern at noon.

Luncheon guests will include Mrs. William Corwith, president of the legion auxiliary, and former Gov. and Mrs. Westmoreland Davis, of Leesburg.

Tonight at 9 the post will entertain at a reception in Gadsby's Tavern, to be followed by the annual Armistice Day ball.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars celebration will consist of a banquet and dance at the George Mason Hotel starting at 7 p. m. The program will include presentation of the V. F. W. citizenship medal by Bernard H. Cook, post commander.

Guest speakers at the banquet will be Representative Smith, of the State of Washington, and Senator Lundeen, of Minnesota. At 8 o'clock the veterans and guests will hear a broadcast by Otis N. Brown, National commander-in-chief of the V. F. W., through a loud speaker system installed in the main dining room of the hotel.

Over 50 Army, Navy and Marine officers stationed in the vicinity of the Nation's Capital have accepted invitations to the event. Other guests will include Alexandria city officials, and officers of the Alexandria American Legion Post and Spanish War Veteran's camp.

Ruffner Proclaims Holiday

Tomorrow evening the fifth annual Armistice service will be held at the Methodist Protestant Church for members of the American Legion, Spanish War Veterans and the Veterans of Foreign Wars and their auxiliaries. The Rev. Norman Roberts, chaplain for both the legion post and the V. F. W. Post will preach the sermon.

Armistice Day has been proclaimed a holiday by Mayor Richard L. Ruffner, and all city and State offices and banks will be closed. A majority of business firms, however, will remain open.

Yesterday a special program was presented at the George Washington High School when students were addressed by Capt. Fred Kochle, a member of the National Rehabilitation Committee of the American Legion, and William J. Greenan, commander of the Alexandria Legion post. Following the talks, the school cadet corps and band were reviewed by students and legion officers at exercises held on the school athletic field.

Apple Crop Off, Pears Heavier In New Forecast

By the Associated Press

Prospects for the 1939 apple crop declined slightly durin, October while those for pears increased.

The crop reporting board announced yesterday its November 1 survey of crop indications indicated the total commercial production of apples would approxima.e 100,530,000 bushels. Last year's yield was 82,395,000 bushels.

The estimated pear production of 30,577,000 bushels is 6 per cent smaller than the 1938 record crop of 32,473,000 bushels.

Area Lions to Meet In Winchester

Special Dispatch to The Post

Winchester, Va., Nov. 10.—Lions of three States will join in an inter-State meeting to be held here November 21, in honor of the 13 active past presidents of the Winchester club, Brayan Stotler, president, announced today.

District Gov. Elmer Bristow, of Petersburg, Va.; District Gov. Harley O. Daggers, Keyser, W. Va.; Percy L. Rodgers, deputy district governor, of Front Royal, Va., and Carbis A. Walker, director of Lions International, Winston-Salem, N. C., will speak. Stotler will be toastmaster.

Senator Speaks Today at Armistice Rites

Walter Johnson to Referee Game at Rockville Exercises

Senator Edwin C. Johnson, of Colorado, will speak at Armistice Day exercises in front of the courthouse at Rockville, Md., today.

The observance, sponsored by the Henderson-Smith Edwards Post, of the American Legion, will start at 10:45 with a salute to the colors by the Barber-Briggs Bugle Corps. Post Commander H. Jerry Moore will give a brief talk, followed by a 30-second silence period at 11 a. m.

Senator Johnson will be introduced by Circuit Court Judge Stedman Prescott.

In keeping with the spirit of Armistice Day two rival civic groups, the Kensington Chamber of Commerce and the Greater Kensington Civic League, will meet this afternoon in a friendly softball game at the estate of Lacy Shaw, park and planning commissioner. Walter Johnson, Washington baseball immortal, will referee.

The two organizations have been at odds since the Kensington Civic League was organized last spring by a group of discontented members of the chamber following a bitter factional strife.

Wilson College To Present Satire On Dictatorship

Chambersburg, Pa., Nov. 10.—What might happen if a Hitler were to become president of Wilson College is the theme of the original musical comedy, "Motherland, My Motherland," which the senior class will present here tomorrow night.

A satire on dictatorship, "Motherland, My Motherland," depicts the regimentation of the student body and pokes fun at the Nazi educational system in songs, dances, and dialogue. "I'm a Super, Super, Super, SUPER Storm Trooper," is the title of one song. Another, "Truth Is Stronger than Fiction," provides musical accompaniment to a scene in which "subversive" books from the college library are burned.

A dance routine is built around the slogan, 'Learning Through Laughter," a parody of "Strength Through Joy." All commands to the storm troopers are given in Hebrew, learned for the occasion.

In accordance with Wilson tradition, the entire production from opening line to final curtain, is being costumed, staged and acted by seniors. The cast numbers 69.

Culpeper County Editor Boasts of Home-Grown Figs

Culpeper, Va., Nov. 10 (AP).—The editor of the Virginia Star, local weekly, "wouldn't be surprised" if Culpeper County "proves to be the fresh fig center of the State."

Last summer the editor noted with mingled satisfaction and astonishment that the fruit could be successfully grown around Culpeper. Then, this week a friend presented him figs plucked from bushes which still had all their green leaves last Monday.

On last Monday, in case city dwellers have forgotten, snowplows were pushing over Shenandoah Valley and Blue Ridge Mountain roads.

Hagerstown Legion Plans Banquet Fete

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 10.—Department Commander James B. Fitzgerald, Bethesda, will be the guest of honor at the annual banquet tomorrow night of Morris Frock Post, American Legion, it was announced as legionnaires prepared for the celebration of Armistice Day.

In the morning, memorial services will be held in front of the tablet at the courthouse to be followed by a parade in the afternoon. All city and county departments will be closed most of the day and stores are closing during the morning ceremonies.

4-H Beef Club Dines On Blue Ribbon Steak

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 10.—Members of the 4-H baby beef club of Washington County and their fathers reported the steaks served tonight at the club's annual banquet here were par excellent. They were supplied by Albert Richter, of Garett County, whose baby beef won first prize at the recent Hagerstown fair.

Shots Again Echo in Bull Run

After the battle—Martha Anne, 5, and her father, J. Randolph Eagle, inspect the eagle shot yesterday on a farm near Manassas, Va. The invader has winspread of 7 feet 4 inches, according to Farmer Eagle

Special Dispatch to The Post

Manassas, Va., Nov. 10.—The "Battle of the Eagles" today has replaced the Battle of Bull Run as the favorite topic in this historic section.

Figures in the latest conflict are J. Randolph Eagle, 46, his 5-year-old daughter Martha Anne Eagle, and "Baldy" Eagle, age undetermined. Farmer Eagle is an unwarlike, law-abiding citizen, and so is his daughter, he would have you know.

The Eagle family wants only peace but not "peace at any price." So when "Baldy" eagle, an 11-pound specimen with a 7-foot 4-inch wingspread, swooped on Farmer Eagle's pigeon, the battle began. Little Martha first noticed the invader. She screamed, startling the intruder who flew into a high tree.

"Keep an eye on him," warned Farmer Eagle and he dashed for his rifle. Martha followed the giant bird to a new roost, where Farmer Eagle fired at him. The invader escaped unscathed in the first skirmish, but fell in a flurry of feathers at the next shot.

The body was displayed today in Manassas where it attracted wide attention. Eagles are rare in this northern Virginia section. The scene of the "battle" is about three miles east of Manassas on the road to Centerville, an area where history books mention a few other battles occurred in the 1860's.

Fairfax Service Tomorrow for Judge Love

Ceremony to Be Held In Truro Episcopal; Walton Moore to Talk

A rood panel, lectern, Bible and baptismal font cover, given in memory of the late Judge James Moss Love, of Fairfax County, Va., will be dedicated by the Rev. Herbert A. Donovan, rector, at the morning service at Truro Episcopal Church tomorrow at 11:15 o'clock.

Judge Love, who was born in 1842, served as an officer in the Confederate Army and was for many years judge of the old county court. For 50 years he was a vestryman in the local church, an office he held until his death in 1933.

The memorial was given to the church by Col. James M. Love, a son, now in Shanghai.

R. Walton Moore, counselor of the State Department, will give a eulogy.

It will be the farewell service by the Rev. Mr. Donovan, who leaves Fairfax County next week to become rector of the Episcopal Church in Charlottesville.

Mrs. Wilkins Elected

The Women's Missionary Society of Herndon Woolf Memorial Church has elected Mrs. Gagnus T. Wilkins president. Other officers are Mrs. Richard J. McMillen, vice president; Mrs. J. K. Linkins, secretary, and Miss Charlotte Chamblin, corresponding secretary and treasurer.

Mrs. Gaines Plans Visit

Mrs. Gladys Gaines, head of the religious education department of the diocese of Virginia, will pay an official visit to St. Timothy's Episcopal Church Sunday school at Herndon tomorrow at 10 a. m.

Bible Study Scheduled

The Rev. H. H. Bear, pastor of the Floris and Herndon Presbyterian Churches, will conduct a Bidle study and round table discussion at the Herndon Presbyterian Church tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock. The study will continue nightly through November 17.

Committee Named

Mrs. Mortimer Palmer has appointed Mrs. Atheron Mears, Mrs. S. Parry Grubb and Mrs. William S. Browning as a nominating committee to prepare a slate of officers for the next meeting of the night branch guild of the Falls Church.

Soybean Crops Seen Profitable In Southern Md.

College Park, Md., Nov. 10 (AP).—Profit for Maryland farmers in greater production of soybeans—the "wonder bean" with hundreds of uses from food to paints and plastics—was predicted today.

In Southern Maryland alone there are 500,000 uncultivated acres which could be planted to this crop, said Prof. J. E. Metzger, director of the University of Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Most of the Maryland crop is produced on the Eastern Shore, the extension service said, and acreage has been virtually static for 15 years due to lack of processing plants, price fluctuations, limited land, and other factors.

Watson Heads Bankers

Condemnation Action Weighed for Property To Straighten Road

BUREAU OF THE POST.
Clarendon, Va., Tel. OXford 0509.

The County Board on Monday morning will consider plans for condemnation proceedings to acquire necessary rights of way to straighten Washington boulevard at North Quincy street.

John P. Divine is the owner of the only property needed for the improvement. He has been requested to appear to show cause why condemnations proceedings should not be started.

The matter has been before the board for the past two months.

Lee Highway Work Discussed

Meanwhile County Manager Frank C. Hanrahan returned from Richmond yesterday where he and other officials conferred with State Highway Commissioner H. G. Shirley on plans for highway improvements in the county. He announced that the State is prepared to proceed with widening and improving the Lee highway in the vicinity of Cherrydale.

Hanrahan declared there was much detail work to be carried on in connection with acquiring needed rights of way there, too, and feels that the plans now approved will meet with the approval of the citizens.

It also was announced that all offices in the courthouse with the exception of county clerk and sheriff's office will be closed today in observance of Armistice Day.

Powder Load Explodes; Two Trucks Wrecked

Covington, Ky., Nov. 10 (AP).—A truckload of blasting powder exploded today at Devon, Ky., 12 miles south, demolishing two vehicles, shattering windows in nearby houses and starting grass fires that spread over a radius of a mile. The explosion followed collision of the powder truck and a cattle truck. No one was injured.

P. S. C. Asks Silver Spring Bus Briefs

To Be Filed Before Dec. 1; Company Says Line Would Lose $31,000 Yearly

Baltimore, Nov. 10 (AP).—The public service commission took under consideration today the complaint of the Silver Spring, Md., allied civic group against the Capital Transit Co. of Washington and directed attorneys on each side to file briefs in the case by December 1.

The hearing was concluded late this afternoon after four days in which a score of witnesses presented voluminous testimony dealing with the population of the community, schedules of buses serving the area, and company revenues and operating expenses.

One Point Cleared Up

Of the civic group's half-dozen points in the application, one was disposed of during the hearing without any official ruling by the commission. This was the request for a new line serving Dale drive, and at the close of the hearing G. Thomas Dunlop, counsel for the company, said representatives would confer with the citizens relative to the route of the new line.

The company's two principal witnesses today were J. G. Heberle, vice president and comptroller, and Isaac B. Goad, supervisor of schedules.

Heberle testified that under the proposals of the citizens' committee, the company could anticipate an annual loss of $31,000 in the Silver Spring area.

Thanks Citizens

For the Washington-Takoma Park line, he said, the annual revenue would be approximately $20,000 and operating expenses $33,000. The figures were based on probable fare of 545,820 and probable bus mileage of 175,830 miles. The composite fare, based on the citizens' proposal, would be 3¾ cents.

Closing the hearing, Dunlop expressed the company's appreciation for the research done by the citizens committee and Maj. Stewart Purcell, a commission member, said its presentation was "one of the best I've seen in a long time."

Mary Barbour Heads Arlington Teachers

Miss Mary Barbour, principal of the John Marshall School, has been elected president of the Arlington County Teachers Association, it was announced yesterday.

State Receipts Up Slightly in Period

Richmond, Va., Nov. 10. (AP).—Receipts from all State funds during the first quarter of the current fiscal year totaled $22,748,284, an increase of $66,657 over the corresponding period a year ago, although general fund revenues showed a decrease of $264,132, Comptroller Leroy Hodges reported to Budget Director Rowland A. Egger today.

The general fund receipts were $4,881,286 compared with $5,245,018 for the initial quarter of 1938-39.

"The general condition of the Commonwealth at the end of the first quarter is favorable and conforms closely to estimates prepared by this office earlier in the year," Col. Hodges reported.

Bette Davis Triumphs In Role of Elizabeth

Errol Flynn Costars in Warners' Technicolor 'Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex;' Earle's Stage Revue One of the Best

"THE PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX." Warner Brothers picturization in Technicolor of the play, "Elizabeth, the Queen," adapted to the screen by Norman Reilly Raine and Aeneas MacKenzie, co-starring Bette Davis and Errol Flynn, with Olivia de Havilland, Donald Crisp, Alan Hale, Vincent Price, Henry Stephenson, Henry Daniell, James Stephenson, Nanette Fabares, Ralph Forbes, Robert Warwick and a huge ensemble. Directed by Michael Curtiz. Previewed November 8. At the Earle Theater.

THAT LIBERTIES have been taken with history in the Warner Brothers production of "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex" is clearly indicated by the three-word prefix to the salient last three words of the title.

Based on Maxwell Anderson's play of "Elizabeth, the Queen," skillfully adapted to the uses of the cinema by Norman Reilly Raine and Aeneas MacKenzie, the story revealed publicly yesterday for the first time in Washington, on the screen at the Earle Theater, is not so much an attempt to reproduce historical fact as it is to place upon the silver sheet a tragic love story. In essence the poignant romance is approximately true. It deviates from the factual only in its effort to reduce to the common denominator of human experience the personal concerns of a group of clashing figures who loom large in the development of England's island kingdom into a world-wide empire.

BELL

Executed in the now highly developed Technicolor, "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex" fulfills its purpose well. Against a background of regal pomp and splendor it relates a story in which its pivotal characters almost uninterruptedly are dominant. Elizabeth, the "virgin queen" of England, is a commanding figure in every facet of the play's comprehensive and far-flung development. Essex, correspondingly, motivates every movement of the plot in which the males of England's court are involved. At times, however, he is sufficiently submerged to afford full play to the ambitions, duplicity and intrigue of Francis Bacon, Sir Walter Raleigh, Lord Burghley, Sir Robert Cecil, Sir Thomas Egerton and the others who aspired to the favor of the queen.

Essex enjoyed as a conqueror of the Spanish at Cadiz, not only in the eyes of his people but even more conspicuously in the estimation of his queen.

It is a pretty war that is waged between Elizabeth and Essex. It is less a joust at battledore and shuttlecock between a sovereign and her subject than it is the jealous and petulant conflict between two headstrong and impetuous natures desperately and hopelessly in love.

Is Play of Power

The substance of the drama, then, rests in the burning passions of a woman and a man, flamingly in love with each other, but each a little more violently in love with himself and the power that attaches to the possession of a throne. It is upon this prolific source of dramatic conflict that "The Private Lives of Elizabeth and Essex" is based and it is for this reason that one of the season's most impressive screen plays wields such profound and moving power over an audience.

The drama's mounting crescendo to the tragedy of its climax and denouement has been encompassed with unusual effectiveness by a cast of admirable selection. Bette Davis has never before brought before the cameras a characterization of such heavy demands and such fine accomplishment. Her Elizabeth is a capricious and moody monarch, whose tenderest impulses more often than not rive way to instant storms of savage temper and schemes for swift and diabolical revenge. Essex is no less the victim of a volatile and volcanic play of contradictory emotions. But through these intervals of acid and bitter antagonism always shows the burning love each bears for the other, often set off by touches of bold and ribald comedy. It is a little startling, but still wholly within the pattern of the play, when Essex, in one of their gentler moments, slaps his queen heartily upon the customary portion of her anatomy and they sit down on the stairs to talk things out.

Their relationship, however, takes on a different color when his rivals at court maneuver Essex into a futile campaign against the Irish and contrive the means of his final and fatal estrangement from Elizabeth. Their treachery creates a breach between the lovers that ends on the headman's gibbet for the one and in acutest anguish for the other.

Subordinate Players Score

It is in these sinister machinations that Donald Crisp, Alan Hale, Vincent Price, Henry Stephenson, Henry Daniell and the others find opportunity to make their roles conspicuous in a brilliant gallery of competent acting. Their honors are fairly shared by Olivia de Havilland and Nanette Fabares, cast in the only feminine roles of importance other than the queen's. Miss de Havilland has the larger part of the two and lends it grace, beauty and charm. Miss Fabares packs her brief scenes with shrewdly telling emotionalism.

But it is Miss Davis to whom the major encomiums for an exceptional performance are due. Abjuring beauty, "glamor" and the other attributes usually dearest to the heart of the actress, she achieves the unique distinction of being both witch and fairy queen as the requirements of a heavy task demand. Her performance is genuinely distinguished. Errol Flynn, as Essex, plays with vigor and authority, but never with the compelling actuality summoned to her role by his costar.

The picture has been given the advantage of every productional aid at the command of the Warner Brothers. It is staged with an appropriately massive opulence that gives full play to the realism of natural color photography. Some of the scenes of pageantry resemble closely woven tapestries. All are eye-filling and toned to the mood for which they supply the picturesque background.

An All-Star Revue

Erich Wolfgang Korngold's musical setting is as majestic as the action it interprets and so richly embellishes, and Michael Curtiz's direction is peculiarly eloquent in its more than ordinarily even distribution of acting opportunities before the camera.

The stage bill at the Earle this week is a tightly woven "International Revue" that enlists the stellar services of the Dagenhan Girl Pipers, a group of exceptional proficiency on the bagpipes and drums; Lyda Sue, one of the most extraordinary of the acrobatic dancers; Bob Ripa, without a peer as a juggler; Patricia Norman, a songstress already popular in Washington; Gene Sheldon, one of the drollest of the banjoing pantomimists, and that incomparable team of ballroom dancers, Georges and Jalna. All very diverting.

A cleverly comic "Merrie Melodie" cartoon in color, "Fresh Fish," and the Paramount News complete a program that it would be difficult to overdress in all-around excellence.

CORDELL HULL: The Russian Embassy really was worried about the vast number of officials who declined the invitations to the party on Tuesday. Leon Henderson, of the Securities and Exchange Commisson, was one of the few who attended. He consoled Mrs. Oumansky, wife of the Russian Ambassador: "This really is a brilliant party" . . . "I hope so," she replied. "It means so much" . . . A few hours after the party Henderson purged himself of any cause for criticism—by having himself photographed with Ben Fairless, president of U. S. Steel.

When the reporters returned to their offices they discovered that "Ikke Ombord" is Norwegian for "not on board."

EARL BROWDER: United States Attorney Cahill has discovered the man whose name was forged to your passport. He works in your organization . . . Nicholas Murray Butler: It's early in the season, of course, but have your Pulitzer Prize play committee see "Life With Father," which opened at the Empire. So far this is the one.

ROBERT MOSES: The report in City Hall is that you'll be linked to the chairmanship of the N. Y. C. Housing Authority when that job is filled . . . Simone Simon: The New York censors soon will give their consent to your new Zola movie, "The Human Beast." They insist, however, upon cutting out that scene where you bite a man. That, say the censors, is immoral!

Midnight Calls Annoy Noted Baton Wielder

Symphony Conductor Wishes Baltimore To Stop Pestering

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Nov. 10.—Werner Janssen, the New York restaurant keeper's son, who turned into one of the world's great musicians, said today he wished the good burghers of Baltimore, Md., would quit pestering him.

Their long distance telephone calls begging him to return to conduct their symphony orchestra are ruining his sleep, and he needs it if he's to hold up his end of the movie business.

Three weeks ago Janssen resigned from the Baltimore Symphony and came to Hollywood, where he is under contract to Walter Wanger to supply the music for the latter's movies. He said the symphony season in Baltimore was only three months long. That meant he had to overwork his musicians so brutally they hated him—and still he hadn't enough time to whip together a first class musical organization.

Janssen said he would be glad to reconsider his resignation, if Baltimore would spend enough money to lengthen the symphony season, and in the meantime he'd appreciate it if the citizens there quit phoning him in the middle of the night.

Is Prodigious Worker

He is one of Hollywood's most surprising workers. Husband of Ann Harding, composer, conductor, aviator and jokester, Janssen works harder perhaps than nine-tenths of his fellow movie makers.

His last picture was "City for Sale," the detective comedy costarring Pat O'Brien, Edward Arnold, Broderick Crawford and Ruth Terry. Janssen didn't swipe chunks of the classics and weave them together. He composed the whole score from scratch, then he hired some musicians, rehearsed them, played the music—and did the complete job in nine days. Most of those days he worked a full 20 hours.

When he's at the studio he doesn't dare answer his phone. He keeps his door locked and he doesn't even go outside for lunch.

"It's a tragic thing," he said, "but there are 7,000 union musicians in Los Angeles. Most of them are out of work most of the time. And many of them constantly are seeking jobs from me. I do my best for them, but it isn't nearly enough.

A National Situation

"The situation in Los Angeles is multiplied throughout the Nation.

"There is no telling how many thousands of really good musicians are on the verge of starvation in this country.

"They can't find work, largely because of the decline in the symphony orchestra. I don't mean that people are losing interest in good music. The S. R. O. signs we had in Baltimore are evidence of that.

"The trouble seems to lie with the people who are in charge of musical enterprises. The main thing for them to realize, I think, is that a conductor's name doesn't have to end in 'insky' for him to be a good musician.

"There are plenty of Americans who are fully as good musically as any eccentric imported from Europe."

Janssen said he believed the movies offered about as good a niche as any for a musical man. The work is hard, but the satisfaction from a good musical score is great.

Hat Lost Him Job

You probably know something of his career; more words have been printed about him than any other American musician. One brief story you may not have heard—and that's how he came to be fired a few years back as organist of the St. James Episcopal Church, in Hanover, N. H.

The minister was about to begin his sermon and Janssen was pedaling a dignified hymn when he spied through his mirror in the organ loft a woman hurrying up the aisle in the funniest-looking chapeau Janssen ever saw.

Temper of his music changed instantly and "Where Did You Get That Hat?" started to boom from the organ pipes.

That was the end of Janssen in Hanover. He didn't blame Hanover; he blamed his fingers. He couldn't control them.

"I know I shouldn't have done any such thing," he said, "but the urge was irresistible."

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Nov. 10 (INS).—After seeing Ingrid Bergman in "Intermezzo" there is no doubt in my mind that David Selznick has the find of the year.

LOUELLA PARSONS

The best part of it is that Bergman, who is also Swedish, is not a copy of Greta Garbo. She is a distinct personality and entirely different from Garbo, which is a good thing since all imitations of Greta have fared second best over a period of ten years. Orson Welles saw "Intermezzo" and liked La Bergman so much that he has started negotiations to get her for his leading lady in "Heart of Darkness."

If the deal goes through, and it looked today as if it might, La Bergman will sail from Sweden for America at once. I thought Dolly Haas was set for the part and I was getting ready to sympathize with her on losing out again, but they tell me at R. K. O. she only tested and a contract was never signed.

Herbert Wilcox, who directs Anna Neagle, and who knows a good actress when he sees one, has signed little Isabel Jewell for the role of la Neagle's girl friend in "Irene." I've often wondered what it was that kept Isabel from getting the breaks she deserved. She's pretty and a hard worker and can give many of the glamour girls cards and spades when it comes to emotional acting. Maybe what she needs is just a little more "oomph," but in the play "Of Mice and Men" the little Jewell made them sit up and take notice aplenty as the homespun siren.

The servants at the home of Louis Hayward and Ida Lupino were in hysterics this morning. Louis had just slammed the car door on his way to the studio to make make-up tests for "My Son, My Son" when the servants saw his car pitch over Mandeville Canyon and crash to bits. But when they dashed out in front there was Louis—shaking like a leaf over his narrow escape. He had slammed the door so hard it released the brake on the car which went careening down the hill before he could get in it. Talk about luck—he must feel he is draped in horse shoes!

I rushed to the birthday dinner Gene Markey gave Hedy Lamarr at the Beverly Wilshire right from rehearsal. Never saw so many beautiful women at one table. Myrna Loy, absolutely radiant, was beaued by Arthur Hornblow and Bill Powell. The three of them came from "Another Thin Man" preview and it was grand seeing Bill so happy. Claudette Colbert and her devoted doctor were enthusiastic about the dancing of that talented pair, Mary Parker and Billy Daniels, as were we all.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Joan Fontaine, who nearly frightened her bridegroom, Brian Aherne, to death when she collapsed on the "Rebecca" set, went home from the hospital today. Fortunately, she didn't have appendicitis, and she will be well enough to return to the studio Monday; Phyllis Brooks at the Jules Stein party with Fred Brizzon. Rudy Vallee, the guest of honor, brought Strelza Brown; Patricia Morison and Matty Fox, Universal executive, seem to have picked up where they left off a few months ago; Frank Lloyd's pretty daughter, Alma, marries Franklin Gray tomorrow at the Wilshire Methodist Church; good luck to Anita Louise, who flies East Monday for personal appearances; Wendy Barrie and George Sidney, jr., dining tete-a-tete at the Brown Derby; Geraldine Fitzgerald has left New York and is headed for the Warner Studios.

Ace Director William Wellman, who suffered such serious injuries in the World War, isn't very well, so he will take time off until March before he starts on that new Para contract. Akim Tamiroff, believe it or not, is getting his hair dyed blonde for his next movie, "The Way of All Flesh." Remember Emil Jannings in the silent version? Robert Preston is entertaining his 92-year-old grandmother. Billy Bauch lost his tonsile today and his twin, Bobby, parts with his on Monday. Marlyn Merrick discovered by Warner's talent scout at the Bliss-Hayden Theater, has been signed to a contract. Gloria Stuart and Arthur Sheekman, who have been away from Hollywood for many, many months, are back in New York and will remain there to write a series of articles on their experiences in war-torn Europe; Gloria may do a stage play.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Columbia

With action occasionally crisp, but more often as zestful as a wet blotter, "Beau Geste" Thursday opened a return F street engagement at Loew's Columbia, after a week at the Palace.

Much of the interest in this Gary Cooper-Ray Milland-Robert Preston adventure owes its reputation to that splendid silent version of the P. C. Wren novel released 12 years ago, when the sands of the desert were comparatively uncounted and when the French Foreign Legion had "oomph." At the core, it is still a worthwhile adventure tale, but its treatment has been so careful that this version has a touch of the anemic about it.

It concerns the three brothers who, when circumstances point to them as the thieves of the "Blue Water" sapphire, individually join the foreign legion and meet on the sands of the Sahara. Even there the secret gets about and drives to further frenzy one Markoff, a grim sadist, their sergeant. In the current version, by the way, the original French nationality of this character is shifted to Russian. Two of the lads never return to the stately homes of England.

By far the most gripping sequences in the film are those of the attack on the undermanned desert fortress by the Arabs. The spectacle of the dead soldiers propped up in the turrets to mislead the attackers remains elegant melodrama.

Brian Donlevy, J. Carrol Naish, Albert Dekker, Susan Hayward and Heather Thatcher are the supporting players under William A. Wellman's direction.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Nov. 10.

One of our Chicago readers, Miss Rosemarie Marino, says that she's tired of having stars crammed down her throat. "I hear they're going to do the life of Rudolph Valentino and if they do I want to voice an objection, but very strenuously, about Del Casino. We have picked our man and are going to see that justice is done, begad!!! There's the perfect type for Valentino out there, although I know make-up men can turn a Frankenstein into a Shirley Temple. His name is Matty Fain, whom you've seen stealing scenes from the greatest."

HOPPER

When a fan who has never met the actor is so enthusiastic about his possibilities that she takes the trouble to write a columnist, I decided Fain must be worth looking up.

We discovered he's a musical comedy song-and-dance man who has done nothing but gangsters. You'll see him in "After The Thin Man." He too thinks he looks like Valentino. And to prove it a national magazine will publish pictures of both.

Del Casino jumped from the airwaves to play Valentino in the Eddie Small picture. Del took lessons for two months to bring the pitch of his voice down to what most of us recall was Rudy's voice, though Rudy never made a talkie. After getting his voice down, Casino was told picture deal off, so he's been taking more lessons to get it back to original range that earned him money before he came here.

Just a few minutes ago we bumped into Casino and he said: "Funny thing, but I just did an audition for Louis B. Mayer and he thinks I look like Ramon Novarro and there's a chance I may be signed to do a revival of an old Novarro silent."

After Rev. Kenneth Engle, of Kingman, Ariz., married Clark and Carole a snip over seven months ago, they chatted about the difficulty of raising chickens in the heat of Arizona. Now two dozen of Gable's prize baby chickens are on their way to him. As their first thank you gesture for saying those few words which made them man and wife.

Did you know that Elsa Lancaster, Charles Laughton's wife, and Flora Robson went to Mexico so they could stay longer in America. Doesn't seem to make sense? But it does. They'll come back under a new quota. Which reminds me that Alexander Korda will be here in a week to try refinancing his English propaganda pictures. Yet he wrote a friend of mine who helped with the color in "Four Feathers," "I need you so badly over here, old boy, meaning England, of course, but I'm unable to get a labor permit for you"——

I wonder if the people who peer through keyholes ever know the injury done by giving out stories which should never have been told. I'm speaking of Mrs. Basil Rathbone's plans for adopting another little girl. When the news was flashed over the air it killed the plan because here, as in every other city, parents who part with their children must never knew the future homes of those babies. Nine times out of ten it creates trouble. When the mother is in a position to care for it, she'll fight tooth and nail to get it back.

They've S. O. S.'d for the Abbot dancers 'cause they're fan mail was mountainous, which surprised even the studio. Designer Edith Head is having a bale of grief too. Has to make headdresses from eagle feathers. She's discovered real ones only have three feathers to a tail, so if you've got a pet eagle and want it plucked, get in touch with Edie.

Metropolitan

"Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" is being continued at the Metropolitan, chalking up a fourth downtown week for the new Frank Capra comedy of national politics.

James Stewart plays the title role of a youthful boy-ranger leader appointed to fill a vacancy in the Senate. The majority of scenes take place here in Washington and the story concerns the overturow of a corrupt political machine. Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold, Eugene Pallette, Claude Rains, Astrid Allwyn, Thomas Mitchell, Guy Kibbe, H. B. Warner and Harry Carey appear in the leading supporting roles.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

S' help me, this is a true story.

Five men sat about a poker table in a Richmond, Va., hotel room. It was not a stylish hostelry. In fact the place was only a couple of degrees above a flophouse. You know the kind of hotel I mean—the kind where you hear the plumbing in the bathroom down the hall gurgling all night.

POVICH

They sat there into the early hours of the morning, hunched over their cards. By now the air was thick, nay foul, with the odor of smouldering cigarette stubs not completely stubbed. In various stages of dishabille they sought comfort—shirts open at the neck or discarded altogether, yes, and trousers dispensed with in a couple of cases.

Who were they? Well, they wore the badges of their profession. You could count seven cauliflowered ears on the five heads around the table, two bashed noses and only three well-defined necks. Sure, they were wrestlers.

Wrestlers at play after hours—fierce absorbing play in which they were gambling their wages of the evening before, with husky throats emitting guttural curses as the turn of a card foreshadowed the loss of a pot. Draw poker was their game, and it was free-style poker with no bluffing barred and jacks or better unneeded as openers.

Their nightly poker sessions were their relaxation. They traveled as a troupe, their schedule prepared for them weeks in advance by the wrestling trust headquarters. Equally as well as they knew each others pet holds and signals of distress, they knew each others poker habits. On the nights when they didn't have to move on to a new town, by common habit they repaired to their lodgings at the finish of their grunt and groan acts, dug out a ratty deck of cards, and high-carded for the deal.

Sixth Man in the Room

Actually, this night, there were six men in the room. Only five were at the table. The sixth man was a newcomer to the troupe that day. He confessed no interest in poker, said he was content merely to look on. That was all right with the players.

Earlier in the day, he had been introduced all-around. The bosses in New York has notified the troupe to expect him and when the Masked Marvel, who said he had known the fellow in the West, introduced him as "a right guy," the newcomer was acceptly warmly enough. If he was a friend of the Marvel, that was good enough for the rest. The Marvel was known to the trade as a square guy who had been wrestling for 20 years and still could whip anybody in the business in a shooting match if the "fix" were off.

Inevitably, the troupe contained its Terrible Turk, a fearsome-looking character born Johnny Jones in Hoboken, but with features that would pass for Turkish, or at least Armenian. There had to be a Terrible Turk in each troupe and Jones was elected. He sort of enjoyed it, anyway.

This night, however, the Turk was not enjoying himself. Never had his poker luck deserted him so entirely. It had been three hours since he had won a decent pot and he was already loser by more than he could make in a solid week of wrestling. In fine old Hobokonese he was cursing the flow of cards.

When he raised on three queens, he was re-raised and beaten by three kings. A bit later when he drew to a straight and filled it, a deuce-trey full house licked him for a big pot. When he tried new tactics and bluffed, the others called him and took down the money. When he had three aces cold they seemed to know it, and dropped out leaving him meager winnings.

Behind the Turk sat the newcomer, silently kibitzing the game, and across from the Turk sat the Marvel, the big winner of the night. The Turk had paid little heed to that seating arrangement until his three aces drew not a single call. And then he became suddenly suspicious.

Was this new guy tipping the Marvel off to his hands? Picking up his cards, the Turk turned suddenly in his chair, shot a quick look at the newcomer. But the fellow apparently was sleeping, with his chin fallen on his chest. For a bit, the Turk was satisfied.

Fives Beat Fours for Big Pot

Fifteen minutes later, the Turk again was beaten on another tough hand with the Marvel taking down the pot. Again the Turk had his suspicions, but no, there could be no funny business. He could hear the new guy behind him, sawing wood in a deep snore. The Turk merely cursed.

Two hands later, the Turk attempted to bluff his way into a pot with a pair of fours and the Marvel called all his raises and beat him with a pair of fives. It was too much for the Turk.

For a moment he listened to the snoring behind him and then wheeled suddenly. What he saw transformed him. He picked up his chair, brought it down heavily on the head of the apparently slumbering kibitzer, then picked up the fellow bodily and heaved him into the hall.

The Marvel leaped to his feet. "Turk," he said calmly, "You shouldn't a-done that."

"I shoulda killed him, that's what, the dirty rat," shouted the Turk. "Him and some others around this table."

"Whaddaya driving at, Turk," asked the Marvel.

"I'm telling ya he was tipping you guys off to my hands. He's behind my chair putting on that snoring act, and I turn around quick and find him with one open, the rat."

"J'ees, Turk, that's too bad, it's a shame that's what," said the Marvel. "Ya shouldn't a-done it, I tell ya."

Shouldn't a-done it, and him with one eye open. Why not, I'm asking ya.

"You got the poor guy wrong, Turk. I've known that poor devil for ten years. He was really sleeping. The guy's got one glass eye and can't shut it."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Nov. 10.—We were enroute to the press box at the National Horse Show the other night, grimly intent on writing a piece dealing with the general uselessness of the horse, and the horsey folk, when we encountered Lieut. Ben Cothran, a cavalryman.

CONSIDINE

We were going to say that the horse should be constitutionally abolished; that the thoroughbred of the species has disrupted more than one happy state of domesticity, what with papa betting the rent money on over-estimated flea bags; that the smartest horse is dumber than the dumbest cat, and that an alarming number of ordinarily sane Americans were losing their hold on sanity by dressing in peculiar clothes and lending their presence to the horse shows which dot the country.

We were going to say, in addition, that a bad tractor was better than the best horse that ever lived, including Black Beauty; that professional horse lovers, like Phil Strong, should be placed under guard, and that I would hate to have my son grow up and wear one of those flat derbies and toot "Boots and Saddle" on a trumpet like Honey Craven, a Boston gent in a pink coat, who gets $10 a day for summoning the ornery nags and the folk who ride them to the various competitions.

One Nonunion Musician

We were going to tell a story about Craven, too. He came out to the middle of Soldier Field at the Chicago Fair's horse show, tootled his bugle, and the place was immediately picketed. The regular band walked out righteously before honey's first note had ascended as far as the second row, because hoey wasn't a union musician.

Then, as we said, we met Lieut. Cothran, and after a nimute we guessed we wouldn't write the piece we planned, because he is a good mannish guy who had some good reasons why the horse was here to stay. He even had a reason why horse shows should be held.

"A horse show is the proving grounds of cavalry horses, and of horsemanship too," he said. "Like everything else, horses change. They improve or they deteriorate, depending on the breeding, and if we can come up with something like Dakota, which was bred at Fort Robinson, Nebr., and whcih seems to be the perfect cavalry horse, and which proved himself in horse shows and a tthe Olympics, we try to breed others like him. Dakota is a finer horse, you might say, than anything we had during the World War. So are our modern riders.

"You hear a lot about blitzkrieg, and mechanized forces, but the horse will never be replaced as an implement of warfarre. No airplane ever gained a foot of territory. A tank, the thing that the modern army horse works with, is a bull which scatters enemy infantry and permits oncoming cavalry to take possession. That was pretty well proven in actual combat by Gen. Monasterio during the Spanish war, and proven in theory during the army games at Plattsburg last summer when 25 armored cars, followed by 500 cavalrymen, completely cleaned up a strongly entrenched infantry unit.

"In modern warfare the horse is important enough to pick up, in lorries, and transport to the points of action. After all, a horse can go where no tank or armored car can penetrate, over fields or roads made impassable by artillery shellfire. What's more important, it can live off the land, whereas it has been estimated that a mechanized regiment needs 1,100 gallons of gas a mile to keep the things going."

Cavalryman Streamlined Today

"The modern cavalryman is a pretty menacing figure," he went on. "Only a few years ago his chief weapon was a sabre, but the machine gun stopped all that. Today he carries a pistol, a rifle and a machine gun. All three can go anywhere that the horse can go—which is practically everywhere. They can go there in a hurry, too, over the kind of obstacles which these horse shows fit them for, too.

"They've been counting out the horse ever since Hannibal came over the Alps on the neck of an elephant, mut somehow the horse is right up there every time men go to war—and he's just as useful when men lay down their arms. His role changes as the years go on.

"Today he complements the mechanized units, because he can do some things cheaper, quicker and more efficiently than any man-made machine can do them. Tomorrow—well, we don't know just what his lot is. But we know he'll be around. As Maj. Gen. John K. Herr, the chief of cavalry, once said, 'until they build a machine that can chase foxes across the country, the horse will still be needed in warfare.'"

We left the lieutenant then. He had saved us from the embarrassment of challenging Crispin Ogleby's Holystone, show horse son of Man o' War to a fist fight—on general principles.

Virginia Defeats W. & L., 7-0, on Single Drive

G. U. Frosh Backfield Star Tricks Little Terps and Gains 16 Yards

Kull (No. 12), Georgetown freshman back and a bright star in his team's 13-0 victory over the Little Terps at Griffith Stadium yesterday, faked a pass on this play but ran instead for 16 yards and a first down. The gain was made midst the Hoyas' drive for their se cond touchdown which came early in the last quarter

G. U. 5-2 Favorite To Beat Terps Today

Records Point to G. U. Superiority But Close-Scoring Game Expected; Maryland's DuVall Doubtful

By Jack Munhall.

Georgetown University's football team, bidding for its fourteenth victory without a loss over a span of nearly two complete seasons, has been installed a 5-2 favorite to whip oft-beaten University of Maryland this afternoon at Griffith Stadium in the sixth renewal of their modern series.

Kickoff is scheduled for 2 o'clock. Probable attendance: 10,000.

With all due respect to the Hoyas' six victories and one tie this season as contrasted with Maryland's two wins and four consecutive setbacks, today's renewal of this intense and traditional rivalry looms as a hard-fought and close-scoring duel.

Always a "Dogfight"

Starting with 1934 when the series was revived after a lapse of 27 years, Georgetown and Maryland have met on the gridiron annually. And no matter what were the pre-game predictions, history shows that each and every one of these games has been a dogfight; no quarter given and none asked.

Paradoxically, Maryland which has been called by some as entirely out of Georgetown's football class and therefore advised to discontinue relations holds a 3-2 edge in the modern games. The Terrapins won in 1934, 6-0, in 1935 by 12-6 and in 1937 by 12-2, while Georgetown won in 1935, 7-6, and last year by 14-7.

The circumstances surrounding today's Georgetown-Maryland game are strongly reminiscent of last year when a victory-surfeited and apparently overconfident Hoya team invaded College Park to meet a Maryland team that had been beaten six straight times, twice by adding-machine scores.

Nothing to Lose

Georgetown, however, didn't run wild over the Terps in 1938 nor was Maryland even partially disgraced by the final results. Georgetown, bereft of Joe Mellendeck after the first few minutes of play, was hard pressed all the way and was forced to take to the air for its two touchdowns. The Hilltoppers added their other two points on a safety.

The psychological picture of the current game is practically the same. Georgetown has little to gain but satisfaction of pride in licking the Marylands. Maryland has nothing to lose and everything to gain, for an upset of Georgetown would be the saving grace of its season.

According to all records, Maryland has no business playing in the same park as Georgetown. The Hoyas have the bigger team, the better players and many more dependable reserves. Georgetown has two of the finest punters around in Mike Kopcik, an end, and Lou Falcone, a reserve quarterback, while Maryland has only one proven kicker—Joe Murphy. Georgetown has in Halfback Jules Koshlap—who threw both touchdown passes against Maryland last year—a forward passer unequalled by any

Navy, Lions Clash Today At Annapolis

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Nov. 10.—Two supposed Eastern gridiron powerhouses that don't hold a major victory between them will clash here tomorrow when Lou Little's Columbia Lions meet Maj. Swede Larson's Navy eleven before an expected 22,000 fans on Farragut Field. Kickoff is 2 p. m.

Hard luck has dodged the heels of both teams, and the three defeats suffered by each have been by one-touchdown margins, or less. Columbia's most impressive performance was a 6-to-6 deadlock with Army, while Navy and Dartmouth battled to a scoreless tie.

Barring a tie, a victory for either team here tomorrow would not only be its major triumph of the season, but it will also snap the Columbia-Navy series tie that now stands at four games each.

Larson hoped the game would be "the turning point of the season for the Middies," as he sent the squad through a final light workout. A

G. W. High Plays Today

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 10.—At full strength for the first time since the opening game of the season, George Washington High School grid forces departed today for Lynchburg, Va., where they meet the undefeated E. C. Glass High eleven tomorrow afternoon in the new Lynchburg Municipal Stadium. The Hilltoppers are defending State titlists in the Virginia Class A. Conference.

Although definitely in an underdog role, the Presidents will take the field with their line-up in tact, and on the basis of vast improvement displayed in their past three games, they are figured to give the State champs a busy afternoon. The team's strength has been greatly bolstered by the return of three regulars who have been out of action for three weeks or more, and they will line up with the heaviest starting team produced since the start of the season.

G. U. Frosh Beat Maryland Cubs, 13 to 0

Passes Account for Both of Georgetown's Scores at Stadium

George University's heavily favored freshman football team encountered surprising resistance from Maryland's Cubs in the first half yesterday but finally solved the Terps' defense for single touchdowns in the third and fourth periods and a 13-0 victory at Griffith Stadium. Both scores came on passes.

The Little Hoyas therewith completed a perfect season in which they won four games and scored 62 points to only six for the opposition. Previously, the Hilltop yearlings beat Temple Frosh, 6-0; William and Mary, Norfolk Division Varsity, 33-6, and George Washington Frosh, 13-0.

Only One Victory

For the Little Terrapins who waged a game battle against superior material and an overwhelming wave of Georgetown reserves, it was their third setback in four games and concluded an unimpressive campaign. The Maryland yearlings defeated V. M. I. for their lone victory and lost to Washington & Lee and George Washington Frosh by lop-sided counts.

The Little Hoyas seemed a bit bewildered by Maryland's diamond defense—7-1-2-1—in the first half yesterday but hit a fast stride after intermission. They began a 75-yard scoring march from the kickoff opening the third period. A pass, McLaughlin to End Engles, carried the Little Hoyas from their own 25 to the Maryland 48.

A second pass from McLaughlin, this time to End Wiley, picked up another first down, on the 20. Soon after the McLaughlin-to-Wiley combination clicked again and Wiley was thrown on the Maryland 4-yard line. There the Little Terrapins rose up to smother three running plays for a slight loss, but their great stand was futile because on

Fort Myer Team Wins In U. S. Horse Show

Cavalrymen Give West Point, N. Y. City Police Teams Exhibition, Sweeping 1st Three Places in Military and Police Jumping Event

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 10.—Madison Square Garden was completely invaded today by four officers from Fort Myer who defeated all comers in the individual military and police jumping-class of this afternoon's National Horse Show.

Lieut. James H. Polk, on Clipped Wings; Capt. Robert L. Taylor, on Eyes Delight, Capt. Charles McClelland, on Smacko, and Lieut. David Wagstaff on Enterprise, made up the quartet that placed one, two, three, four in the event, thus making a clean sweep over 25 army and police mounts.

Spectators Thrilled

After the first round over the 8-fence course, Clipped Wings and Eyes Delight were tied with clean performances and the jumps were moved up 6 inches, making the last fence an even 5 feet. Clipped Wings, good brown daughter of Short Grass- Bee's Wing, went clean again and Taylor's mount hit the second fence, making her second.

Spectators were enthusiastic over the topnotch showing of the Fort Myer contingent, who have turned in outstanding rounds durnig the entire show. Smacko, third-place winner this afternoon, has come in for the lion's share of the awards, having won four blues, two seconds, a third and a fourth.

Clipped Wings, today's winner, was developed at Fort Myer by Lieut. Frank S. Henry, who is now a member of the United States Army Horse Show team. She has won championship stakes all over the East, most important of which was the jumper championship at the Garden three years ago under Lieut. Henry's guidance.

Whitney String Shipped

The hunter division did not present as bright a picture from the Southern point of view, as Mrs. John Hay Whitney's string was vanned to Virginia this morning and other local entries have failed to win any major awards. Mrs. Whitney's mounts, champions and stake winners here for many seasons, saw very little of the winner's circle this trip, and good performances by Betty Couzens' Repulsion, Mrs. George Watts Hill's Inky, Mr. and Mrs. William Haggin Perry's Demopolis, and other Virginia horses, have given them only minor awards.

Leading the hunter ranks at present are two horses owned by Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Untermyer, of Greenwich, Conn., and trained by a former Washingtonian, Charles Lewis. They are Illuminator and Hexameter, ridden alternately by Lewis and Patricia Bolling, also of Greenwich. Hexameter is slightly lame after seven consecutive days of showing, but he and Illuminator still hold a comfortable lead for the tricolor over Crispin Oglebay's Holystone, last year's champion. Holystone, chestnut son of Man o' War and a miniature edition of his famous pappy, has not been performing as well this week as his past record indicates, but he is certain to be on the inside lines when the championships are handed out.

Rose Bowl Committee May Raise Ticket Price

Los Angeles, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Pacific Coast Conference Rose Bowl Committee will discuss tomorrow the possibility of boosting ticket prices for Pasadena's famed game January 1.

A clamour of protest began to arise over reports the ticket scale would be placed at a flat $4.40, except for box seats. In past years, seats between the goal posts sold for $4.40, and seats behind the goal posts at $3.30, with box seats $5.50.

Fsihburne Beats Hargrave, 33-6

Waynesboro, Va., Nov. 10—Fishburne defeated Hargrave Military Academy here today, 33 to 6. Hargrave's lone score came in the third quarter on a 90-yard run from kickoff by Nash. Fishburne's five touchdowns resulted from varied plays, one in first, second and third and two in fourth quarter.

45,000 to See Harvard Play Army Today

Captain MacDonald, Of Crimson, Won't Play, Harlow Says

By the Associated Press

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 10.—Army's heavy cadets, will engage Harvard's green youngsters as favorites tomorrow before an expected crowd of 45,000 at the stadium.

The cadets have not beaten a major rival this season but they appear to have enough power, especially between the tackles, to make plenty of headway against the sophomore—studded Crimson team.

Harvard's slim hopes almost faded today when Coach Dick Harlow decided that Capt. Torby MacDonald was much too short of conditioning work to be considered even for replacement duty.

As a result, most of the Harvard attack will be centered about Charlie Spreyer and Passer Fran Lee. Spreyer complained of lameness after running through today's signal drill but Harlow retained him in his starting lineup.

Rivals Best Cavaliers, but Lack Punch

6,000 Watch U. Va. Battle Near Own Goal Throughout Game, Then Rally

By Al Hailey

A Staff Correspondent.

Lexington, Va., Nov. 10.—After 45 minutes of listless playing with their back to the well, the University of Virginia's Cavaliers came to life long enough in the last period to push over a lone touchdown and defeat a blustering Washington and Lee eleven, 7 to 0, here today before 6,000 homecoming spectators.

Virginia had been able to register but one real scroing threat—a brief xecursian in the third period down to the Washington and Lee 36-yard line—when Jim Gillette, playing with an injured knee, started the scoring drive with a hair-raising 34-yard punt return to the Generals' 34-yard line.

Twelve-Yard Pass

Gillette's swivel - hipped run run semeed to furnish the blow needed to knock them out of a hangover they apparently were suffering as a result of their 47-to-0 victory over Chicago last week.

Two 11-yard dashes through the mass by Fullback Leroy Neustedter and a 12-yard pass from 17-year-old Quarterback Ed Dudley to Gillette, set the stage for the coup de grace. Jim furnished this with a mad plunge over the goal line from the Generals' 2-yard stripe, and then held the ball for Dudley to kick squarely between the posts for the extra poinnt.

But despite this adantage, Virginia's lead—obtained with still six minutes to play—was by no means secure. The Generals flashed back with their passing and running attack which was a continuous source of embarrassment to the Cavaliers all afternoon, and swept down the field to the Virginia 31-yard line before a last-gasp pass was intercepted by Gillette on his own 12-yard line.

Threaten Three Times

Three times in the second quarter the Generals waltzed right into the shadow of the Cavaliers' goal posts. Virginia backs were occupied largely-- throughout the first half with puting out of danger. They were forced to kick from behind their own goal line four times in the second quarter alone.

The Cavaliers were badly 'outclassed in the statistics. They made no first downs in the first half, to the Generals' nine and finally ran up a total of exactly 5 to 14 for Washington and Lee.

Nor did Virginia call on its vaunted passing attack until the second half, when it appeared that they were heading for a deadlock or defeat. They tried seven through the air, completing three, while the Generals stole the Virginia style and attempted 23 passes. They even stole Virginia's famed "super-flanker" play, but they were able to complete six passes.

Goal Line Drive Fails

Washington and Lee's first therat carried to the Virginia 7. Fullback Joe Baugher, Quarterback Junie Bishop and Pres Brown, halfback, started a rampage that momentarily foreboded ill for the Cavaliers, but nearness to the goal line seemed to paralyze their attack, for it never clicked once in scoring territory.

Again in the same quarter, the Generals went on the march—advancing to the 28-yard line once and finally getting the ball down to the 10 before losing it on downs.

Virginia was an extremely lucky team today on the punting side. Their backs and linemen moved down the field under punts—and on the kick-offs, too—as if they had no

Aggies, Irish, Cornell Risk Records Today

New York, Nov. 10.—Texas A. and M., Notre Dame and Cornell, three of the four first-line elevens still unbeaten and untied, carry their handsome records into action against dangerous opposition tomorrow to furnish the high spots on the national college fotball pragram.

Each will be favored, but each also will be meeting a team strong enough to toss a monkey wrench into the works and another upset into the picture.

The Aggies, riding herd on the Southwest Conference, will try to bring the tough Southern Methodist Mustangs into their private corral; Notre Dame, bruised but still equipped with ample backfield material, will try for seven straight against Iowa, and Cornell, sluggish last week against Columbia, will have to snap back into stride to get by a Colgate team well rested and set to "shoot the works."

Tennessee Has Breather

While Tennessee runs through signals against the Citadel and Southern California, other member of this week's "Big Five," takes on subpar Stanford, there will be dangerous collisions elsewhere on the gridiron map. Michigan's comeback try against Minnesota will draw 60,000 into the Wolverine stadium; unbeaten Dartmouth will seek a "Big Three' clean sweep against Princeton, and Tulane will stack its power plays and 200-pound lines against Alabama in the Southeastern Conference headliner.

From a half-punt formation, which means you can cut and run if necessary, herewith this corner's forecasts for the morrow (probable attendance figures in parentheses):

Heelfly Beats Conde Rico by 2 Lengths at Pimlico Track

Nedayr, Stablemate, Runs Third

Victor Pays $3.90 And Show Players Are Paid $2.60; $2.40 for Place

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Nov. 10—Heelfly, one of the worst post actors in recent years, seems to have forgotten his bad ways at the barrier and is now concentrating all his energy on running. Racing in the colors of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, the young man who puts on the show for the Maryland Jockey Club, Heelfly gave his second consecutive winning exhibition here by taking the Grayson purse, $2,500 added feature, named in memory of the late Admiral Cary T. Grayson.

Isador Bieber's Conde Rico, a 6-year-old, which once raced in South America, was second, two lengths behind Heelfly, while Nadayr, a stablemate of the winner, finished in third position in the field of seven.

Heelfly, was the winner of a mile and a sixteenth race early in the meeting and, with Nedayr as some insurance, the crowd of 9,000 poured in the dough on the chances of the Vanderbilt entry at a mile and a half. When the result was official a price of $3.90 was posted on the win end. The show players were happy, too, for the entry paid $2.60 in the third hole, 20 cents more than was paid to place.

This was only the second running of the event and Heelfly scampered around the track in 2:33 3-5, one second and a fifth faster than did High Velocity last year. The victory was the fourth in 22 starts this year for Heelfly. Mrs. Grayson presented the trophy, emblematic of the triumph, to Vanderbilt.

The race was all Heelfly. Jockey Eddie Arcaro took him to the front in the opening furlong and he was not seriously threatened at any time. Conde Rico and Nedayr assumed second and third positions early and they held them to the end. There was a lot of hustling and bustling in the rear of the field that had nothing to do with the final resul.

Trainer Dion E. Kerr, Washingtonian and one time gentleman jockey, made the daily double a personal proposition. In the first race he saddled Mrs. D. C. Sands' Port Wales and the Prince of Wales colt drove home ahead of Granicus and Pimlico Queen to return a $12 mutuel. In the second race, Kerr sent Mrs. Kerr's True Call after the purse and the filly came romping home at a $6.40 mutuel. It was the "6 and 8" combination.

WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, FAST.

FIRST RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 1:22. Off 1:26½. Winner, Mrs. D. C. Sands' br. c. (2), by Prince of Wales—Port Weather. Trained by D. K. Kerr. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:14.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PORT WALES, $12.00, $6.50, $4.20; GRANICUS, $4.30, $3.00; PIMLICO QUEEN, $3.70.

PORT WALES, sent to contending position between horses, gained gradually on PIMLICO QUEEN, took command when placed to drive entering stretch and drew out nicely. GRANICUS, in close quarters going to turn, came with good energy in closing test. PIMLICO QUEEN, rushed to front at once, opened a long lead and weakened gradually after being caught. WINDSOR CHIEF was hard ridden and faltered in final eighth. UPRISING closed with good courage. STREAMER had a rough early trip.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-old fillies. Start good from Puett gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 1:53. Off 1:54½. Winner, Mrs. D. K. Kerr's b. f. (2), by Trace Call—Trousseau. Trained by D. K. Kerr. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:12⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRUE CALL, $6.40, $3.70, $3.00; SUN PATTY, $4.20, $3.00; BRIGHT VIEW, $3.90.

TRUE CALL, hustled into lead and then rated, saved ground under good handling and drew out approaching end. SUN PATTY, slowest to begin, improved position steadily after leaving backstretch, but was no match for winner. BRIGHT VIEW, keen forward factor in early stages, tired gradually in final quarter. MISTLETOE was not vigorously handled in early stages, saved ground entering stretch and closed gamely. YARNITH was well placed for 3 furlongs and stopped. QUATREDOM could not keep up.

Daily Double, PORT WALES and TRUE CALL, Paid $31.90.

THIRD RACE—Two miles. Purse, $1,000; steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:12½. Off 2:22. Winner, Elizabeth C. Bosley's b. g. (4), by Gallant Fox—Emma Helen. Trained by E. C. Bosley. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 4:02⅘. (15 jumps.)

Horses	Jockeys	Wt.	Post	St.	5	10	15	Str.	Fin.	Straight
LONE GALLANT	(Penrod)	140	4	4	1¹	1½	1½	1h	1¹	$8.05

HOP	(Jones)	147	2	1	2½½	†				.95

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LONE GALLANT, $18.10, $5.20, out; SPINACH, $3.30, out.

LONE GALLANT, taking command early, fenced well while withstanding challenge of LITTLE DAN and held SPINACH safe in closing stages while winning easily. SPINACH, taken under strong restraint during first mile, was moving up when LITTLE DAN rider in front of him, was taken up sharply and could not reach LONE GALLANT while under intermittent punishment for final half mile. LITTLE DAN was going in good fashion when he lost rider at eleventh fence. HOP lost rider at eighth fence.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,200. The Strolling Player Handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Puett gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:51½. Off 2:52. Winner, E. R. Bradley's b. c. (3), by Black Servant—Beach Talk. Trained by W. Hurley. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:45.

BATTER	(J. Renick)	110	2	5	1h	3½½	5nk	8	8	17.15

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIG PEBBLE, $3.70, $2.80, $2.20; FOXSHADE, $6.80, $3.70; PHARA BELLE, $3.40.

BIG PEBBLE, much the best, was steadied along in first flight for half, took command when asked and drew out to win easily. FOXSHADE, allowed to settle into best stride, came willingly when placed to pressure and closed gamely. PHARA BELLE raced BATTER into submission to get to front, but weakened through stretch. ESCALADE was bumped off stride by BATTER at first turn and went evenly thereafter. FELSUN closed with good energy. SPIN ON was through early. BATTER bulled way to lead at first turn and stopped after 5 furlongs.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,300. The My Own. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate for all but Phara Frost. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:19. Off 3:20. Winner, Tall Trees Stable's ch. g. (5), by Haste—Curiosity Shop. Trained by Leo O'Donnell. Value to winner, $950; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:46⅘.

Horses	Jockeys	Wt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
SCROOGE	(Wallace)	103	1	1	1½	1½	1½½	1¹	1¹	$1.55

PHARA FROST	(Johnson)	106	2	4	4	4	4	4	4	1.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SCROOGE, $5.10, $2.90, out; GERALD, $5.00, out; ETOLIA II, out.

SCROOGE, first away, set pace under mild restraint, shook off GERALD approaching stretch and drew out to win with speed in reserve. GERALD was hard ridden to hold forward position and weakened in final eighth. ETOLIA II came willingly at close. PHARA FROST dwelt in starting gate, made up ground in first half and failed to rally.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $2,500 added. The Grayson Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:46. Off 3:46½. Winner, Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt's b. or br. h. (5), by Royal Ford—Canfli. Trained by L. McCoy. Net value to winner, $2,605; second, $500; third, $250; fourth, $125. Time, 2:33⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HEELFLY (entry), $3.90, $2.40, $2.60; CONDE RICO, $3.80, $3.40; NEDAYR (entry), $2.60.

HEELFLY, sent to front in opening furlong, was steadied along while setting pace and was not seriously threatened while kept to hand ride. CONDE RICO, under heavy restraint while closest to pace for mile, could not get to pacemaker when placed to drive. NEDAYR was carried wide turning into stretch the first time and went evenly thereafter. FILISTEO could not keep up in opening half and rallied mildly. HOSTILITY was held safe throughout. UPSTREAM and BROWN KNIGHT were outclassed.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:28½. Off 4:30. Winner, E. A. Stone's b. c. (3), by Fair Wind—Vanish. Trained by Q. Jackson. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:44⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AIR WIN, $23.60, $12.20, $8.00; SMOKE SIGNAL, $19.60, $15.50; SUN PLUME, $5.00.

AIR WIN, allowed to settle into best stride and rated for half, came wide for racing room, responded gamely when shaken up and was up in concluding strides. SMOKE SIGNAL displaced CHERACHIN as the pacemaker midway of backstretch, opened a good lead and closed gamely, but could not resist winner. SUN PLUME, well placed from start, moved up menacingly approaching stretch and weakened. CONVILLE badly outrun for half, improved position boldly thereafter. DOROTHY ROCK was roughed about going to first turn, moved up and then faltered. THE THRUSH improved position in opening half and tired. GHOSTFLYER had early speed and stopped. CHERACHIN set early pace and stopped badly. DARK SUN had good speed for a half.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:57½. Off 5:00. Winner, J. W. Y. Martin's b. f. (3), by Ladkin—Annie Rooney. Trained by F. A. Bonsal, jr. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:56⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ANNIKIN, $11.20, $6.90, $5.10; FRANK BROOKE, $9.00, $6.40; TWO ACES, $5.50.

ANNIKIN worked way to contention on inside, took command approaching stretch and came with good energy under pressure. FRANK BROOKE was hustled to front going to first turn, shook off MISS TROY after a half and fought it out willingly to close. TWO ACES, a trailer for a half, circled leaders boldly and closed full of run to just miss getting up. ELLABEE moved up with rush leaving backstretch and tired thereafter. FREDALVA, off slowly, moved up gamely after a half and flattened out when put to punishment. BROWN LIGHT was prominent for a half. MISS TROY forced pace for half and quit. BOLO was prominent for half, faltered and was pulled up very lame.

Dear Al:

The Maryland Jockey Club will celebrate Armistice Day by offering an all-star program headed by the third running of the $5,000 Ritchie Handicap, three-quarter mile sprint, for 3-year-olds and upward. A turn-out of 20,000 is looked for by General Manager Matt Daiger. All races will be started out of the Puett stall gate, which horsemen say is the tonic that racing has needed for years. The Ritchie, run in memory of the late Gov. Alfred C. Ritchie, has attracted a smart band of sprinters. First run in 1937, the Ritchie has been won by A. J. Joyner's High Fleet and Mrs

By Bill Burnett

A short but spirited reproduction of the scholastic "riot" which caused cancellation of the 1934 interhigh football series was staged yesterday at Western Stadium, as the host club ground out a 13-0 decision over Eastern.

Less than a minute of the crucial intersectional clash remained when Jake Hilleary, Western quarterback, broke through the Eastern line for the gain that precipitated hostilities. He was brought down by Bob Pieri, of the Lincoln Parkers, but apparently in a manner for which Hilleary cared not at all. The pair tangled, teammates rushed into the free-for-all with fists swinging, and the crowd of about 2,500 spilled onto the playing field.

Police Clear Field

Unlike the '34 fracas, however, the gridiron was cleared by two policemen and game officials in less than a minute and the game, which had but two plays to go, resumed. Hilleary, Roddy Snow and Jack Xanten, all of Western, left the game, though Pieri remained.

Except for the flare-up which, incidentally, was witnessed by Birch Bayh, head of the department of health and physical education and the official brought to the school system by the 1934 battle, the 2,500 spectators were treated to a nip-and-tuck engagement with neither team holding a material advantage.

Western's pair of touchdowns were the results of a 54-yard advance soon after the opening whistle and a 45-yard aerial, Ray Wrenn to Carmel Nance, shortly before the last-minute uprising. With the victory the Raiders clung to their west section deadlock for the lead with Central. At the same time the defeat failed to cost Eastern its east division lead, Anacostia, second-place eastern team, also having been beaten.

Punt Sets Up Score

It was a punt by Eddie Teague, Tide halfback, that set up Western's first score, but it was the Raiders' husky George Barnes that made it a reality. Standing back of his own 46, Teague's kick slid off the side of his foot and a strong wind pushed it out of bounds after only a 7-yard trip to Western's 47. Barnes picked up 8 and Hilleary made it a first down on Eastern's 41. Another 6-yard plunge by Barnes was followe dwith two unsuccessful passes from the triple-threater, and then a good one, to Herrlein on the 15. From there it was Barnes for 6, Herrlein for 3 and Barnes over from the 6-yard stripe.

Three times Western tried for the extra point, finally making it good when Barnes carried it over. Both other efforts were called back with both teams off sides.

The fourth quarter was a scant minute old when Western's fanciest scoring effort was launched. Taking Teague's kick from behind his goal on Eastern's 37, Western started hurling all over the field. Barnes to Herrlein was incomplete, and Eddie Iglesias to Snow was the same. Barnes inserted a 5-yard gain through the line, but on fourth down Wrenn, a converted back, faded back from the 32 to the 45 and dropped a neat package in the waiting arms of Nance, standing over the goal. Eastern's safety man, Paul Cohill, waved his arms futilely at the ball. This time the extra point, a placement attempted by Xanten, was so low it hit Eastern's charging forwards on the knees.

Beyond the two Raider scoring efforts and the abbreviated "riot" the feature of the game was Eastern's three inadequate charges on the Western goal. Early in the second quarter a series of three first downs, bringing the ball from midfield to Western's 14 was nullified by a bad pass from Center DeMeglio. It cost 18 yards and throttled that attack. In the third period Eastern came on again, this time from its own 46, picking up four firsts to the Western 16. One of three passes by Buddy Yocum which were intercepted stopped that rush, Xanten returning the ball to the 20.

Unbeaten and Untied, They Boldly Challenge Slippery Rock

The New Britain (Conn.) Teachers College seeks greater gridiron glory by challenging Slippery Rock (Pa.) Teachers to a postseason "Brains Bowl" game. The New Britain team is not only unbeaten and untied, but unscored on. Hoyas Held 5-2 Favorite To Beat Terps

10,000 Expected for 6th Renewal of Series At Griffith Stadium

Maryland player, lest it be Mearle DuVall, and DuVall may play only a few minutes today and not at all if his injured leg is troublesome.

In every way but coaching and uniforms Georgetown appears vastly superior to Maryland. But try and get even ten points and Maryland. Those odds are rarely found when the Hoyas and the Terps get together.

There has been only one doubt this week in the mind of Jack Hagerty, the Georgetown coach, whenever he thought of the game with Maryland. That is the mental condition of his players. He has noted a tendency among some of them to take Maryland lightly and concentrate on next week's important engagement with New York University which wil mean much to Georgetown in national reputation.

If the Georgetown team goes out on the field and plays 60 minutes of alert and aggressive football then it should win, Hagerty reasons, and if it doesn't play at top speed all the way it will have only itself to blame for anything that might happen.

Maryland, as it did last year, is openly predicting a victory over Georgetown. The players are keyed to a point of frenzy. They have been pointing for Georgetown since the whistle that ended their 1938 defeat and they sincerely believe they are ready and able to win today's game.

As far as physical shape is concerned, both Maryland and Georgetown are close to peak. DuVall, the Terps' sensational sophomore passer and a good all-around halfback, is the only doubtful player of any consequence. Even though DuVall's doctor pronounced him fit to play Wednesday, Coach Frank Dobson has said he will not use him unless weather and all other conditions are favorable. Moreover, Dobson has said DuVall would be withdrawn from the game at the first moment it appears his injury has been aggravated, and it easily could be every time he is tackled low.

Georgetown's probable first lineup is a combination of players who have been regulars all season and players who only recently have displaced regulars by better performance. Of the Georgetown lineup that started the opener with Temple, only five have retained their positions. Three are backs—Quarterback Joe McFadden and Halfbacks Jules Koshlap and Lou Ghecas. The others are Center Al Matuza and End Kopcik.

Maryland's line-up, as announced officially last night, is much the same as it has been all season. The honorary captains for the game are both ends, both local boys and graduates of Washington high schools—Francis Daly (Georgetown) and Francis Beamer (Maryland).

N. T. S. Defeated By Woodberry

Special Dispatch to The Post

Woodberry Forest, Va. Nov. 10 (AP).—The Woodberry Forest Reserves came from behind in the last half here today to down National Training School, of Washington, 13-7.

The visitors opened the scoring in the second period when a sustained march against the Woodberry third string ended in a touchdown on a cleverly executed reverse.

Beginning the second half the Orange team's second string opened up an offensive which quickly produced a score when Dart circled right end to cross the goal line standing up. The winning touchdown came in the last quarter when Cassell, of Woodberry, recovered a fumble in the Trainers end zone.

Kay Dulin Named Cage President

The D. C. Recreation Department has elected Kay Dulin, president of its girls basketball leagues, for the coming season. Pat Haley was named vice president and Helen Mills secretary-treasurer.

It was decided at the meeting to divide the Recreation league into three sections; a junior, a recreational and a governmental. Eighteen teams were represented at the meeting.

Maryville Teachers Win 17th Victory, but Won't Talk 'Bowl'

Suggestion Made That They Play New Britain Teachers in 'Brain' Bowl Contest

By the Associated Press

Maryville, Mo., Nov. 10.—Maryville Teachers won their seventeenth consecutive football game today, defeating Kirksville, Mo., 19 to 13, but the school wasn't quite ready to talk about a Bowl game.

A suggestion that Maryville play the undefeated, unscored upon New Britain, Conn., Teachers in a "Brain Bowl" game brought an offer from the St. Joseph (Mo.) Chamber of Commerce to sponsor the clash. Coach Jim Kaiser, of New Britain, had said his team was "open for a postseason game.

Dean J. W. Jones, of Maryville, said tonight: "We wil be in a receptive mood if we beat Waarrensburg Teachers next week."

Until then, the school will keep its fingers crossed. Maryville hasn't lost a game since the middle of the 1937 season.

Slippery Rock Accepts Challenge

Slippery Rock, Pa., Nov. 10 (AP).—Members of the undefeated Slippery Rock Teachers football team are willing to meet the Maryville (Mo.) Teachers and the New Britain (Conn.) Teachers in a "brain bowl" or a football game, Coach N. Kerr Thompson said tonight.

"I don't know enough about the proposals for the "brain bowl" contest to make a final commitment," said Thompson, "but I believe our boys are as smart in the classroom as any others."

The "grain bowl" proposal came from the St. Joseph (Mo.) Chamber of Commerce.

Slippery Rock has won six games this season.

Noted Setters And Pointers In Field Trials

20th Annual Event To Be Held Monday At Camp Lee

By the Associated Press

Petersburg, Va., Nov. 10.—Some of the best pointers and setters in the eastern section of the country will compete for Virginia's highest amateur field trial awards in the twentieth annual renewal of the Virginia Amateur Field Trial Association's tests at Camp Lee Monday.

The Derby Stake, for setters and pointers whelped on or before January 1, 1938, will open the program Monday morning at 7 o'clock and will be followed by the all-age stake in which the best dogs in Virginia, North and South Carolina, Maryland and other sections will compete. Unless there is an exceptionally heavy entry list the trials should be competed Tuesday afternoon.

Entries for both events close today and should be filed with John B. Cary, secretary, P. O. Box 301, Richmond.

Drawings for the two stakes will be held at Hotel Petersburg Sunday night, and the annual election of officers will be held the following night.

Judges for the trials will be Horace Lytle, of Dayton, Ohio, and C. B. Stickley, of Vaucluse.

DiMaggio Applies For Marriage License

San Francisco, Nov. 10 (INS).—Joe DiMaggio, the star center fielder of the New York Yankees, and his pretty bride-to-be, Dorothy Arnold, today filed their application for a marriage license at San Francisco city hall.

DiMaggio gave his name as Joe Paul DiMaggia, jr., and gave his age as 24. DiMaggia told the marriage license clerk he was a baseball player.

Catholic U. Defends Great Record Today

Cards Meet Little St. Anselin Today On Boston Field

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, Nov. 10.—Catholic University, boasting one of the few remaining Eastern elevens with undefeated and untied records, goes into its eighth games of the season tomorrow afternoon at Fenway Park, facing the small but rugged team of St. Anselm, winner of two of its four games to date.

A forecast of frigid weather failed to worry Coach Dutch Bergman, of the Cardinals, as much as the fact that the Hawks plan to "shoot the works" in an effort to score what would be their biggest upset of the season. So far their only victories have come over Northeastern and Lowell Textile, and they were turned back rather abruptly by both Boston College and American Intelligence.

The fact that this will be the only major college tiff in the city tomorrow presages a crowd of at least 15,000. Catholic University will, of course, rate as the odds-on favorite, but St. Anselm's Coach Cleo O'Donnell claims approximately the same aggregation which went through its 1938 schedule without a loss. O'Donnell confidently looks for his Hawks to start rolling with a vengeance at any time, possibly against the Cards.

Main factor in the Hawks' offensive will probably be Ray McLean, the Saint quarterback, whom observers have named one of the best in the New England States. Against his dizzy dashes, which have amassed most of the team's points, Catholic University will throw another speedster, Charley Moutenot. Then, too, Bergman has well-tested ground gainers in Rocco Pirro, Hank Brostek and Pete Sachon. The latter four, incidentally, will probably start as the Cardinals desperately attempt to keep their record unmarred.

The reserve problem will bother Coach Gergman not all, the squad which he brought along including six ends, five tackles, five guards and three centers and 12 backs.

Stanford, Southern Cal. Clash in New Sport

Los Angeles, Nov. 10 (AP).—Teams from the universities of Southern California and Stanford will stage something new in varsity competition tomorrow.

Trojan and Indian fliers will compete in target hitting with sandbags, spot landings in a 50-foot space, balloon bursting and paper strafing.

Anacostians Surprised by Lowly Riders

26-6 Victory Is First in Inter-High Competition Since 1937 for Uptowners

Roosevelt High discarded its accustomed role of interhigh doormat long enough to put on a dazzling display of power yesterday to overwhelm Anacostia, 26-6, at Eastern Stadium.

As 2,000 spectators looked on, first in amusement but later in amazement, the big Rough Riders, geared to razor-edge efficiency for this one game, compiled an 8-0 lead at the end of the first quarter and capitalized on two intercepted passes to convert them into as many touchdowns to garner their final margin of victory.

The triumph was Roosevelt's first in interhigh competition since the opening of the 1937 series when it scored a 6-0 victory over Wilson. In fact, it was Roosevelt's largest score since moving to its Upshur street quarters and even as far back as 1928 when the Riders played under the name of Business.

Score Early Safety

Roosevelt surprised the Indians in the opening minute of play and gave Anacostia an inkling of what was to come in future quarters when Danny Boothe, brilliant Rider captain, tackled Joe Farmer in the end zone after a kick by Bernice Kolker had backed the Indians under their own goal, thus giving the eventual winners a safety and two-point lead which they never relinquished.

Art Faircloth, Anacostia's "one-man gang," went into action with his bullet-like heaves at this juncture, but Bob Beck, tall Rider end, intercepted one of his behind-the-line passes to give Roosevelt the ball on the Indians' 12, and on first down Billy Hall streaked off tackle for the score. Wicklein's attempted rush for the extra point failed.

The surprising Riders continued in the second quarter when, with the aid of a 15-yard roughing penalty, they marched 42 yards to the 3-yard line and from here Kolker, 185-pound halfback, plunger over through center. Metzler's rush for the conversion failed.

Takes to the Air

With the Rough Riders holding a 14-0 lead and the Roosevelt side of the cheering section resembling a jitterbug's mass meeting, Anacostia finally took to the air to score its lone touchdown in the same quarter. Starting from the Roosevelt 45, Farmer whipped two long aerials to Faircloth to place the ball on the 15 and then threw one to George Absher, an end. Absher dropped the ball for what seemed like an incomplete pass. Umpire Farrell, however, ruled interference by Metzler on the play, and the Indians were given new life on the Roosevelt 2. Faircloth plunged through center for the touchdown. His attempted rush was wide.

Two intercepted passes paved the way for Roosevelt's final markers in the fourth quarter. Previous to this, however, a bit of fisticuffs resulted when Irwin Breir, tiny Rider back, became involved in an argument with three Anacostia players. Breier was banished from the game.

First Interception

The first interception was accomplished by Les Wicklein, who set himself in front of one of Faircloth's passes to give his team possession on the Anacostia 32. Kolker, Wicklein and Hall all sparked a running attack which culminated only when Wicklein plunged over for the score. Kolker's attempted placement was wide.

Roosevelt's final touchdown came when Danny Boothe literally picked the ball out of Farmer's hands and raced unmolested for 35 yards and the touchdown. Wicklein's placement failed.

Hunting Club Starts Inquiry

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Nov. 10.—The North American Rod and Gun Club, second largest sportsmen's organization in Maryland, is going to inquire into lack of enforcement of the fish and game laws in Washington County.

Informed some months ago by a State game warden that "no funds are available" for a second full-time warden, which is provided for in the recently enacted law, the ire of the North American Club members rose this week when it was found that many of the pheasants of the club had put out for the hunting season, which opens November 15, had already been shot. Members reported that hunters have been shooting rabbits on the outskirts of Hagerstown for several weeks and no game warden had put in an appearance. The county has but one full-time warden, which the sportsmen contend is not enough enforcement for so large a county.

Brown Favored Over Yale First Time Since 1932

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 10 (AP).—Brown, victory-starved in the bowl, was given a good chance tonight to take Yale's revamped football team for the first time since 1932 tomorrow.

Yale's mental attitude in the face of Ducky Pond's outburst early this week in which he said the team "was the worst I've ever coached," was looked upon as a major factor in deciding the outcome.

Brown, seeking its first major victory of the season, and the sons of Eli took turns in working out in the bowl and confining their activities to light drills.

Landon Prep Defeated, 2-0, By St. Alban's

Bob Le Fevre Sets Up Winning Margin In Opening Period

An ill-advised effort to advance along the ground from its own 1-yard stripe cost Landon Prep a 2-0 decision yesterday at St. Alban's field, the alert Saints taking their second consecutive victory over their annual rivals.

Bob LeFevre, halfback who kept the Landoners at bay all afternoon with lengthy and timely kicks, set up the winning points when he kicked from midfield in the opening quarter. The ball rolled off the field on Landon's 1-yard marker. Instead of returning the kick, Quarterback Amussen elected to rush, and the Saints' Denit rushed in to tackle Ben McKelway in his tracks.

Except for the lapse that lost the game, Landon, which has been tied three times in six games this season, furnished the most serious bids. In the fourth quarter a 60-yard march brought the ball to the 6-inch line, but there it was lost on downs. Several long passes, Johnny Sager to Paul Baker, also gave the Landon club numerous chances to score, but the punch was lacking.

Terps Beat Towson, 4-1

The University of Maryland's soccer team threw the Maryland State Intercollegiate race into a three-way tie yesterday by dealing the Towson Teachers their first defeat in three years, 4-1, at College Park.

Chester Ernst was Maryland's star yesterday, scoring two goals himself and proved the defensive standout throughout the tilt. The other two Maryland scores were made by Schroeder and Tierney, the latter a sub for Tilley at outside right.

Towson's lone goal was scored in the third period, a long succession of dribbles and passes down the field resulting in Thompson's boot through the uprights.

Champions Beat Wilson Easily, 47-0

Porter's 60-Yard Run Is Feature Of Runaway Game At C. H. S. Stadium

Almost every substitute on the Central High bench saw action yesterday at Central Stadium as the 1938 interhigh champ turned back Woodrow Wilson by the most one-sided score of the interhigh series to date, 47-0.

As anticipated the Presidents, against whom Central scored twice last year on the first two running plays of the game, had no chance whatever against the precision and power of the Mount Pleasanters. Four backs and an end participated in the wild fray, the high scores being Jim Porter, who turned in the first two touchdowns of the game, and John Bredbenner, each with 12 points.

Minus their heavy and efficient center, Jacfl Wilhelm, co-captain, who was forced out with a neck infection, the devastating champions functioned brilliantly, rolling over the inexperienced newcomers to interhigh circles just as they pleased.

Even Beunny Steiner, All-High quarterback, who had missed less than two minutes of Central's six games to this point, was relegated to the sidelines for the last three periods to avoid possible injury and give second-stringers a chance to show their wares.

The only time Central scored in the first period was on a 12-yard dash by Porter. Steiner converted. In the second quarter it was another dash by Porter, playing his last year of ball, that chalked up six points. He twisted through the whole Wilson team on his 45-yard effort. Sam Di Blasi missed that placement, and also his next attempt after Bredbenner had plunger from the 5 for the next score.

Baugh Won't Start Against Dodgers

Redskins To Revamp Strategy

Filchock-Todd Combination Will Carry Locals' Hopes in Brooklyn

Sammy Baugh will be withheld from the starting line-up when the Redskins take the fold against the Dodgers at Brooklyn tomorrow, Coach Ray Flaherty indicated yesterday.

Flaherty last week departed from custom and started Baugh against Philadelphia, but he offered an explanation for that strategy.

"The field had been covered before the game and was fairly dry at the start, but it was getting wetter by the minute. I wanted Baugh in there before we started floundering around too much. But if it's a dry field Sunday, Sammy probably won't play until the second quarter."

Thus the team of Frankie Filchock and Dick Todd will be depended upon to acquire a lead for the Redskins in the opening period. The pair has functioned well from the start of the season. Filchock combines ball-carrying duties with his passes, and with Todd comprises a more versatile pair than the Baugh-Farkas combination, which will follow them into the game.

Flaherty's strategy of last week brought dividends, incidentally. The Redskins scored the winning touchdown in the first 4 minutes on a pass by Baugh before the muddy condition of the field stalled their attack.

The Redskins are being driven by day and lectured by night as the battle with the Dodgers approaches. It is another game that the Redskins can scarcely afford to lose, inasmuch as the Giants are meeting the lowly Chicago Cardinals. A defeat for the Redskins tomorrow will doubtless cost them their share of the Eastern division lead.

Flaherty has been attempting all week to drive home to his athletes the danger of a defeat by the Dodgers. He has demanded that they toss out of the reckoning the 41-13 victory scored over the Dodgers last month, pointing out that Brooklyn is a vastly improved team. "Any team with Ace Parker in its backfield is dangerous," declared Flaherty.

Georgetown Frosh Down U. Md. Cubs

the fourth down McLaughlin fired a short pass to Engle, who made a fine catch in the end zone despite being covered closely by Maryland's Lou Checas.

Take to Air Again

Early in the fourth quarter the Hoya cubs took to the air for their second touchdown after a march of 66 yards. The drive started on the Georgetown 34, where a Maryland scoring threat had been stopped. Kull, a New Briton, Conn., boy, and one of the Georgetown stars of game, ran to a first down on the G. U. 45, and after Dorfield, another big Georgetown backfield hero, circled end to the Maryland 48, Kull dropped back to pass But instead of passing he fought his way through several Maryland tacklers and nearly got away, being dropped on the 32 after a 16-yard jaunt.

After Maryland's fast-charging forwards smeared two line thrusts, Kull cocked his arm once more and connected with Quarterback Barrett on the 21. An unnecessary roughness penalty against Maryland moved the ball to the 6 and after a running play had lost 2 yards, Kull floated a pass to Barrett in the end zone for the score. Barrett's placement attempt for point was wide.

Two Serious Threats

Maryland made only two serious threats to the Georgetown goal line. The first was the result of a Georgetown fumble in the first period which gave the Terps the ball on the Hoya 27. The boble was recovered by Seward. A 15-yard penalty against Georgetown placed the ball on the 12, but even then Maryland could make no headway and at the end of four downs had lost back to the 23, where Georgetown took possession on downs.

The Terrapins' second and final threat started from their own 35 immediately after the kickoff after touchdown. Checas and Gilmore, co-stars of the Maryland backfield, smashed through the line for a pair of first downs, the first on the Maryland 48 and the second on the Georgetown 37. Here the drive faltered and Gilmore, the outstanding punter on the field, booted one out on the Georgetown 5-yard line.

Martinsburg High Students Petition Return of Baseball

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 10.—High school authorities here received a petition signed by about 100 students asking that baseball not only be restored as a sport here, but be accorded emphasis equaling that of football, track and basketball.

Many of those signing the petition, Principal Edwin W. Miller said, are boys who participate in other athletics at school now, but were mainly those not in other sports who want a chance to earn their school letter in sport.

The petitioners propose to have all indulging in the sport to furnish their own equipment, at least for the first year, the school providing only the balls and bats. The team would also provide its own transportation to other towns for games during the season.

Lexington Has Record Grid Crowd

Colorful Throng Ready To Help Celebrate V. M. I. Centennial

A Staff Correspondent.

Lexington, Va., Nov. 10.—The vanguard of the biggest crowd to invade Lexington, since Gen. Hunter's "damyankees" burned down Virginia Military Institute, took over the town today and made merry at Washington and Lee's homecoming game with the University of Virginia.

Everybody was there—that is, everybody but the "streamlined squad" of V. M. I. Forgotten for the moment, the institute's football lads are down on their field running through a grim practice as final preparation for their battle with the Blue Devils of Duke University here tomorrow.

The air is heavy with celebration, for tomorrow marks the 100th birthday of V. M. I. The Keydets are determined to give their second hundred years a glorious inaugural with a victory over the powerful North Carolina eleven.

Coach Pooley Hubert's squad will be in the best physical shape of the two when they take the field at W. & L.'s Wilson Stadium at 2:30 p. m., despite the fact that his boys went through a severe strain last week in their 0-to-0 tie with the Richmond Spiders.

Wallace Wade's Duke eleven still feels the effects of its bitterly fought 7-to-6 victory over Georgia Tech.

A dsitinguished array of alumni and visitors sat in the stands today. Most of them arrived to take part in the centenial day observance of the "West Point of the South" tomrrow.

Gov. James H. Price of Virginia, Gov. Homer Holt of West Virginia, Senator Carter Glass of Virginia and numerous other members of the Old Dominion Congressional delegation sat in the stands as Washington and Lee bowed to the Cavaliers of Virginia.

Washington and Lee's homecoming celebration will merge into V. M. I.'s birthday observance tonight following their homecoming dance and the institute's formal centennial hop.

At 12:50 a. m. a 21-gun salute will be fired heralding the arrival of the school whose cadets went out to New Market in 1864 and stormed the Yankee strongholds until their objective was gained.

Tomorrow will find them fighting for another objective, and perhaps gaining it over a tired Duke eleven. Spirit is at a low ebb, as far as hopes for a victory are concerned. The Keydets are giving out with only a tight-lipped "Wait and see" attitude."

Facilities of the playing fields of the two local stadia have been combined—that is, V. M. I.'s steel bleacher seats have been moved to Wilson Stadium to accommodate a crowd of more than 12,000. The whole town's sold out, nobody's going to bed because there aren't enough to go around.

A consignment of 800 crappies have been released in the Potomac near Williamsport, and 1,000 will be freed in the creek near Security next week.

Ohio State To Run Over Chicago Today

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP).—Ohio State's burly Buckeyes, leading the Big Ten race with three wins and no defeats, will roll against Chicago's undermanned Maroons tomorrow at Stagg Field.

The Maroons, badly trounced in their last three games with Harvard, Michigan and Virginia, will be without the services of several regulars, among them Fullback Bob Howard. Chicago's lone chance of harrassing the strong Buckeys apparently lies in the passing of Lou Letts and receiving ability of Dick Lounsbury, lanky end.

Penn State 'B' Ties Middie Jayvees, 6-6

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Nov. 10.—Penn State's B squad football team tied Navy's Jayvee today, 6-6, on a last-minute touchdown pass.

With the teams evenily matched, the Middies jumped into the lead shortly after the opening kickoff. After an exchange of plays and kicks had thrust the Lions back on their own 8-yard line, Bob O'Donnell, Navy End, blocke the attempted punt and Navy took possession. Claude Shaw went through the line for the score, and Ben Blue missed the placement.

For the next two periods, the Middies, who have won all their games this year, kept their goal line virgin. In the second quarter, Penn State had a chance when a series of plays put them on Navy's 4, but Sam Kopach's pass across the line was incomplete.

Navy played it safe until the last five minutes of the game when an exchange of punts put Penn State on Navy's 40. A set of reverse plays put the visitors on Navy's 20, then Kopach passed to Dan Robb, Penn State sub, who took the ball on the 5 and cut through three tacklers for the touchdown. Ben Pollock missed his try for the point.

Passes flew thick for the rest of the game but most of them were intercepted. The Lions tried a field goal from midfield but all the desperate tricks failed to break the tie.

Marines Play Du Pont Eleven

Quantico, Va., Nov. 10.—Crippled but determined to score a third consecutive victory, the Quantico Marine football squad today got set for an Armistice Day game here with a team from the Dupont Community Center Athletic Club tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Despite a number of injuries, all the Leathrneck regulars are expected to be ready to start in the tilt. But two much-needed reserves are out for the season.

The latter group includes "Babe" Miceli, quarterback with a broken ankle, and "Father" Miele, tackle, who is suffering from a bad knee.

"Jeep" Maitland, end, who was the only regular missing last week, is back in shape now and probably will be in tomorrow's starting line-up.

Also ready to go will be Al Hora, Everett Aikman and Jimmy Falzone—regular backs who suffered minor injuries in last Sunday's "mud battle" with Fort Myer Cavalrymen.

Game Canceled

Defiance, Ohio, Nov. 12 (AP).—Defiance College announced today that the Defiance-Mount St. Mary's, Michigan, football game, scheduled for Saturday at St. Marys, Mich., had been canceled at the request of St. Mary's because of injuries suffered by its players in earlier games.

W. & J., of Rose Bowl Fame, Makes Good Despite Pure Policy

By the Associated Press

Washington, Pa., Nov. 10.—Little Washington and Jefferson's Presidents, once the gridiron terrors of the college loops but now the purest of the simon pures, still are hobnobbing around with the best—in their own class.

The 152-year-old school—in whose ivy-clad halls freshmen mention in awed tones the names of the great "Fats" Henry, Bill Amos and the Rose Bowl team of 1922—climbed down from the football band wagon in the early 30's.

The occasion was the advent of a new youthful president, Ralph C. Hutchison, who gave the bulging subsidization balloon a healthy stab with a de-emphasis pin. Soon after his arrival, W. and J. broke off the old ties with Pitt and other gridiron elite.

But until last Saturday the Presidents were unbeaten this season, and then only a 2-point loss to Akron marred the record. Victims—of a different caliber from those of the balmy days of the 20's—included Muskingum, Geneva, Wooster, Dickinson and Bethany (W. Va.).

Coach George Roark, who took over three years ago, said today he'd "like to get the best material" but he's content with boys from a 50-mile radius.

On his squad of 31, 8 never played in high school and the star halfback, George Hall, of Midland, Pa., never ventured upon a gridiron until last season, his junior year in college.

More than a half dozen work for their board and room, a few have alumni support and some have academic scholarships as the result of outstanding grades in high school. None receive aid from college funds because that is forbidden under the de-emphasis policy.

The Radio Worshop:

McKinley Pupils to Broadcast A Program of Young America

100 Tech Boys and Girls to Present Interviews, Skits, Music and a Playlet, 'Campbell of Kilmhor,' at 7 Tonight

This is McKinley High School's night on the air. The pupils will show Washington their idea of a real radio program—one with the flavor of young America.

The program is the second in a series of Student Radio Work Shop programs, sponsored by the District schools, The Washington Post and Station WJSV.

They are presented over that station each Saturday from 7 to 7:30 p. m. Now 100 Tech boys and girls will present original skits, interviews, music and a playlet.

It will be distinctively Tech throughout. The school is offering a new course called distributive occupations. What this means will be explained in a skit.

In this, the performers will be: James Bigham, Gene Starr, Carolyn Galahucci, Anna Bates, Evelyn Carpenter, and Marjorie McTuary, with the assistance of faculty advisers, Miss R. C. Bartlett and Miss Elizabeth Morrow.

From the home economics group, several pupils will give an interview and skit on preparing high school pupils for adult life. Appearing will be Edna Gilbert, Nettie Gorman and Herman Meeks, assisted by Mrs. Elsie Gummer, faculty advisor.

A historical playlet, "Campbell of Kilmhor," will be given by Roberta Kells, Sarah Jane Williams, Richard Tryon, Barnett Broughton, Richard Whittaker and Joseph Amos. Mrs. Ada Coe will direct.

There will be musical interludes. "Winter Song" will be given by the boys' chorus of 30 members, and "Dawn" and "Lord's Prayer" by the girls' chorus of 50 voices, both directed by H. Nicodemus. The boys' quartet, George Uher, Arthur Newsome, Walter Stephenson and William Haas, will sing "Jerusalem Morning."

Big Corn Crop Will Call for Acreage Cut

Federal Estimate as of November 1 Puts Crop At 2.591 Billion Bus.

By the Associated Press

An official estimate yesterday that the United States corn crop would total 2,591,000,000 bushels made it virtually certain, Federal farm officials said, that growers in the Midwestern corn belt would be asked to reduce next year's plantings about 10 per cent.

The corn estimate, made by the Agriculture Department's crop reporting board on the basis of conditions on November 1, was 48,825,000 bushels larger than its forecast of a month ago. A crop of this size is 2 per cent larger than the 1938 production of 2,542,238,000 bushels and 12 per cent larger than the 10-year (1928-37) average of 2,309,674,000 bushels.

There already is a surplus of 561,000,000 bushels from previous years.

Planting to Be Announced

Officials said that to avoid accumulating additional surpluses, a smaller crop next year would be necessary. Excessive supplies, they said, unduly depress prices. The corn planting goal probably will be announced next week. Farmers cooperating by reducing their seedings will be eligible for benefit payments and loans on their surpluses.

The planting program may be accompanied by a loan under which growers could store unneeded supplies of this year's corn for possible higher prices in the future. The loan rate is expected to be between 57 and 61 cents a bushel.

The crop board said that the total acreage of all crops harvested this year was between 3 and 4 per cent less than the total last year and lower than in any recent season except the drought years, 1934 and 1936. Playing a part in this reduced acreage, officials said, were New Deal programs restricting production of such crops as cotton, wheat, rice, corn, peanuts and potatoes.

However, heavy reserves from previous years coupled with high per acre yields this season, have filled the Nation's warehouses, elevators and cribs with ample supplies of most crops. Yields per acre now seem likely, the board said, to average slightly higher than last year and substantially higher than in any other recent year.

Wheat Rally Lifts Prices 1 to 1⅜ Cents

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 10.—A strong rally of wheat prices today enabled the market to regain most of the ground lost in Thursday's slide that accompanied rain in the hard winter wheat belt.

Early losses of ⅝ to ¾ cent were wiped out, and gains of more than a cent chalked up when prices rose about 2 cents above the lows established in the first few minutes of trading. Closing quotations were 1 to 1⅜ higher than yesterday with December at 88⅛ to 88¼ and May at 86⅜ to 86½.

Prospects of clearing weather in the domestic Southwest, realization that what rain was received was inadequate and in many cases late, and reports of good European demand for Canadian wheat stimulated the recovery movement. "Short" interests hastened to even up accounts, as many did not wish to risk the two-day holiday ahead in view of the European situation.

Corn closed ⅜ to ⅝ higher, December, 50½; May 52⅝ to 52⅞. Oats, ⅛ to ¼ up. Rye, ⅝ to 1 cent up. Soy beans, 1½ to 2 cents higher. Lard 12 to 18 cents higher.

Foreign Exchange

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—The Belga broke one-third of a cent in terms of the dollar today as overseas selling orders hammered the Belgian money to the lowest price since 1933. The rush to exchange belgas for American dollars apparently centered in Brussels, but apprehension in many European capitals mounted over possible German violation of the neutrality of Holland and Belgium.

Retail Trade Rises to Peak For This Year

Volume of Sales Put At 10 to 17 Per Cent Above Year Ago

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 10.—Retail trade, buoyed by a spurt of buying on Election Day, brought this week's volume to a new peak for the season, Dun & Bradstreet said today in a weekly survey.

"The year-to-year improvement in trade," the agency said, "estimated between 10 to [illegible] per cent, was the largest recorded by any week this year.

"Favorable weather apparently played a decisive role in results, although merchants have pointed out recently that buying shows less sensitivity to weather changes than is usual at this period of the year.

"Retailers were cheered by the fact that broad sales increases over last year were obtained, for the most part, with less promotional effort. Customers continued to incline toward better grades of merchandise.

"This tendency, along with the institution of fewer markdowns, and a slight advance in the level of prices, was said to be accounting for a significantly higher average sales check.

"A rising sales trend for luxury goods, such as jewelry and furs, and for durable goods, such as electrical equipment and automobiles was also frequently mentioned as an outstanding development of favorable significance.

French Auto Firm Fights Chrysler Deal With Spain

Madrid, Nov. 10 (AP).—A goodly share of the Spanish automobile market for next year today was guaranteed to the Chrysler Corporation, which has an assembly plant here, still in the hands of military authorities.

It was reliably learned that the government has awarded the American firm a contract to permit to sell 5,000 trucks and 1,000 passenger cars—which must be, respectively, 60 and 20 per cent made of Spanish materials—in the Spanish retail market. Delivery of the first 1,000 trucks must be completed by February 1, and the remainder by June 1.

The Spanish government's proposal to give the Chrysler Corporation a concession for marketing a large number of cars and trucks in the Spanish retail market was challenged today by the Andre Citroen Corporation, French automobile manufacturers.

As Chrysler representatives awaited formal signing of the contract which would permit the American company to sell 5,000 trucks and 1,000 passenger cars next year, the French firm sought to have the government reconsider the transaction.

This request was made in connection with conversations here and in Paris looking to the restoration of Franco-Spanish trade relations "to a sound prewar basis."

Railroads Handle Peak Freight Rise Without a Jam

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP).—J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, said today that the railroads of the United States had handled "without congestion or serious car shortage the most precipitious increase in freight traffic on record."

"With the cooperation of shippers and receivers of freight bringing about the prompt loading and unloading of cars," he told the annual fall meeting of member roads, "the railroads have met this demand without difficulty."

In the week ended October 21, Pelley reported, loadings of revenue freight totaled 861,198 cars, the highest for any week since 1930. He added that there has been a constant climb in freight traffic since mid-July.

Compared with the August average, the total for the week of October 21 was an increase of 28 per cent, described by Pelley as "the greatest increase in loading on record in such a short period of time."

"The railroads this year are expected to place in service or have on order a total of about 300 new locomotives," Pelley said. "The railroads in the first nine months put in service 45 new steam locomotives and 157 new electric and Diesel locomotives."

'Earmarked' Gold Drops $79,516,467

The Commerce Department reported yesterday that gold imports in October declined to $69,740,336, compared with $326,088,889 in September. The decline apparently was due to the difficulties of war shipments and the restrictions placed on capital movements by mots European governments.

Also during the month, the department said, gold held under earmark by foreign governments and central banks in the Federal reserve banks in this country declined $79,516,467 to $1,176,458,000. The gold taken out of earmark, as well as the gold shipped into the country, presumably was sold to the United States Treasury.

Moderate Upturn Follows Early Weakness Prices End Week at Lowest for 8 Weeks Bond Market Narrow and Generally Lower

New York, Nov. 10.—Mild rallying tendencies developed in the stock market late today after early weakness but the plus signs which most of the leaders carried could not be regarded as significant. The mild upturn, which measured a tenth of a point according to the composite average, was entirely too meager to be regarded as anything more than a technical rebound after the irregular downward course of the last few weeks. Trading was moderate amounting to 1,094,390 shares.

The small advance today was the only gain made during the week for the four trading days, which is all this week has contained because of the election and Armistice holidays. The decline totaled 1.33 points. This carried the list to its lowest point of the last eight weeks, or, in other words, to the lowest point since the beginning of the September mark-up which accompanied the declaration of war.

Business News Good

Throughout this period the indices of business have been all that the most bullish trader could ask, but the fact remains that the market has refused to go ahead. Various reasons can be cited for this. There is doubt as to how long the present wave of good business will last; there is doubt as to what the orders from the belligerents will amount to; there is a realization that a war of the proportions of the present European struggle is certain to upset our present economy; and there is the knowledge of the weakness of our own position, with the mounting debt and no successful cure yet worked out by the Administration for the unemployment problem.

It is doubtful if many traders take into consideration all of these problems when they are deciding what to do in the stock market. One thing which they do observe, however, is the character of leadership, and that has been of the poorest type recently. It was the case today, when a small technical rebound gave the list a majority of plus signs.

There was a good advance a week ago today when final action was taken by Congress lifting the embargo on munitions shipments to the belligerents. Every day since that time the speculative favorites have been the so-called cats and dogs, namely the lowest priced shares, which invariably appeal to the uninformed.

Curtiss-Wright Again Leads

Curtiss-Wright was the most active stock today, adding a fraction. Next came Electric Boat, which has hardly been heard from since the days of the previous European war. It was carried up 1¼ points to a new high and, of course, the assumption was that it would be the recipient of profitable war orders. It does no good to suggest to those who step into such situations that it might be wise to see what the orders amount to and what may be the profits thereon.

The comeback today was most marked in the war stocks, which had borne the brunt of Thursday's late break, notably the aviations and the steels. Republic recovered a small fraction and Bethlehem a point, while United States Steel was lower, but well above its worst. Aviation Corporation, North American Aviation, Bendix and United Aircraft made small gains.

Week-end news included the usual report on automobile production, as estimated by Ward's, which showed that virtually all plants except Chrysler are operating at their highest 1939 levels. Stocks are being increased only slowly, however, indicating a good demand.

Bond Market Dull

Little business was done in the listed bond market today, and prices drifted lower in almost all departments. United States Treasury and best corporate bonds moved off fractionally. Speculative issues were dull throughout and failed to rally even when stocks displayed a better tone. Dealings amounted to $6,750,000.

Losses in long-term issues of United States Treasury bonds ranged to ⅜ point, with some selling occasioned by fears that portfolio changes on the part of the Federal Reserve may suggest larger variations hereafter. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were idle and lower. Best-rated utility, railroad and industrial liens were depressed a little, but the variations remained small.

Speculative railroad bonds slowly sank under small offerings and a lack of buying interest. Boston & Maine bonds were subjected to some profit-taking, but the previous run-up was modified only a little. Holding company and convertible bonds drifted downard with the majority.

Belgian, Scandinavian and other European neutral bonds were marked downward, but the losses ranged only from fractions to a point, and apparently were much smaller than London declines in similar issues. Canadian and Australian bonds were idle and irregular. Default bonds of both European and Latin American origin failed to attract buyers.

Fifth District Store Sales 4% Above Year Ago

Richmond, Va., Nov. 10 (AP).—The Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported today that Fifth District department store sales in October were 4 per cent than in October, 1938, and that total sales for the first ten months of this year were 4 per cent greater than in the corresponding period of last year.

Percentage increases by States for the month and for the ten-month period were: Virginia, 1.8, and 3.4; West Virginia, 5.4 and 3.2; North Carolina, 2.5 and 7.3; South Carolina, 4.5 and 13.8.

Among the cities, Lynchburg, Va., had a decrease of 3.9 for the month and an increase of 4.0 for the ten-month period. Winston-Salem, N. C., had a decrease of 1.9 for the month and an increase of 4.2 for the ten-month period.

Increases among other cities in the district were Baltimore, Md., 8.1 and 2.6; Charleston, S. C., 4.0 and 21.3; Charleston, W. Va., 9.3 and 3.1; Huntington, W. Va., 8.9 and 8.5; Norfolk, Va., 2.1 and 5.3; Richmond, Va., 2.5 and 3.0; Washington, D. C., 1.1 and 4.5.

Farm Cooperatives Do 2 Billion Business

The Farm Credit Administration reported yesterday that the 10,700 farmers' marketing and purchasing cooperatives in the Nation did a $2,000,000,000 business during the 1938-39 marketing season.

Tom G. Stitts, chief of the cooperative research division, said the dollar volume was somewhat under the previous season due to the fact that farm products price levels had declined 21 per cent and farm supply prices about 8 per cent.

Weston to Retire Class A

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Western Electrical Instrument Co., Newark, has called for repayment January 1 the outstanding class "A" stock at $37.50 a share plus accrued dividends. There were outstanding 13,688 shares after a similar amount had been redeemed last July.

War Hits Exports Of U. S. Leaf Tobacco

The European war's adverse effect on exports of leaf tobacco from the United States was reflected yesterday by a Department of Commerce report showing a drop of approximately $30,000,000 in the value of such exports during the first nine months of this year.

The estimated value of 1939 leaf exports up to October 1 was $61,317,485, exclusive of $11,960,910 in exports of manufactured tobacco products. During the first nine months of 1938, exports were valued at $103,715,516, consisting of $92,821,662, leaf and $10,893,854 in manufactured products, while for the first nine months of 1937, leaf exports were valued at $71,385,398 and manufactured products at $10,405,281.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 9.—Amsterdam favorites posted the widest declines in a lower stock market today. Actual selling pressure was small, but in view of latest developments in the Netherlands, prices were marked down sharply all along the line. British government bonds shared the general weakness and industrial leaders retreated. Commodity stocks followed the main market trend downward.

Paris.—The bourse developed considerable resistance to an opening selling flurry today. As activity picked up, many domestic equities crossed to the plus side, while foreign shares moved irregularly. Rentes closed 5 to 260 centimes higher.

Amsterdam.—The nervousness that has generated increased military activity in Holland spilled over into the bourse today, where prices were weak throughout. Slight rallying efforts met with little success and closing prices for domestic and foreign shares were near the day's bottoms.

World Markets Close for Armistice

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Armistice Day in the United States and remembrance day in Canada will be generally observed in those countries tomorrow by security and comodity exchanges. The holiday, falling as it does on a Saturday, will produce the most complete world-wide financial shutdown in recent years, with the exception of Christmas and New Year's Day. The Amsterdam bourse will occupy the financial spotlight tomorrow. The London money market and Liverpool produce exchange also will be opened.

November 11 in England is not a bank holiday but normal as well as war-time Saturday suspension of business will close the London Stock Exchange, Liverpool cotton and other markets. The Paris bourse will be closed.

Colgate Votes Extra Dividend, Workers Bonus

Company Also Will Redeem 30,000 Shares Of 6% Preferred

New York, Nov. 10.—E. H. Little, president of the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., announced that an extra dividend of 50 cents on each share of common stock of the company was voted at the regular meeting of the board of directors held in Jersey City today. The extra, payable December 15, to stockholders of record November 21, is in addition to the regular annual dividend of 50 cents per common share voted at previous directors' meetings. This makes a total dividend payment on common stock for 1939 of $1 per share, the highest annual common stock dividend paid during the past seven years.

The directors also voted a bonus of one week's pay to be paid December 15, 1939, to all of the company's employes who have served for one year or more, excepting those who are already being compensated under the executive and sales department bonus plans.

Mr. Little also announced that the directors had authorized the redemption on February 1, of 30,000 shares of its 6 per cent preferred stock at the call price of $102.50 per share, plus accrued dividends from January 1, 1940.

Western Union Turns 1938 Loss Into 1939 Profit

New York, Nov. 10 (AP).—Western Union Telegraph Co. reported today net income for the first nine months of this year of $646,870 after charges, compared with net loss of $1,548,153 for the like 1938 period. A. B. White, president, said the outbreak of the European war was followed by an increase in business which pushed the September gross revenues to $9,063,303, a sum $1,200,000 higher than the September average for the five preceding years.

Pepsi-Cola Co.

Pepsi-Cola Co. estimated consolidated net profits for the nine months ended September 30, were $4,630,000 after income taxes and depreciation but before deducting payment of $350,000 in connection with litigation recently settled. This was equal to $17.72 a share on the company's stock. For the nine months ended September 30, 1938, estimated net profits were $2,775,000.

Paramount Pictures, Inc., estimates its earnings for the September quarter at $710,000, including $377,000 undistributed earnings of nonconsolidate subsidiaries. This is equal to 17 cents a share on common stock. In the comparable period last year earnings amounted to $650,658 or 14 cents a share. The latter included $495,000 undistributed earnings and $233,000 profit on purchase of Paramount Pictures debentures. Nine months' earnings of $2,840,000, including $1,355,000 undistributed earnings, were equal to 79 cents a share on common stock. For the first nine months last year earnings totaled $1,876,469 or 40 cents a share.

Piano Production Largest in 10 Years

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP).—Piano production in October was the highest of any month in the last 10 years, the National Piano Manufacturers Association reported today. October shipments totaled 13,742 pianos, an increase of 3,049, or 28.5 per cent over the same month last year, and topped by 1,147, or 9.7 per cent, production of December, 1938, which previously was the best month since 1929.

W. A. Mennie, secretary of the association, said that all plants now were working at capacity. Unfilled orders on hand October 31 totaled 6,483, compared with 4,310 a year ago and 5,133 October 31, 1937.

Cotton Prices Rise 30 to 70 Cents a Bale

New York, Nov. 1 (AP).—Cotton futures came through a flurry of liquidation and profit-taking in fine style today, closing with gains of 6 to 14 points. The market was given a boost early by another jump at Liverpool and steady buying both from Liverpool and Bombay when this let up, however, selling kept the list sidestepping in a narrow range before renewed demand pointed prices higher again.

Brokers said the underlying bullish factors, not only in today's performance, but the buoyancy of the entire week, were announcement of a new government loan on the 1939-40 crop and official forecasts the loan would create a tight spot situation in the spring.

Adding to the difficulty of obtaining spot supplies, cotton men said, was the steady increase in exports over a year ago. Main exception is lagging Japanese demand.

Cottonseed Oil

Bleachable cottonseed oil futures responded to the higher slant in allied commodities and advanced 9 to 11 points today. Most operations were in the form of week-end evening up and in advance of Monday's consumption report.

Sales totaled 164 lots: December, 6.39 bid; January, 6.65; March, 6.84; May, 6.95.

Crude oil was quoted at 5¾ cents bid in the Southeast and Valley and 5½@5¾ in Texas.

Studebaker Deliveries Set October Record

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 10.—Retail deliveries of Studebaker passenger cars and trucks last month were the largest of any October in the history of the company, Paul G. Hoffman, president of the Studebaker Corporation, reported today. Last mont hwas the biggest retail month for the corporation since July, 1929.

"Retail demand for Studebakers expanded steadily throughout the month with the result that our deliveries for the final 10 days of October exceeded the total of any similar period for which we have records," Mr. Hoffman said.

Virginian Railway Reduces Stock Par From $100 to $25

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 10 (AP).—The Virginia Railway Co. today reduced the par value of its common and preferred stock from $100 to $25 a share by an almost unanimous vote at a special meeting of stockholders, who directed that four shares valued at $25 each be issued for every $100 share now outstanding.

Carl Bucholz, president of the Virginia Railway, said that the move was made for four reasons. They were, he said, to increase the marketability of the stock, to adjust the price of each share on the market so that it would be more attractive to the investing public, to effect a wider distribution of the public's holdings of the company's stock, and to facilitate the financing of the company's future requirements through the sale of bonds, preferred stock or common stock, whichever may be desirable.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

The devil certainly must have been at work distributing the cards of today's hand, for it brought grief to a great many players.

The hand was played at 11 tables of a duplicate game and in most cases neither side was satisfied with the result.

Twelve tricks can be won at hearts or diamonds by North and South, who are vulnerable; seven tricks at spades by East and West, who are not vulnerable. Thus, East and West have a line save against any contract of game or more as high as six.

Two North-South pairs were cheated out of a slam bonus by sacrifice bids. Other East-West players were annoyed they had not attempted a save. One North-South pair was completely swamped, insisting on taking the bid at seven diamonds and being defeated for a "bottom."

Once the ace of trump is drawn, the small slam at hearts is laydown. At spades, East-West must lose a spade, a heart, two diamonds and two clubs.

At the table where North and South ruinously extended themselves, North failed to make the "forcing pass" indicated in the bidding shown. In the box, North passed the decision to South, who would have bid seven had he held the ace of hearts instead of the ace of spades.

One pair played six hearts doubled, winning 1,430 points.

One pair doubled four spades, winning 500 points.

NUTS AND JOLTS

Seasoned Timber

By Dorothy Canfield

Chapter 49

TIMOTHY SAID sadly, "Canby's right, Mr. Dewey. We mustn't fool ourselves. There are plenty of people in Clifford who can't keep their minds on anything, let alone an abstract principle, what with the Clifford Four Corners' low-downs and the Searles Shelf wild Indians. And they all have votes."

"I don't mean just the morons," insisted Canby. "Take the solid farmers on the Other Side, with their savings-bank accounts. Would they lift a finger to defend a teacher in the constitutional right of free speech, if it happened to go against their prejudices? And they have votes, too."

"Now hold on," cried Mr. Dewey. "We've always had votes, ain't we? And what have we done with our votes for the last 170 years? The proof of the puddin'—Hasn't this town run itself since 1767 without puttin' anybody in jail for what he thought—or said either? And without anybody's rousing his neighbors up to shoot their way through what's been voted on at Town Meetin'."

The young Vermonter on the other side of Timothy's desk looked so dazed at the idea of armed revolt from a decree of Town Meeting that Timothy felt his own tense face relax in a smile.

"Anyhow," concluded Mr. Dewey, "the point ain't how many votes we can get."

"It's not?" exclaimed Canby in the sincerest surprise. "Why, what is the point, then?"

"Nobody's bound to get folks to do what he thinks is the right way. All that's laid on a man is not to let up on trying to."

Canby looked blank, took in the astonishing, rather indecorous fact that a moral principle had been seriously stated, not from a platform, but in private conversation, blinked, looked embarrassed, looked amused, and said "Oh—" so dryly, with an intonation so openly mocking that to cover it up Timothy broke in hastily, "We're miles off our track anyhow. Let's get back to that intelligent point Burt brought up—about not wanting a great many Jews at the Academy. You're right, Burt. It would be a mistake to have a great many of any kind of student with a background markedly different from our Clifford life. But you are mistaken in thinking that to stand up for American principles and refuse this bequest would mean we would have a lot of students different from what we have now. Why should it? We would probably go on having just about as many Jewish students as now. Some, once in a while. Why not?

"Listen, Burt." He waited till the boy looked up at him. "If we don't take this money all that will happen is that Clifford will keep on for the next century just the way it has for the last 100 years—running its school the way it thinks it ought to be run, not the way somebody with a lot of money and very different ideas from ours wants it run. It'll mean that when we're old folks we can look back on our lives and think that we had a chance to prove whether we meant anything when we claimed to be free Americans, or whether it was just talk. And we proved we really did mean what we said. I'd be proud to have that on my tombstone. Wouldn't you?"

HE HAD BEEN able at last to distill the thing he had to say into that plain simplicity which alone was worthy of it. The boy looked across the table at him steadily, searching Timothy's face deeply with his honest eyes. What did he see there? In the silence Timothy felt something pass between them that he had not put into words.

The trained instinct of the experienced teacher told him that this was enough for now. He looked at his watch, said, "There's half an hour gone in talk," reached into a drawer for some sheets of paper, passed them over the desk to Burt, opened the letter-file and began to take out pamphlets from it. "Let's get at your news item. After all, it's facts not opinions the Record wants from you. Got a pencil? Now I'll read the lawyer's letter aloud slowly so we can all get it."

By the end of another half hour, the news item was written, stuffed with facts, dates, and figures so uninteresting to Aunt Lavinia that she dropped off in her chair, snoring lightly, her mouth a little open. Canby had fallen back on the pillows of the couch and lay smoking, his eyes fixed meditatively on the ceiling. When, finally, Timothy gathered up the loose sheets and said, "Here, I'll read it aloud, and we can hear how it sounds," Canby sat up to listen; not meditatively at all, but alertly.

"Just 'Special to the Record,' Prof. Hulme. They always have you put that in when it's not the regular column of local news. I didn't write it very good, I guess, but I'll have to copy it on the typewriter anyhow."

". . . didn't write it very plainly," murmured the principal, and went on, "A letter from New York City brings news of the sudden death of one of the trustees of Clifford Academy, Mr. George Clarence Wheaton, and of a clause of his will stating that on fulfillment of certain conditions, the Academy will receive a bequest from Mr. Wheaton's estate.

"In the 118 years of the academy's history, two other gifts have been proposed to it. The first was in 1820, when 15 leading citizens of town founded it with contributions totaling nearly $20,000, with the purpose as stated in the character of 'providing an education for young men which will make them better citizens of a free country, more capable of defending and handing down intact the American principles of liberty of conscience, independence and freedom, which our fathers won for us in the War of the American Revolution.' By the provisions of the charter, the academy was to be directed by three trustees, elected by the voters of Clifford, two months after a vacancy had been created by the death or resignation of one of the three.

"At the beginning, the academy was for boys only, as was then customary. The second gift was made in 1867 by the will of John Crandall, one of those Vermont farmers who in the second quarter of the nineteenth century made a fortune out of breeding fine Merino sheep and selling them to Australian ranches. He was childless, his wife had long been dead, and he left all that he had amassed ($40,000) to the academy, stating in his will that the gift was unconditional, 'since I do not consider myself superior in intelligence to the trustees of the academy or to my fellow citizens who elect them, but in the hope that female students as well as male may hereafter receive the benefits of education there, it being my opinion that the exclusion of some members of a community from opportunities enjoyed by others is not to the best interests of all.' After a period of several years, during which preparation was made for the change, this wish of Mr. Crandall's was realized by the admission to the academy in 1870 of 'female students' as they were then called.

"MR. WHEATON'S will exacts as the condition of its bequest that the academy bind itself never to admit a student of Jewish blood—Jewish being defined as a person with any Jewish relatives—and that the name be changed in his honor from the Clifford Academy to the George Wheaton Preparatory School. This conditional bequest is for $1,000,000. If the trustees accept this condition and the bequest, $200,000 will be added for buildings. Other conditions laid down are that the tuition fee for day students be considerably raised—with a specific provision for scholarships for such needy local students as may be unable to pay this increased fee, and that dormitories be built and boarding students added to the student body, the annual fee for such students to be not less than $1,000 per year. A quarter of a million more, either for buildings or endowments, is offered if girls are excluded from the student body, but this is not made a condition for securing the bequest. This last clause was in accordance with an idea that Mr. Wheaton often expressed in conversation that families from the higher-income brackets would be more likely to send their sons as students to the academy if they were not obliged to associate with girls in classes, and with his conviction that students from families with larger incomes should be secured for the academy.

"Mr. Wheaton's fortune was founded in the carpet industry. He was born in 1876 in Mosher, Mo. As a young man he left the North Dakota town where his father was then in business, and went to Chicago, where he secured a position as salesman in the carpet department of a department store. With a partner, who had been one of his fellow salesmen and who provided the capital, he started, eight years after this, a small carpet-manufacturing business in Michigan, which grew rapidly. Differences of opinion arising with his partner, Mr. Wheaton, after 15 years as a manufacturer, withdrew his entire capital from manufacturing and moved to New York City where he engaged in trading in stocks on Wall Street, where his large fortune was made.

"He was married in 1888 to Ellen Delia Pratt, who had been in school with him in North Dakota. They were divorced in 1918. In the same year he married Lou Mae Burnette, of New York City, from whom he secured a divorce the year following. It is believed that he had two children by his first marriage, but they had long been estranged, and are not known to Clifford people.

"Mr. Wheaton in his boyhood had made several summer visits to his grandmother, Mrs. Kent (widow of Oliver Kent who ran the old gristmill on Hagars Brook). Mr. and Mrs. Kent had one daughter, who went to Mosher, Mo., to teach school and there met and married Mr. Wheaton, whose father was in the merchandising business of that town. In 1923, passing through town on a motoring trip, Mr. Wheaton expressed considerable interest at finding Clifford so little changed since his boyhood. He returned the following year, and spent several weeks in town. In 1925 he bought the old Walter S. Hurd place which he had made over into a commodious and handsome residence, although his important business interest gave him little leisure to occupy it and he was seldom seen in Clifford. On the death of Charles J. Merrill, in July 1929, Mr. Wheaton proposed his name as candidate for the position of trustee in Mr. Merrill's place, and in August of that year he was elected."

CANBY, WHO HAD several times smiled broadly during the reading, and once laughed out loud, lay down again on the cot, staring at the ceiling and bringing his lower lip up over the other thoughtfully.

"Well, Burt," said Timothy, laying the paper down, "I bet that item'll bring you in as much as the accident in the woolen mill."

"Do you suppose," asked Burt, very casually, "that they'll put headlines to it?"

"Yes, I rather think they will."

The boy's dignity allowed him no verbal expression of pleasure, but his mouth widened in a quickly repressed smile. He asked earnestly, 'Say, Prof. Hulme, do you think I'd get anywhere if I tried to work on a newspaper when I get out of the 'cademy? I know I'm not much good in English class."

"English classes haven't much to do with writing for a newspaper, Burt. I don't know why you should not, if you'd like to. Want to type this out here, on my machine?" asked Timothy.

"I'd do better on the one I'm used to down at the telegraph office," said Burt, and departed. But he stood for a moment in the doorway, hesitating, and turned back to say, "Listen, Prof. Hulme, now I've—ah—had time to think about it some—why—ah—I—ah—see your point all right. Sure."

Timothy and Mr. Dewey both spoke at once. "Good for you, Burt!" exclaimed Timothy. Mr. Dewey cried exultantly, "I knew it! I knew anybody with Hard blood in him wa'n't a-goin' to go against his principles for money. Good-gosh-to-the-mountain! I'm glad to have you say that. Now there's three of us, anyhow."

The blood had come up warmly into the boy's face at his elders' praise. "You bet! There are three of us all right," he said proudly, and turned away.

Aunt Lavinia woke up, called, "Wait a minute, Burt. Help me get down the stairs to my room, will you?"

THE THREE MEN waited for some moments in silence till the front door closed. Then Canby murmured, "Well, if anybody was ever put through the third degree, it's that kid. Even to twisting the lion's tail and waving the bloody shirt. What'd you say, Uncle Tim, if the Fascists got out the steamroller like that?"

"They will," said Timothy; "never fear."

In the room below them Aunt Lavinia, by no means going on with her nap, put on her music-machine a noisy record from Carmen with the volume well turned on.

"She would!" said Canby impatiently, and raised his voice to go on, 'But all the same you're going to get the shellacking of your life, Uncle Tim, on this. You evidently don't know the difference there is between high principles and what gets done in the real world. I never dreamed anybody would so much as try to take sweetness-and-light out of its safe nook and lead it into the ring to face money! Honest, it never crossed my mind before that anybody imagined all that Fourth of July talk was real."

"As real as cash, I suppose you mean, Canby."

"You bet your life that's what I mean," he said quickly with some exasperation, going on then in his usual manner, "Don't get me wrong. I don't say I like the way things go in real life. You got me conditioned—I guess it was you—something did—so I don't like it. In fact, it's what I'm here in Clifford taking a vacation from. But I know what you don't know, that that's the way 'tis and it can't be no 'tiser. I've been there, see, while you've stayed on here conditioning other kids not to like it. Like it? They've got to lump it. After you stop being a kid, you got to take it—unless you're a teacher. Or a woman. Not a business woman either, I don't mean."

"Or a Boy Scout leader," suggested Timothy.

"No. They don't really believe what they tell the kids. They can't. It's not their fault, any more'n the law of gravity's their fault."
